In the second half, Mashpee looked like the team that everyone was expecting them to be. Within the first five minutes of this half, Mashpee was able to double their lead from 10 to 20. At this point the game was basically over for the Skippers, as the closest they came to Mashpee's point total was 12.

Although it was a disappointing loss, Cohasset was looking forward to its final game last night (Feb. 15) at home against Holbrook, the team they beat in their season opener.

Community MVP Awards

The New England Patriots are currently accepting nominations for the 2007 Community MVP Awards program.

The Community MVP Awards honor individuals who exemplify leadership, dedication and a commitment to improving the communities in which they live through volunteerism. Through the program, nonprofit organizations throughout New England have the opportunity to reward their hard-working volunteers for the invaluable time and support they provide to their communities.

There will be 21 winners chosen and grants ranging between $1,500 and $10,000 will be awarded to the nonprofit organization for which each honoree volunteers. In 2006, the New England Patriots Charitable Foundation donated more than $50,000 to local organizations. Mid Coast Health Net, a free health and dental clinic in Rockport, Maine, received $10,000 in the name of Dr. Paul Klainer, the 2006 overall winner.

New England residents who are 13 years of age or older who provide volunteer services for nonprofit 501(c)(3) or 509 organizations are eligible for nomination. Only one nominee may be considered from each organization. The strongest applicants will be hands-on volunteers and may not receive any compensation, monetary or otherwise, for their efforts.

Nonprofit organizations may nominate volunteers by completing the application found at www.patriots.com/community. Forms must be received by March 16.

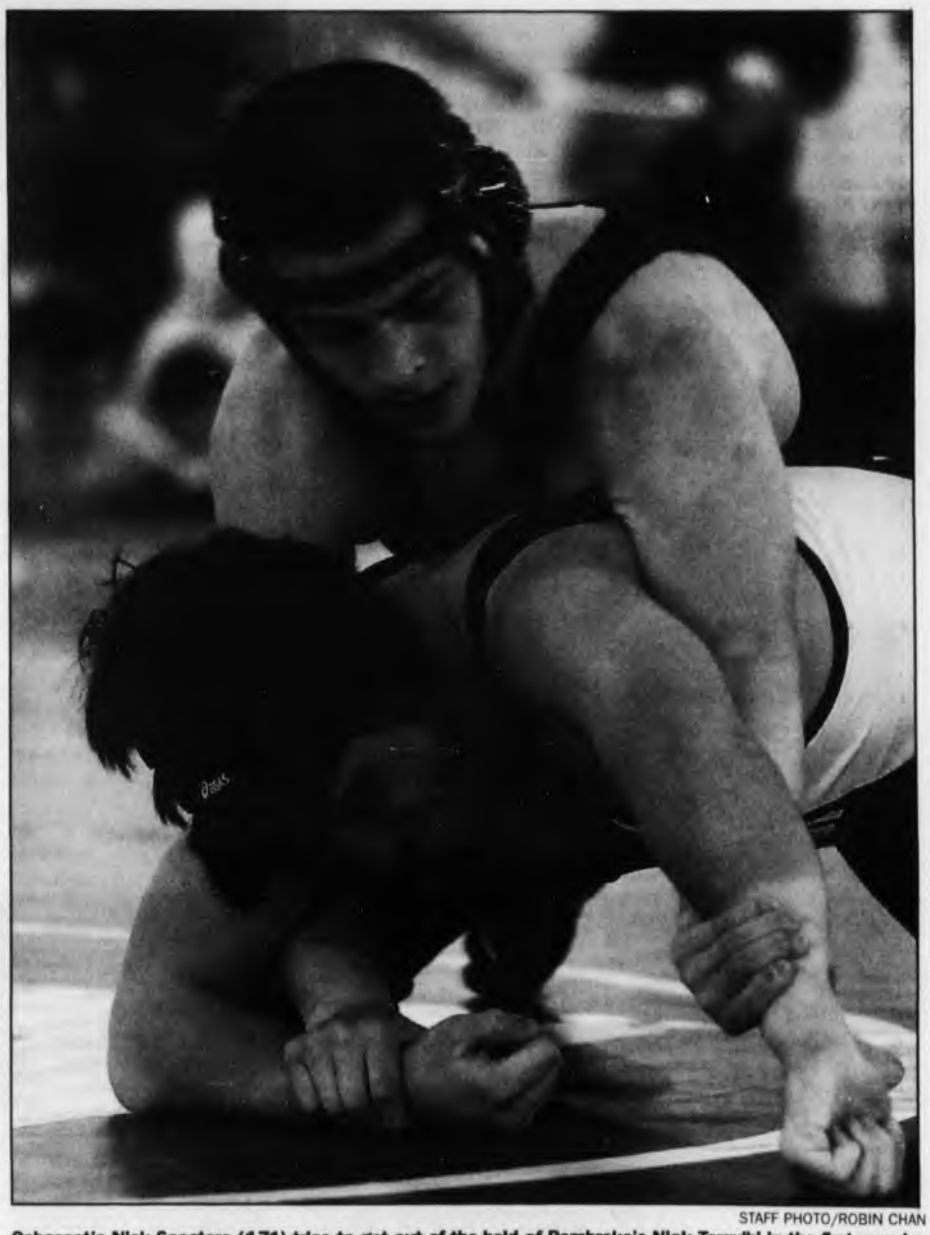
pionship at 189. McLellan also won it at 119; there were 15 other schools involved in the tournament.



Smith was runner-up at 145, losing the championship to a talented wrestler from Pembroke. Dorion (152) and Hurlbut (215) both took third place, while Toomey and his older brother, Tim (160), finished fourth.

Cambi, McLellan, Smith, Dorion, Hurlbut and the Toomeys are all guaranteed to compete at this weekend's state meet, being held today (Feb. 16) and tomorrow at Wayland High School. Sophomore Rudy Helbock, who finished fifth at sectionals, will also make the trip as an alternate.

The top six in each weight class at Wayland will move on to All-States, being held on the 23rd and 24th at Salem High School.

Getting back to the sectionals, freshman Jack Murphy had a solid tournament, finishing sixth in a tough 112-pound division. Gratta, sophomore Andrew Liberty (135), freshman Mike Dorion (140) and junior Nick Secatore (171) all won one match in their respective weight classes. For Liberty, it was his first varsity win.

As for the team tournament, the winner of Wednesday's Rockland-Cohasset match will take on the winner of the Hingham-Pembroke match in the Div. 3 South final. The Skippers faced Rockland during the regular season and lost by just five points, setting up what should be a very competitive contest on Wednesday.

COHASSET YOUTH BASKETBALL

5th grade Travel B rallies to topple Scituate in a shootout

This contest was a gun slinging shootout from start to finish with several lead changes and an outcome hanging in the balance down to the final possession. Scituate came out firing and went ahead 15 seconds into the match and didn't look back. With lightning quick passes and great ball control, Scituate ran up an 8-0 lead before Timmy "Jackpot" Cavanaro drained Cohasset's first points of the game to get his team on the scoreboard.

Cavanaro followed up with a trip to the line where he dropped in a rim dribbler to narrow the lead. Overall, Cavanaro hit triple 7's in points scored, offensive rebounds and defensive rebounds for a very productive game.

But the stroke of the night belonged to Mark "MJ" Rattenbury who couldn't miss from Anywhere, USA. Mark's six first half points brought his team right back into this game that included well timed jump shots and crafty drives down the lane with lay-ups on both sides of the basket. Rattenbury ended the night with a team-leading eight points to keep his team close all night.

Zach Coggins was instrumental in setting up some key points and had another strong performance on both ends of the court with four points and a handful of steals to disrupt the Scituate offense. Cohasset battled through a slow start and erased the eight point deficit to lead at the half 11-10.

The arsenals remained loaded on both sides of Cohasset Harbor to keep the fans on the edge of their aluminum grandstand seats for the entire second half. Ryan McKeon led his troops down the court on many occasions only to disappear in the sea of Scituate blue and magically reappear behind the hoop to release a pass or drive to the basket. McKeon filled every column on the score-sheet with production everywhere.

Jack Stanganelli had his weapons drawn on both ends of the court with some close chances on offense, chasing down loose balls and frustrating Scituate's attack all night long. Doug Fitzgerald was well armed on defense and had many close shots spin off the rim. Jack Leffel had several near misses as well, but maintained a strong presence down low to make Scituate earn every point.

But after multiple lead changes in the final minutes of play, Cohasset's man in the middle rose up for the call to duty. Scituate had control of the ball and a 24-23 lead with less than four minutes left in the game when the heart rates began to rise. As both clubs traded a few turnovers, the clock winded down to 1:12 left when EricWeinstein fired the shot heard from Beechwood to Black Rock.

Nestled in the corner with defenders on all sides, Weinstein launched a cruise missile from way back that tickled the laces to put Cohasset ahead by one, 25-24. Scituate fired right back but came up short with 35 seconds showing on the clock when Cavanaro snatched his 14th rebound of the night.

But Scituate wouldn't let go and immediately came up with a key turnover to give them a chance at a game winning shot with 11 seconds left. Scituate's quick in-bound pass set up the final shot of the night. The ball made its way to hoop but rolled right to fall within the reach of a well positioned McKeon to run out the clock and seal the win for Cohasset's soldiers of fortune.

Cohasset @ Bridgewater - Patriot League

The Grade 7 boys took on the second place Bridgewater team on Sunday. The boys submitted an outstanding performance in a losing effort, 44-42. The boys held the lead for most of the game, and if not for some good outside shooting by the Bridgewater guards, the Cohasset boys would have pulled off an impressive upset.

The boys started strong in this game, as they opened an early12-4 lead. Jay Salerno was on fire, popping open and draining his patented jump shot from the corner. Defensively, Christian Allard, Pat Kearney, Kyrel Jaundoo and Chris Lunde pressured Bridgewater all over the floor, as they played with great energy. Their swarming led to turnovers and transition baskets by Jaundoo, Allard, and Kearney.

Chris Murphy and Rob Mahoney played aggressive interior defense. Murphy scored on a nice move inside, and he used his quickness to get position on Bridgewater's big men. Mahoney, as always, gave a Dave Cowens-like effort as he had his way in the paint.

Bridgewater played with poise, however, and they closed the gap to one point at halftime. The second half may have been the most exciting basketball played by the seventh graders all year. There were several lead changes, and when one team appeared ready to take control, the other team countered.

The half was marked by great transition baskets, as Patrick MacCormack scored once and had four assists. He fed Salerno, Lunde and Jaundoo twice for baskets on the transition. Lunde played his best game of the year, as he was solid on defense, passed the ball well, and made a pretty jump shot off the glass from the elbow. Mahoney worked hard for openings inside as he scored and got to the free throw line.

The difference in the game was a stretch of outside shooting by Bridgewater that gave them the lead for good. They worked the ball well around the perimeter. Although Cohasset's defense was tight, the Bridgewater guards took advantage of small creases to hit four jump shots to take the lead. It also opened the inside enough to give their big men some good looks as well.

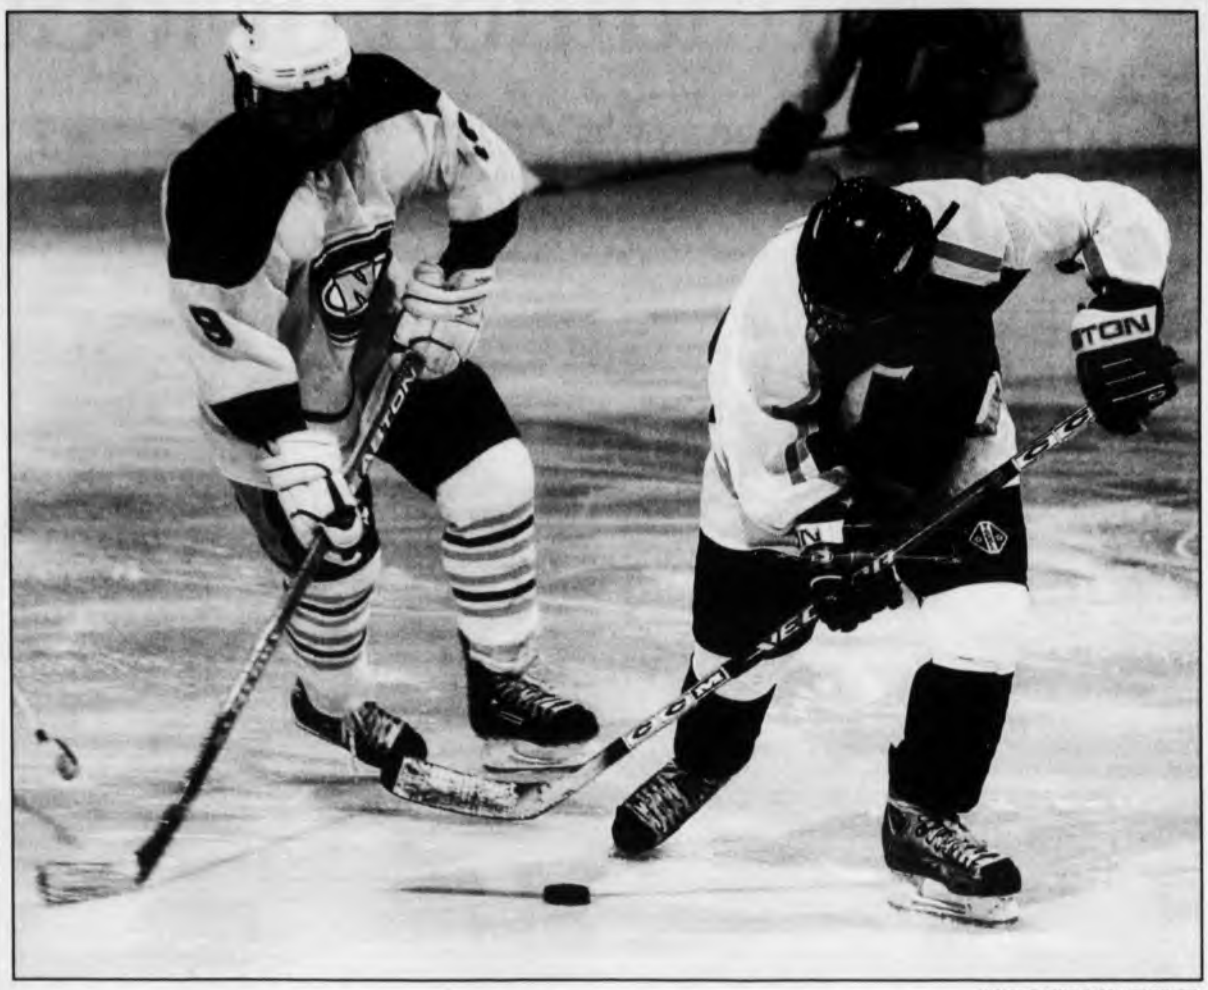
Cohasset gave themselves several chances at the end with swarming defensive stops, but Bridgewater's D was also up to the challenge.

Abington Stars League - Weymouth Air Station

The Cohasset Grade 5A boys took on the undefeated Rockland boys this past Saturday. The boys went down 25-12, but gave the powerful Rockland team all it could handle in a game that was closer than the score indicated.

Cohasset opened the scoring as Brendan O'Connell hit an open jump shot, after all players on the floor swung the ball to the open man. This focus on passing was on display all evening, as the boys have really begun to develop a team concept.

O'Connell and Mark McKenna directed traffic at the guard position, and they fed the ball down low to Joe Buckley and Mark Brown. McKenna handled Rockland's pressure defense well. Brown made several strong moves to the basket, scoring and getting to the free throw line as well. Buckley and Brown both rebounded well against the big and talented Rockland big men.



Cohasset was within 6-4 well into the first half, and they were getting some good looks at the basket. Their shots were not dropping, however, as Rockland was playing tight defense. Chris Haggerty began to look for his shot more aggressively, and scored on a jump shot from outside the key. Matthew MacCormack also took advantage of daylight as he took his smooth jumper from the elbow. He hit a key basket and showed good ball movement at the guard spot.

Rockland gradually extended their lead, but Cohasset's defensive pressure from Steven Maher, Rocco Laugelle, Dakota Achin and Conner Green made Rockland work for every shot.

In the second half, Rockland was able to maintain their lead, but Cohasset remained within striking distance. The boys showed some very encouraging signs of development as a team. They are working hard to find the open man on the court, and they are learning when to look for a teammate and when to shoot.

Haggerty, O'Connell, MacCormack, Maher, and Green all began to look for their shot more, which should mean more balanced scoring. Buckley often gave up open looks at the basket to dish off to teammates. As Buckley learns when to shoot and when to pass, he will become a real threat in the paint.

Coach Liam O'Connell felt that the boys played well, saying, "We played hard against the class of the league. We moved the ball well to get good shots, but, unfortunately, our shots just didn't drop tonight."

A tradition of local flavor

Area residents have big impact on Beanpot

By Nick French
NFRENCH@CNC.COM

It's something unique to this region. It's a place where friendships turn into rivalries and vice versa. It's the Beanpot, one of the premier college hockey tournaments in the country and the marquee event on the local sports calendar at this time of year.

This year's final gave everyone the dream matchup, Boston University and Boston College, the winners of the last 13 titles (10 of them by the Terriers), and two of the biggest rivals in all of college sports.

This year's final featured a wide array of South Shore residents on both benches, and in many cases featured friends facing off against each other.

"There are so many people we grew up playing with. We're best friends away from the rink but once we get out there it's war."
BU's Bryan Ewing

In the end it was Boston University coming through again with a 2-1 overtime victory, but there was a South Shore connection to it all.

Teammates to rivals

Monday night's final featured a pair of high school teammates, who captain their respective college squads. It's the final Beanpot for both of them.

Hingham's Brian Boyle, and Braintree's Sean Sullivan played their prep hockey at St. Sebastian's together. Monday night they faced each other one final time for all the Beanpot bragging rights. In addition BC's Joe Rooney (a Canton native) and BU's Kenny Roche (South Boston) also played at St. Sebastian's, so Monday night marked one more chapter in their lengthy history together as friends and foes.

"We've come through the ranks together, and we've played together and against each other and its been a lot of fun to see their success, but it's a lot of fun to play against them because we really give it to each other," Boyle said of his BU counterparts.

The rivalry is a spirited one when fans of the two schools come together, somewhere on Commonwealth Avenue, but when the players have such a long history together they are able to put aside the colors they wear, except on game day.

"It's friendly until the game time," Rooney said. "It's fun playing against those guys. I went to school with Brian, Sully and Roche. I was best buddies with them in high school, and now we're playing in one of the biggest rivalries in college hockey. It's exciting, and we were happy they won so we could get one more chance to win one."

Sullivan holds the bragging rights lately, winning the last two Beanpot titles.

"It's huge bragging rights, you see these guys off the ice, you see them hanging around in the summer, there's definitely something to it when you go out there, obviously you're friends off the ice but not on it," Sullivan said.

The Plymouth Connection

Plymouth boasts four residents taking part in the latest installment, two on each side. Bryan Ewing, and Steve Smolinsky suit up for BU while the Greene brothers, Justin, and Matt sport the maroon and gold for BC.

"It's funny because we played with them pretty much all of our lives, and it's a bragging rights thing. You take it seriously, when it comes down to it you just want to win, and have a little bit of bragging rights," Matt Greene said.

From Ewing's perspective, he's held the bragging rights the last two seasons, but he knows the most important one is the last one, and even though they're friends its put on hold for 60 minutes of hockey.

"There are so many people we grew up playing with. We're best friends away from the rink but once we get out there it's war. There's always jokes after the game," Ewing said.

Smolinsky played with the Greene's at BC High, but now wears the red and white, which happens to be the rival color of Catholic Memorial.

For the Greene's it's one final Beanpot together, as Justin will graduate in the spring, and when the season ends it will mark the end of a long time playing hockey together.

They were linemates at BC High, and played a lot together in Matt's freshman year, as linemates. However, Justin has one thing that Matt doesn't have, experience on a Beanpot championship team, which Justin won as a freshman.

"My freshman year when we won it, Matty was sitting across the ice in the front row, and he's got to see it and now he wants to hold it," Justin Greene said.

Both siblings are thankful to their parents for the great financial and time commitment they gave to making their children the best they could be.

"Our parents gave us the opportunity and put us in the best position, we were both on two different teams, and they would take us to all the games and practices. They definitely put in the hours," Matt Greene said.

They know the Beanpot isn't the end, and are hopeful of bigger things to come in March when the NCAA tournament begins.

"Hopefully this isn't the end of the road, but at the present time this is as big as it gets," Justin Greene said.

A dream come true

All of the local kids playing in Monday's final have had more than a passing interest in the February tournament. Nearly all of them attended the tournament as kids, and dreamed of playing on the biggest stage.

"I went to pretty much everyone growing up, looking at colleges I knew I wanted to play for a Beanpot school," Rooney said.

COURTESY PHOTOS

BU's Sean Sullivan, a Braintree native.

Plymouth's Bryan Ewing in action for BU this year.

The feeling is the same for Ewing. He originally hailed from West Virginia but soon after coming here he caught Beanpot fever, and became enthralled with the rivalry.

"I've always wanted to play in the Beanpot since I was young, and growing up on the South Shore, I've always been able to watch BC and BU and I always looked forward to playing," Ewing said.

For Sullivan the Beanpot was even more r recognizable than the NCAA tournament.

"As a kid you're in the backyard playing street hockey, and you say this is for the Beanpot final. I knew the Beanpot a lot more, I always watched it come February, and it was huge in my family," Sullivan said.

Sullivan says his time with the Terriers has flown by, and is hoping this last Beanpot provides the most memorable moment, especially being a captain.

"It's exciting, and it means a lot that I was elected captain and it would be nice if I could grab that trophy and give it to Coach (Parker)," Sullivan said.

Captain comes through

Sullivan was able to do just what he had hoped for after Brian McGuirk's goal at 5:06 of the overtime. He was on the ice at the time of the goal, but he said he didn't see it, since it happened so quickly off a face off, but he heard the crowd celebrating and he raced to the corner to jump on the pile.

"I've been waiting 22 years for that and you couldn't have written it any better.

"We've come through the ranks together, and we've played together and against each other and its been a lot of fun to see their success."
BC's Brian Boyle

Sullivan said he didn't see the goal, which happened so quickly off a faceoff, but he heard the crowd celebrating and he raced to the corner to jump on the pile.

The senior captain played a solid game manning the blue line, and had the most hellacious hit of the night on BC forward Nathan Gerube.

Gerube was streaking down the ice with his head down, and Sullivan was able to line him up and the result was a collision of freight train proportions. It came at a good time as Gerube had just scored the tying goal in the third period, and BC was playing at a frenzied pace.

"It was just a quick second and I saw him with his head down," he said. "It was a good feeling, and was good to get a big hit when we needed it to get the crowd going."

BU goaltender John Curry credited Sullivan with getting his team fired up in the locker room before the overtime. BC had gone into the lock room with much of the momentum having just killed off a late penalty, but Sullivan kept the spirits up, and the result was a clinching goal five minutes into extra hockey.

"You just look around and see all the seniors and its their last shot. I just stood up and said you can't write it any better than this, its your archrival in front of 18,000 people, I told them we had a lot left in the tank and we weren't leaving until we had that trophy."

Not quite the fertile ground it once was

It is evident both schools have benefited from having South Shore residents representing their schools, but there is concern about the future, and present of hockey in the area.

While there is certainly representation of the South Shore in the Beanpot this year it's not quite at the level that it once was, and that goes the same for the entire area of Greater Boston.

"We're not producing the number of players we have in the past and that's a concern for all of us college coaches," BC coach Jerry York said. "We're producing good players, but not the quantity that the other parts of the country are."

Minnesota, Michigan, and even New York have surpassed this area in the amount of players that are being produced. The reason is complicated according to York, and hasn't been pinpointed exactly.

Even still there are three captains of Beanpot schools this year from the area, in Boyle, Sullivan and Northeastern's Mike Morris, who also hails from Braintree. Sullivan says being able to play with and against the top-flight talent in the area is one reason for his success.

"It's definitely funny looking back, we all grew up pretty close together, and now we're all captains of our teams. We all played together, and fed off each other, it just shows that all this paid off," Sullivan said.

Role of Captain's Council clarified

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

If you're reading this and your son or daughter is currently in the land of berets and the Tour de Lance, you're probably waiting to hear from them. Don't hold your breath; you might have to wait until your world traveler returns to hear about their trip. For future reference, guys if you do go away and decide not to write or call home, make up for your laziness by bringing home some killer souvenirs for mom and pop.

Uncertainty has surrounded the topic of the new CHS Captain's Council. This selection of students was enlisted to aid in creating guidelines that we desire of CHS Captains. At last week's School Council meeting, it was hypothesized that these expectations could be extended to all Leadership positions within the school. For the record, the Captain's Council isn't the Illuminati of CHS — these students will not be involved in the selection of Captains for sports teams. The Captain's Council was formed only to help create the list. In short, the only real difference is that now we have a system where the same expectations are explicitly laid out for captaincy.

The brevity of this week's school news is in the spirit of vacation. Now you can forget about school that much sooner.

- Monday after school the Professional Development Committee met.
- The Superintendent's Administration Council met Tuesday morning.
- Wednesday afternoon the Safe School Initiative met to discuss the Bully Policy.
- Yesterday morning a Senior Assembly was held in the auditorium.

Today marks the start of February vacation! Whether you'll be spending it around the house or on the slopes, have fun.

Another vacation has arrived! Savor the upcoming week, it will slip through your fingers if you're not careful. To get the most out of your vacation, not sleeping is always an option. When making the decision to opt for this extreme, think twice before operating any heavy machinery.

Rock 'n Hockey crash the boards at Red Lion Inn

The article was contributed by Mr. L.

Last Friday night, Feb. 9th, midwinter's freeze came to a sudden thaw in Cohasset Village when more than 275 supporters of the Cohasset High School Hockey Team and rock band the Gr8tfls (The artists formerly known as The Grateful Dads) converged in the famous Lion's Hall for a night of smash-mouth camaraderie, high speed dancing, and arena-size classic rock.

Highlights were aplenty. Texas style line dancing broke out at one point on the dance floor.

Netting an eclectic group of people — residents from Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham and Boston and as far away as Vermont and Maine —the night was truly a special event. Hundreds laced up and danced for three straight sets while others faced-off with old friends, studied game films in the balcony, or changed it up at the bar.

Organizers of the Varsity Hockey Team Boosters — Andrea Wade, Steve Faber, Steve Brandt, Jane Lanzillotti, Anne Czerkawski, Karin Doonan and Jeanne Holway — started planning and promoting the event months in advance. For this and other fund raising programs the Boosters coordinate, the group executes on a clear and straightforward mission:

"Provide the athletic administration, coaching staff and most importantly the student athlete the greatest opportunity to meet their potential."

With many well executed goals, and surprisingly nobody, repeat nobody, in the penalty box (save one singer wannabe who was tossed off stage), the organizers put a resounding Win on the scoreboard. From the opening period, the outcome was never in doubt. By 9 p.m. the party was well underway with the Gr8tfls opening up with classic floor burners such as "Running Down a Dream," "One Way Out" and "My Old School."

Highlights were aplenty. Texas style line-dancing broke out at one point on the dance floor. Cohasset's own and up and coming Rich "Rogaine" Ofsthun took lead vocals for a fist pounding rendition of "Rebel Rebel," followed by a creative version of a Clapton classic (hint: Song title rhymes with Rich's nickname). "Roguey" wrapped up his tunes with a commanding message and a heart-pumping version of Lennon/McCartney's "Birthday," singing directly to his trophy wife, Kathy, who turned at least 30 the same evening.

Without question the night's energy peaked with the band's second set that brought forth the MVP of the show, Anne "Razor" Czerkawski. Blades sharpened and fully conditioned, she came out flying on all edges, lifting the action to a whole new level. Anne cut through 10 hits by great artists such as Fleetwood Mac, Sheryl Crow, The Beatles, KT Tunstall, The Pretenders and the Pointer Sisters. Anne, an experienced jazz singer (managing label, Chuckful Records), easily made her debut crossover into rock on this night. Her notes, always on target, rang out like church bells fired from a cannon.

Several very special moments occurred when her father, John "Rocky" Linscott (Portland, Maine), age 77, joined her on stage and demonstrated blistering slap shots from his authoritative but soulful saxophone. With this full and fresh lineup, the rock of ages was on the offensive and caused several body pileups on the dance floor.

Daughters and their dads and recent college grads, the Gr8fls are an eclectic, always-in-process band. This night their members' ages spanned 50 years. In addition to Anne and John, other members include Rick "Ruler" Shea, (Cohasset); Jon "CareBear" Leet (Scituate); Jim "Smoothie" Limbey (Weymouth); Vin "Harp" O'Brien (Scituate); Carey "Hap" Valentine (Woodstock, VT); Tim "Fingers" Butterworth (Brighton): and Vic "FretBoy" Lanzillotti (Cohasset).

Up and down the bench, many standout players made this event successful. Special thanks go out to 1) hockey legends Bobby Orr and Jack O'Callahan (1980 Miracle on Ice Olympian), both of whom donated authentic, autographed jerseys to the auction 2) Tom Sullivan, Founder of Braintree-based Lumber Liquidators, consistent with his notable commercial contributions 3) Adrian Morris Salon, also contributing generously to the auction 4) video producer and photographer Adam Sasso of Cohasset-based Sasso Productions and 5) new, hard working coach Bob Walsh, who continues to take Cohasset's student athletes to a new level of play and deportment.

Finally, the Red Lion Inn. Special thanks go to owner Gerd Ordelheide, his management and wait staff, all of whom collaborated closely with the Boosters in conducting this event. As all locals know, people from all over are drawn to this venue. A great place with tradition and purpose, the location's offering is still evolving. Centuries ago merely a place of rest and drink for wayward travelers, The Red Lion, in addition to providing premier facilities and hospitality for all of life's celebrations, recently has become the South Shore's premier destination for live music performance and dancing.

The Varsity Hockey Boosters thank all of you again for your generous and enthusiastic support. See you next year. Go Skippers!

Tammy DuRoss, owner of Hingham Harbor Gallery on Otis Street (3A), holds one of the Mardi Gras masked made by a student at the South Shore Charter Public School in Norwell. DuRoss is hosting a Mardi Gras event Saturday at which she will auction the masks. Money raised will benefit art education at the Charter School. The event includes artwork by Cohasset students who attend the school.

Charter school students' artwork to be auctioned

Mardi Gras celebration at Hingham Harbor Gallery

"When they heard that their creations would be shown publicly, their imaginations really just flowed."
— Marianne Buckley Curran, art teacher

By Mary Jane Hanson
SPECIAL TO THE JOURNAL

Don't be surprised if Otis Street appears more like Bourbon Street in New Orleans on Saturday, Feb. 17, when the Hingham Harbor Gallery celebrates Mardi Gras! This joyful spring gala will be a daylong event and will feature live music by the Fat City Band from 2 to 5pm.

Festivities within the landmark building at the edge of Hingham Harbor will bring fun, frolic and a bit of Cajun culture to our New England community. Among the beautiful works offered in the Gallery will be hand made and decorated Mardi Gras masks created by students of the South Shore Charter Public School in Norwell. These works of art will be auctioned off and 100 percent of the proceeds from the auction will be given to the school. Tammy DuRoss, owner of the Gallery, is donating a portion of the entire day's sales to the school as well. Students from numerous towns including Hingham, Scituate, Weymouth, Hull, Norwell, Duxbury and Plympton participate in the program.

Marianne Buckley Curran, art teacher at the school, explained about the program. These students "apply to the program; (submit) a portfolio and essay and interview with the art teacher." She listed other instruction the students receive, such as art theory, color and design, and studio classes in drawing, painting, and three-dimensional sculpture.

"The students learn to work with different material. In this case, the material was plaster," she said. "When they heard that their creations would be shown publicly, their imaginations really just flowed."

DuRoss saw the work of the students at an impromptu meeting with Curran. An artist and painter in her own right, Curran has oil paintings shown at the Gallery also. Impressed by the intricacy and beauty of the masks, DuRoss had the idea of a fundraising party and a Mardi Gras celebration for the community.

"For so many years in my work with real estate and finance I have traveled and met so many wonderful talented people," said Ross, a 15-year resident of Hingham. "I always have wanted to bring these amazing and incredible things together in one place. I just thought it was a great idea. We have something for everyone and it's all forms of art; paintings, pottery, handmade jewelry, hand made Wellfleet chocolate candy, children's books and original prints, antiques, gorgeous hand woven shawls — it's all the remarkable talent of people from all over the world as well as some right here in our own area. There is something for every taste, every budget and every age group. We have pieces by renowned artists who are no longer with us to the spectacular work of the young aspiring artists who are with us today."

DuRoss' business with mortgage financing had taken her all over the world. From exotic places like the Himalayas and India to other parts of this country like Colorado and Oregon, she became aware and appreciative of the diverse and infinite nature of art forms, media and artists.

Curran said it was very rewarding to see those she has taught cross a path where their work is shown publicly. "I want them to learn that shows are something to enjoy," she said. "They are 'feel good' experiences. The public views your work, you have a chance to talk with them and see how much your creation can bring pleasure to others."

DuRoss agrees and believes it is vital to give young people every opportunity for encouragement and success. "I have the place and the masks are so innovative — these art students and their creativity are the perfect focus for our party."

Mardi Gras at Hingham Harbor Gallery will be a family day of art appreciation. "It's all about art!" said DuRoss. "Music is art, food is art, the beautiful masks are art! And the proceeds go to helping young artists learn and create more. Besides, it's going to be a blast!"

February School Vacation Week at the Hull Lifesaving Museum

The Hull Lifesaving Museum is located in the historic 1889 Point Allerton U.S. Lifesaving Station at 1117 Nantasket Ave., in Hull. For information, contact Victoria Stevens at 781-925-5433 or visit lifesavingmuseum@comcast.net.

Family Activity: Make a Paper Lighthouse – During February school vacation week, Tuesday, Feb. 20 through Thursday, Feb. 23, from 10 a.m., to 4 p.m., visit the Hull Lifesaving Museum to learn the wonderful true story of Abbie Burgess, Keeper of Matinicus Rock Lighthouse, in Maine.

The program will be ongoing throughout the day. In the winter of 1856, Abbie's father went ashore for supplies, only to be trapped on the mainland for four weeks by a coastal storm. Abbie, then only seventeen, kept the lights burning despite knee-deep flooding and wild seas, all the while caring for her sick mother and her younger sisters.

Families are invited to watch the movie, "Keep the Lights Burning, Abbie," and browse the many lighthouse children's books, check out the museum's lighthouse models and make their own paper lighthouse models to take home.

Exhibits – While at the museum families can also explore our exhibits on shipwrecks and lifesaving, as well as our special exhibit titled, "Flying Santa: A Holiday Tradition," and visit the Children's Navigation Loft, a special play attic for youngsters, complete with dress-up trunks, games, puzzles, maritime activities and a climb-on sailing ship. Activity is free with museum admission. Admission is $5 adults, $3 seniors, free for children and members.

Grub Street South to host blogging workshop

Debut author, Patry Francis, will lead a workshop which will be held Tuesday, Feb. 27, at 7 p.m., titled "Blogging for Writers: How blogging helped an unknown writer land an agent, get published and join an empowering network of writers and readers."

The workshop will be held at Grub Street South at Buttonwood, at Show's Plaza on Route 3A in Cohasset. Grub Street South is a collaboration between Grub Street, Boston's only independent writing center and Buttonwood Books & Toys, at Shaw's Plaza on Route 3A in Cohasset. The goal of their programs is to get writers writing.

Patry's book titled "The Liars Diary," was published in Feb. and is a novel about two women, their unlikely friendship and the secrets that rupture the bond. Her poetry and short stories have appeared in many fine magazines. In addition, Patry is a three-time nominee for the "Pushcart Prize" and has twice been the recipient of the Mass Cultural Council grant.

She lives with her family on Cape Cod. Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665.

Auto Dealer Profile • February 14, 2007

McGee Toyota Times

Serving South Shore Families Since 1970 • 37 Years of Great Prices, Selection and Service

Toyota, already on a roll, may well record a benchmark industry achievement before the end of the new year.

"We expect to outsell General Motors in 2007," declared Tom Murphy, general manager at McGee Toyota in Hanover, one of 70 Toyota dealerships in Massachusetts.

And Murphy fully expects his own dealership to ride the wave generated by the parent company in recent years, predicting a 25 percent increase in the sale of pre-owned cars and a 15 percent hike in new car sales from the Hanover site during 2007.

Murphy attributes a portion of the anticipated increase to the availability of additional space at his Route 53 dealership - space created by the relocation of the company's Dodge franchise to Pembroke. The Pembroke site, which covers six acres, will expand to nine acres in the coming months.

McGee is proud of its prestigious Toyota "Presidents Award." This honor is bestowed on the very limited amount of Toyota dealers that exceed the highest standard of customer satisfaction in the industry.

Murphy's optimism is also grounded in the Hanover operation's own successes, including its selection as the district's number one dealership in customer satisfaction.

Toyota's nationwide surge, Murphy predicted, will rely in part on the introduction of the new Tundra truck.

"It will be our biggest launch in history," Murphy said. "We expect to be selling more than 200,000 (of this model) per year. It's our first full-sized truck, and it will come in 31 different models. We're going after every niche."

He added that Toyota is meeting another demand by producing hybrid versions of other popular models, such as the Camry, the Highlander SUV, and the Prius.

There's nothing mysterious about Toyota's ascendancy during the early years of the new century. The Camry, described as the best-selling car in the US, offers extraordinary appeal in terms of such basic values as quality and price.

"The '07 Camry," Murphy pointed out, "has $4,000 worth of improvements, yet the price has gone up only a little more than $100. The cost of ownership is extremely low."

Toyota's pricing reflects the company's culture, which relies heavily on automation.

"It takes relatively few people to assemble a Toyota," Murphy observed. "Eighty percent (of a car) is put together by machines."

This percentage contrasts sharply with the ratio that burdens other major automakers, he added.

The Hanover dealership is formidable, covering a full 14 acres off Route 53 just a short hop from Exit 13 off busy Route 3. At any given time, Murphy said, McGee Toyota stocks about 500 cars - half new, half pre-owned. The dealership employs about 70 people - 42 in sales, 26 in service, and the remainder in administration.

Bob McGee launched the business 36 years ago with a Pontiac/Toyota dealership. He eventually sold his Pontiac interests and, eight years ago, acquired the Dodge franchise. He later acquired the Chase Chevrolet dealership in Middleboro, soon to move into a new building on 14 acres of land on the Route 44 Automile in Raynham.

Murphy is a veteran of 20 years in the business, having been associated with Toyota and Lexus dealerships for 14 years and with BMW and Porsche dealerships for six years. He's been GM at the Hanover site for the past two years.

Looking ahead to the industry's immediate future, Murphy predicts big things for hybrids.

"Hybrids," he said, "will dominate the market, because of savings on gasoline and the reduction of emissions by 70 percent."

Hybrids, of course, cover only a small percentage of the Toyota inventory at present. The line includes 20 different models, from the four-cylinder Yaris to the upscale Avalon, three different Camry convertibles, the multipurpose Sienna, the durable Corolla, and, of course, the formidable new Tundra, to mention just a few.

McGee Toyota features an interactive Scion showroom where all 3 Scion models can be completely customized. The stylish, fuel efficient Scion XA, XB and TC appeal to drivers of all ages looking for sporty, economical driving excitement. Scion's Pure Pricing takes the angst out of car shopping while delivering the greatest value in new car selection available today.

Whatever the automotive requirement, in terms of both style and performance, McGee Toyota and Scion has the answers.

Prius

2007 Toyota Prius Hybrids deliver an impressive EPA estimated 60 miles per gallon on the highway. Call or stop in to McGee Toyota today for a test drive.

Introduced in Japan in 1997, Prius is the most popular hybrid in the world. In the U.S. alone, more than 300,000 have been sold since 2000 and it is now Toyota's third best-selling car. Much of this success can be attributed to Toyota's Hybrid Synergy Drive®. It delivers impressive fuel economy and low levels of smog-forming emissions, along with competitive acceleration and relaxed cruising capability. Prius also wins admirers with an aero-dynamic 5-door body that wraps around a midsize interior with a surprisingly roomy rear seat and huge cargo capacity. For 2007, Toyota has introduced Prius Touring Edition, which sports revised suspension tuning, larger wheels and tires, a more distinctive rear spoiler, fog lamps and High Intensity Discharge (HID) headlights.

Prius Reasons To Buy

- Advanced Technology-Partial Zero Emission Vehicle (AT-PZEV)
- Powerful Hybrid Synergy Drive®
- Impressive EPA mpg estimates
- Cutting-edge safety and convenience features
- Dramatic design, inside and out
- Midsize interior with a compact exterior

Compared to Civic Hybrid, Prius has a more efficient and higher-torque powertrain. Civic Hybrid uses the latest version of Honda's Integrated Motor Assist. But Civic's powertrain still cannot match Prius' combined torque or EPA-estimated city fuel economy ratings. Prius also offers more room for passengers and cargo than Civic Hybrid as well as safety features, such as Traction Control and Vehicle Stability Control, that aren't available on Civic Hybrid.

Prius counters the Honda accord Hybrid with advanced features like a Continuously Variable Transmission (CVT) that smoothly changes gear ratios without traditional shifting and superior EPA-estimated fuel economy. Unlike Accord Hybrid, Prius' unique styling and contemporary cabin design make a bold statement about environmentally conscious technology. Add extras like Smart Key, Bluetooth®* technology and auto-leveling high High Intensity Discharge (HID) headlights, and Prius beats Accord Hybrid on features without surpassing the Honda's base price.

Prius has the engineering to satisfy everyone, from techsavvy drivers to family sedan shoppers. And when prospects see that Prius can actually cost less to buy than a comparable Civic Hybrid or Accord Hybrid, they will understand that this technological marvel is truly in a class by itself.

Elizabeth F. Dunn

Owned and operated six nursing homes

Elizabeth F. (Souther) Dunn, 97, of Marshfield, died Feb. 10, 2007.

Born in 1910 in Cohasset, she was one of 12 children in the large extended family of Souther and Lincoln families. Her immigrant ancestors, Joseph Souther and his wife Elizabeth Fairfield were married in Boston by Gov. John Endicott in 1857. Their grandson, Joseph Souther, moved to that part of Hingham which became Cohasset and married Content Tower. Seven generations later, Elizabeth Fairfield Souther was born and named for her immigrant ancestor, the only known descendant to carry the name. She is a direct descendant of nine Mayflower passengers including John Alden, Richard Warren, William Mullins, Degory Priest, William Brewster, John Howland, Edward Doty, John Tilley and Henry Sampson.

Mrs. Dunn graduated from Cohasset schools and received her three-year diploma from New England Baptist Hospital in 1936. She often recalled working with the well-known Dr Lahey, founder. of the world famous Lahey Clinic of Boston, assisting in the operating room and caring for his post operative patients at New England Baptist Hospital.

She married James Dunn in 1938. They settled in Cohasset, where their three children were born and moved to Pembroke in 1949. Less than two years later, they purchased an estate with a large antique house and converted it into a nursing home. As a registered nurse, she and her husband owned and operated six nursing homes, setting the standards of excellence for a period in which nursing homes were in their infancy. They established the first organized recreational program for residents in the state and were pioneers in instituting rehabilitation and physical therapy as an integral part of patient care. In 1981, they were recognized, in an article in the national trade magazine, "Nursing Home Administrator," for making their new Mildred Alford Home in Abington an outstanding example of a modern nursing home. They eventually built and operated three more modern style nursing homes on the South Shore.

In 1972, having sold their modern style nursing homes, they closed the Elizabeth Fairfield House and retired, devoting their time to each other and their children and grand children.

She leaves her son, James T. Dunn Jr., of Plymouth; her daughters, Grace "DeDe" Dunn of Marshfield and Mary Lou Dunn and her husband, Paul W. Kaufman of Marshfield; her brothers, Hatherly Souther of Maine and Donald Souther of N.M.; a sister, Ardeth Hand of Pa; nine grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

She was the wife of the late James T. Dunn Sr.

A Funeral Service will be held Wednesday, Feb. 14, at 2 p.m., in the MacDonald Funeral Home at 1755 Ocean St., Route 139 in Marshfield. Visiting hours are Wednesday from 1 to 2 p.m. Interment will be in the Mayflower Cemetery, Duxbury.

Fire department had a busy January

During the month of January, the Fire Department responded to 188 incidents, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

The summary of Fire Department responses during the_month include: building fires, seven; illegal burning, two; motor vehicle crashes, 10; medical emergencies, 80; inspections, 30; investigations, 13; natural gas investigations, six; carbon monoxide alarm investigations, four; lock outs/lock ins, four; automatic fire alarm activations, 23; mutual aid fire responses to other communities, one; public assists, two; downed power lines, three; and miscellaneous responses, three. There were 51 emergency incidents were reported by 911 telephone: 39 medical emergencies, four fire alarm activations, three investigations, two motor vehicle crashes, one natural gas investigation and two building fire.

The Fire Department ambulance transported 37 patients to South Shore Hospital, two patients to Quincy Medical Center and one patient to Massachusetts General Hospital. Twenty-three of the 40 were advanced life support transports. Mutual aid ambulances transported six patients to South Shore Hospital. Four of the six mutual aid ambulance transports were advanced life support. There was one motor vehicle crash that required victims to be transported to the hospital and one motor vehicle vs. pedestrian accident that required transport to the hospital.

Automatic fire alarm activation responses totaled 23 for the month. Accidental activation of the alarm system accounted for 10 responses and alarm malfunction was the cause of 13 responses, Silvia stated in his monthly status report to Selectmen.

There were seven responses classed as building fires for the month, four were for malfunctioning electrical equipment, one was for a chimney fire and one was for malfunctioning heating equipment. One fire was a structure fire, which went to two alarms. Mutual Aid companies from Hingham, Hull and Scituate assisted in the extinguishment of the fire. The fire was in the downtown business district in a building that did not have sprinklers or an alarm system. The fire was reported by a passerby who noticed smoke coming from the building. Due to the efforts of the personnel that responded, the fire was contained to the building where it originated and did not spread to any of the exposures. One exposure, the building to the rear, is only 23 feet away. Personnel from the Cohasset Police, Cohasset Water and Cohasset Department of Public Works also assisted at the scene of the fire.

The Emergency Medical/ Ambulance Management Hardware/ Software that was approved at the fall Town Meeting was purchased and placed into service during January, Silvia said.

Magician treats audiences to tricks

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Magician Lyn Dillies has performed in front of many large audiences in the past 20 years, but the Westport native still remembers growing up a painfully timid child.

"When I was small, I was extremely shy. I would hide behind my parents whenever they tried to introduce me to someone. When I was 8 years old, a magician came to our school and I was so afraid he might call on me that I slid so far down in my seat that I missed the whole show," recalled Dillies last week by telephone. "It wasn't until I was about 12, when I saw Bill Bixby in a television series called "The Magician" (NBC-TV, 1973-74), that I became entranced by magic. I can still remember racing out to a magic shop in New Bedford and before long I was going door to door asking the neighbors if I could do magic tricks for them. In those days, I would make and sell crafts and collect cans along the highway to redeem in order to save money to buy more items for my magic act."

Dillies still lives Westport, but its quaint streets are no longer her stage. They were replaced years ago by venues like Lincoln Center, the showrooms of Atlantic City and, on Feb. 24, the Company Theatre in Norwell. Classic slight-of-hand card tricks that are the bread and butter of just about every magic act are supplemented in Dillies' show by grand illusions with equally grand names like "Metamorphosis," "Human Diffusion" and "The Twister."

"My production has elements of Las Vegas with lighting and other dazzling effects designed to keep audiences on the edge of their seats," says Dillies, "but I make sure it is a family show that will appeal to people of all ages. It is very high-caliber and very wholesome at the same time. Magic is truly an entertaining art form. People who enjoy it expect to be entertained and amazed. It brings out the child in everyone." Elephants often have a similar effect, as Dillies found when she paired with performing pachyderms Emily and Ruth at the 2000 grand re-opening of Buttonwood Park Zoo in New Bedford.

"Magic is truly an entertaining art form. People who enjoy it expect to be entertained and amazed. It brings out the child in everyone."
— Lyn Dillies

"I worked on that particular show for eight months. I love elephants so it was an extraordinary experience to gain their trust and learn their comfort level. Making not one, but two elephants appear in a pasture made magic history and is documented in the national archive of the Society of Magicians. That illusion took more than 5,000 square feet of fabric, 300 feet of truss, and two cases of red seedless grapes. Emily and Ruth both really love seedless grapes," says Dillies, who re-teamed with the elephants in 2003 for a painting and mind-reading illusion and who hopes to work with the "ladies" again later this year. "It is a privilege to work with such magnificent animals. I love them dearly." Dillies also loves her audience, which is why she and her team regularly endure what can be an exhausting set-up.

"Making sure everything - especially the lighting - is just right takes time. Our set-up can take up to 12 hours, depending on the venue. After the set-up, of course, we usually have one or two shows to perform on the same day. The work we do is very grueling because it is so high energy," explains Dillies, who top lines a team which includes magician's assistant and lighting designer Marc LeBlanc, technical director Steve Zakszewski and production assistant Adam Levy.

Dillies and company are just back from New Mexico and this week will head to Texas to perform "Magic at the Symphony" with the San Antonio Symphony, a new Dillies-devised show that blends magic with classical music.

"My grandfather was a classical violinist. I studied violin, too, and always expected somehow that I would probably pursue a career in music. I took great care in selecting the music for these shows. The work I am doing with symphony orchestras now really makes use of my background playing the violin as a child. Combining magic and music is a wonderful hook to attract new audiences to the symphonies."

("The Magic of Lyn" comes to The Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, for two shows on Feb. 24. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go to www.companytheatre.com.)

Movie review

Jess (Josh Hutcherson) is about to meet his foot-racing match in Leslie (AnnaSophia Robb).

Spunky kids 'Bridge' the gaps

"Bridge to Terabithia" (B)

By James Vemiere
FILM CRITIC

From the people who brought us the smash hit "The Chronicles of Narnia" comes "Bridge to Terabithia." But it is more like the "Bridge to Sigmund Freud-ia," if you ask me.

A coming-of-age tale from Boston's Walden Media featuring relatively few special effects, the film charts the adventures of a boy and girl who spend a lot of time alone in the woods. The film will strike many as a sexual allegory.

That may be stating the obvious in virtually any discussion of the fantasy genre, but it's arguably more overt here.

Based on the 1978 book by Katherine Paterson, which was made into a 1985 TV film, "Bridge to Terabithia" offers the usual preteen tropes: the troubled home life of the protagonist Jess (Josh Hutcherson), in this case, a gruff, blue-collar father (ex-Terminator Robert Patrick), an exhausted mother, a wretched excess of sisters and bullying at school at the hands of a strapping eighth-grade girl named Janice (Lauren Clinton).

Meanwhile, Jess likes to run, even though he has to duct tape his sneakers. Into Jess' girl-beleaguered life comes the pretty and adorably spunky Leslie Burke (AnnaSophia Robb, who appears to have taken a long dip in the Keira Knightley gene pool). Leslie beats Jess in a footrace, has a way with repartee, a strong sense of justice (she leads one school protest chanting, "Free the pee") and an active imagination.

The child of writers — you know, arty types with a Mercedes roadster — Leslie becomes Jess' muse and his guide to the magical land of Terabithia. Actually, it's the woods behind their adjacent homes. But, hey, use your imagination.

Leslie tells Josh about the Dark Master (hold all Darth Vader and self-abuse jokes, please). A shower of pine cones becomes an enemy attack. Squirrels morph into Squogres (or something), and behind every tree lurks a demonic shadow, an observation previously made by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Directed by Hungarian-born animator Gabor Csupo, the writer-producer of "Rugrats" and "Wild Thornberry" films, and co-adapted by Paterson's son David, "Bridge to Terabithia" is surprisingly vague about its enchanted land and may not feature enough fantasy to satisfy fans of the genre.

The cast of young actors excels, however. Hutcherson and Robb are quite good and well-matched. Newcomer Bailee Madison lights up the screen as Josh's wacky baby sister Maybelle. The luminous Zooey Deschanel ("The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy") appears to be doing a guest spot, however welcome, as Ms. Edmonds, an attractive music teacher for whom Josh pines.

The Terabithians, when they finally appear, look like fugitives from a Salvador Dali exhibit, and the film takes a truly sad, "Wuthering Heights"-like twist near the end.

But as an allegory about sexual awakening, the horrors of middle school, parents from outer space and the essential adorability of girls, "Bridge to Terabithia" isn't bad.

Rated PG. "Bridge to Terabithia" contains scenes of grade school bullying and an emotionally traumatic event.

Downtown debut for cool 'Cat'

Christopher Sidoli as Bustopher Jones in the 25th anniversary national tour of "Cats".

Christopher Sidoli grew up in Connecticut, but it was while spending summers on the Cape that he first developed a love for performing.

"I did 'Oklahoma!' my freshman year in high school and I got more and more involved with theater during summers on the Cape," recalled Sidoli by telephone last week from a tour bus that will bring him to Boston's Opera House next week in the 25th anniversary national tour of "Cats."

"Those summers on the Cape were some of the best times in my life. I met so many people with whom I am still friends. I did my first show, 'Rags to Riches,' at the Harwich Junior Theatre when I was just a sophomore in high school." Next week will mark Sidoli's debut on a downtown Boston stage, but his work on the Cape has prepared him well.

"During my summers on the Cape, I really benefited from the wide range of theater opportunities. I did 'Grease' and 'The Scarlet Pimpernel' at the Academy of Performing Arts in Orleans and 'Side Show' and 'Kiss of the Spiderwoman' at the Cape Rep Theatre in Brewster. These shows were really great experiences for me." Sidoli — whose parents Christopher and Jean now live year round in Harwichport — has been pursuing a professional career in theater since earning a degree in voice from Skidmore College. He was an original cast member of the long-running off-Broadway show "The Awesome '80s Prom," and also performed in the New York City premiere of the opera "Children of Children." His current assignment fulfills a promise Sidoli made to himself just a few years back.

"For my 2005 New Year's resolution, I decided I needed to land a really great national tour. When I first heard about 'Cats,' however, I didn't think it was for me. I thought it would be too much of a dance show and I have no dance training at all. My background is in opera."

The 28-year-old soon learned that all cats don't have to be quick on their feet when he was cast in not one, but three roles in the longest continuously running touring show in U.S. history. Sidoli plays Gus the theatrical cat, the fierce pirate cat Growltiger, and the very cool Bustopher Jones.

"Bustopher is a very fat cat. He's by far the largest cat in the show. The costume for Bustopher is like a football so I couldn't dance even if I wanted to," says Sidoli of just one of the three costumes he dons in the musical. "I arrive at the theater two hours before curtain to get into make-up, wigs and costumes and when I'm not on-stage, I'm backstage changing hair and make-up. The three characters I play are very distinct. That makes these roles very exciting for me, because of the variety of things I am called upon to do. I wouldn't give up any of the three, but Gus is probably my favorite. I love his emotion. He's a sweet older cat remembering his grand days in the theater. It is Gus who tells the life story of Deuteronomy. Gus is very old and infused with a lot of pathos so he has some of the show's more intimate moments. I have to make his emotion real and I have to do so by believing in what I am saying and singing."

The performer credits a local influence for helping to do just that.

"A great director, Padric Lilis at the Academy, taught me to use my own life to make my work real for me. When I'm doing Gus, I call upon the memory of my two deceased grandmothers to inspire me."

Composer Andrew Lloyd Weber was inspired by "Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats" and other poems of T.S. Eliot to create "Cats," which opened in New York in 1982 and went on to win eight Tony Awards including Best Musical, Best Book, Best Score, Best Director and Best Costumes. The show's most famous song, "Memory," originally performed in the Broadway production by Betty Buckley, was recorded by everyone from Barbra Streisand and Johnny Mathis to Liberace. In the past 25 years, the fanciful story of the junkyard-dwelling felines has been presented in 26 countries and 300 cities in 10 different languages. Somehow, however, Sidoli himself managed to avoid the show.

"I never saw 'Cats' until I was cast in this production. It was just never something I thought I would be associated with. I love Betty Buckley and I love her version of 'Memory,' but I just never got around to seeing the show."

That's not to say the performer doesn't understand the many people who have seen "Cats" each and every time it has come through Boston since 1983.

"With this show, there is just something that stays with people. There are so many different elements — from Lloyd Weber's beautiful music to the amazing sets and costumes to T. S. Eliot's poetry. My parents have seen the show a few times now and each time they find something different to like about it. I think that is how it affects a lot of people. The show is open to interpretation. Different people come away with different reactions to it."

Christopher Sidoli

Now 18 months into his two-year commitment to "Cats," Sidoli is still enjoying the road even when it takes him far from home.

"This job has given me a great opportunity to travel. We've played 48 of the 50 states, plus Mexico, Brazil and Chile, and we'll be in Canada when I finish up in June."

By then, however, Sidoli says he will need time to rest and relax and he knows just where he will head.

"I'm going to spend this summer on the Cape with my parents. After two years on the road, I will really need some time off."

And some time to enjoy some of his familiar favorites found only on the Cape, too.

"After all this time in lycra costumes, I'm definitely heading to the Sundae School in Dennsiport. They have the best ice cream and by June I will be ready for a sundae."

"Cats" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington Street, Boston, Feb. 20-25. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or go to broadwayacrossamerica.com. On Feb. 20, a special "Kids Night on Broadway" offering will allow adults to purchase one ticket and bring a child, ages 16 or under, for free. To make use of this offer, use the code CASTKID when ordering tickets. Pre-show activities on Feb. 20 at the Opera House begin at 6:30 p.m. and will include face painting by cast members, games, refreshments and presentations by the Animal Rescue League of Boston.

New Releases

BREAKING AND ENTERING (B)

Jude Law is Will Francis, the stylish, successful head of a landscape architecture firm. Along with his partner, Will built new offices in King's Cross, a rundown part of London. Before you can say, "No good deed goes unpunished," Will's offices are broken into, perhaps by a criminal element aligned with his immigrant cleaning crew, and, most ruinously of all, his laptop with his "life" on it has been stolen. The widescreen lensing of Benoit Delhomme is gorgeous, and the film features strong work from Robin Wright Penn and Juliette Binoche. The film, however, is uneven and heavy-handed and reeks of its maker's guilty conscience.

HANNIBAL RISING (A-)

The origins of Hannibal the Cannibal are the subject of director Peter Webber's "Hannibal Rising," a surprisingly well-made and beautifully cast addition to the screen's already large collection of Hannibal-iana. This is a tale of war crimes, revenge and the scars that make monsters out of some of us. Topping the first-rate cast are French actor Gaspard Ulliel ("A Very Long Engagement") in the title role, and Gong Li as Hannibal's gorgeous, glamorous aunt Lady Murasaki.During World War II, Hannibal's parents are killed, and he and his sister are captured by starving, barbaric looters led by a fiend named Vladis Grutas (a diabolical turn by Rhys Ifans). What follows is a well-paced, incredibly gory game of cat-and-mouse. The film completes the process begun in "Silence of the Lambs," of turning Hannibal into a hero by making him the samurai of serial killers and his victims all too deserving.

Rasputia (Eddie Murphy) celebrates her wedding while her husband Norbit (also Eddie Murphy) wonders what he's gotten himself into in "Norbit.

NORBIT (C+)

Academy Award-nominee Eddie Murphy ("Dreamgirls") plays three characters in "Norbit," including the nerdy title character and his overweight wife Rasputia, who brings henpecking obesity to new levels of domestic horror. Murphy is convincing as Rasputia, largely thanks to an outrageously believable "fat-suit," but too much of "Norbit" is fat jokes, stereotypes and little else. Rude, raunchy, female-impersonating comedies appear to be all the rage in urban multiplexes these days. Let's hope they go out of fashion soon.

PUCCINI FOR BEGINNERS (B)

Cable TV on the big screen, "Puccini for Beginners" combines the sizable appeal and dishiness of "Sex and the City" and "The L Word." The film begins at a Lincoln Center performance of Puccini's "Turandot" and involves the operatic adventures of Allegra (Elizabeth Reaser), a self-described lesbian and New York City-based author of cerebral tomes whose bisexual girlfriend Samantha (Julianne Nicholson, "Law & Order: Criminal Intent") drops her. What's a lesbian in the city to do? How about become a "hasbian" and have an affair with a philosophy professor named Philip (Justin Kirk of "Weeds") before "coincidentally" seducing his ditsy, glass-blowing girlfriend Grace (Gretchen Mol)? This is all contrived and soap opera-ish. But the dialogue often sparkles, and the cast is appealing.

'High energy' rep keeps his perspective

Bradley now chairs Election Laws Committee

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A few minutes with state Rep. Garrett Bradley and it is clear, the modern buzzword "multitasking" has come into fashion because of people like the Hingham Democrat.

During Bradley's district office hours upstairs at the Sons of Italy off Route 3A last Friday evening, the 36-year-old state legislator - now in his fourth term -balanced this interview, handling a constituent's concerns, calling for a pizza-to-go, and the arrival of his wife, Heather, and their three children, ages 3 to 7-1/2, all without missing a beat.

His cell phone rings constantly. However, Bradley knows his priorities. He checks the numbers, puts calls directly to voicemail so we can conduct the interview – except a call from one of his daughters to discuss the pizza and plans for the evening.

Bradley, who had also fought Friday night commuter traffic, had even recovered from the stomach flu earlier

Sleepy election

No races for any seats this year

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset voters have to go back 12 years to 1995 to find another Town Election with no contests by the time candidates had to return their nomination papers.

That year turnout was 18 percent – some of which could have been attributed to a write-in campaign challenging the candidate running for reelection to the Board of Health.

Town Clerk Marion Douglas said she checked as far back as 1960 and could not find another Town Election with no contests.

In 1993, there was a sole race – for the Board of Library Trustees – and the turnout was a mere 11 percent.

So now, it is 2007's turn to get into the history books.

The April 7 Town Election — unless someone conducts a write-in or "sticker" campaign — is not going to feature any races, meaning no seats are contested. Therefore, those incumbents seeking reelection have a sure shot at winning as do those who are running for "open" seats.

An open seat means the incumbent is not seeking reelection; therefore, a candidate seeking that seat does not have to run against the incumbent.

This year Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road is running for Selectman Rob Spofford's seat (Spofford is not seeking reelection) and Peter Richardsson of N. Main Street is running for School Committee member Jamie Williams' seat. (Williams is not seeking reelection).

However, to be politically correct, Carlson and Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer are in a two-way race for two seats, as are School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy and Richardsson.

'Comfort' dolls for children

Project helps orphans of AIDS/HIV pandemic

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Little dolls standing about eight inches high that can easily be held in a child's hand are multiplying at the Creative Stitch on King Street (3A) in Cohasset.

The Duduza (or comfort) dolls are made from yarn scraps and filled with polyester stuffing, so there is little cost. They are very easy to knit, so even a beginner can tackle the pattern, says shop owner Kristin Ross of Scituate.

The colorful dolls, each with its own personality thanks to the creativity of the knitter, will travel thousands of miles this summer to a part of the world totally different from the South Shore.

"The need is so huge, this is a way that we can give back."
— Kristin Ross,
The Creative Stitch

The Friday knitting class at the Creative Stitch got the project rolling after class participant Ann Selinger of Hingham shared the story about a friend of hers in Vermont who is involved with CHABA (Children Affected by HIV/AIDS), a non-profit founded in 2002, whose mission is to raise awareness in the US about the plight of children in Africa and to support community-based projects in Namibia, South Africa and Rwanda.

The Duduza dolls go to children in child-headed households that are part of an association called Amahoro, meaning peace. Teenagers orphaned by genocide and AIDS formed the association. They have begun to combine families – some of which are headed by children even younger – in order to survive.

CHABA has formed a partnership with Amahoro and has helped Amahoro expand its mission.

CINDI (Children In Distress), a consortium of children's program in South Africa, initiated the knitting pattern for the dolls.

According to the CINDI network, the idea sprang from a Canadian Internet site on which it was learned Canadians were using knitted dolls instead of polystyrene when packaging medical equipment for Africa. The dolls were then distributed to children in the hospitals. CINDI partners, who are always seeking ways to help children affected by the AIDS pandemic, picked up on the idea.

"Here was a comfort doll that the children can squeeze when they feel said," stated Yvonne Spain of CINDI on the website.

CINDI founders contacted the Canadian group for the pattern and the Duduza doll project took off.

$58K 'counterfeit' check investigation

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

An incident involving what could be a $58,000 counterfeit check is under investigation. Chief James Hussey said federal agents could be called in if the check is indeed determined to be counterfeit.

A storeowner at a shop in Shaw's Plaza reported the check had been deposited and was not sure how someone had obtained a check. The shop owner believed the check could have been scanned.

"It appears someone created a counterfeit check off one of their checks," Chief Hussey said. "We are working in conjunction with the bank in the investigation." The incident was reported at about 10:20 a.m., Wednesday (Feb. 14).

Hussey said the bank transaction took place in Schenectady, N.Y.

Juvenile arrest

A juvenile — meaning the teen is under 17 — was stopped for transporting an underage passenger on a junior operator's license and his passenger was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol and possession of marijuana, police said. The incident occurred at just before 10 p.m. Monday (Feb. 19) at Forest Avenue and Heather Drive. Ironically, the arresting officer had given the juvenile a verbal warning for speeding earlier that evening and then spotted him shortly thereafter coming back with a passenger. "He knew he was a junior operator and pulled him over," Chief James Hussey said.

When the officer told the passenger to get out of the car, a couple of beers dropped from his coat. Further investigation revealed the passenger also had marijuana in his possession, Hussey said.

Pulling over

Two motorists were cited last Wednesday (Feb. 14) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) when they did not pull over and stop to allow fire trucks to pass. Chief James Hussey explained that a cruiser was heading to the call on Brewster Road along with fire engines and the officer saw that the cars that were in front of the fire engines did not pull over. The cruiser pulled the vehicles over after the fire engines passed and cited the motorists for obstructing an emergency vehicle. The citation can carry a $100 fine. Hussey said motorists think that if they slow down it is OK. However, state law requires motorists pull over as far to the right as they can and stop when an emergency vehicle is coming through.

Two-car crash

Two cars were towed following a collision on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) by Stop & Shop, police said. At about 12:30 p.m., Wednesday (Feb. 14), a 1995 Mazda was pulling out of the service road behind Stop & Shop and started to turn right onto 3A. The Mazda pulled out in front of a 2003 PT Cruiser that was traveling northbound and a collision occurred. No one was transported to the hospital. The operator of the Mazda was cited for failure to yield.

Running stop sign

On Monday (Feb. 12), a Hull resident reported to police that, while on his way to work, he sees the same car, a 2006 gray Landrover run the stop sign at the Forest Avenue-North Main Street intersection. He also reported the vehicle cuts other cars off before speeding around the corner.

The caller provided police with the plate number and they identified whom the vehicle belongs to. Chief James Hussey said in these cases the reporting party has the option of signing an affidavit and testifying in court about the problem driver.

However, Hussey said police let the owner of the vehicle being reported know that there has been a complaint about erratic driving. He explained that police do not use an accusatory tone when they follow up on this type of complaint because they cannot be sure who was operating the vehicle.

In this case, the caller reported the incident later in the day.

Cab driver lost

Police went to the aid of a cab driver, who was trying to drive an inebriated female home to Cohasset at about 1:33 a.m., Feb. 14.

"The good part of this story is that she was not driving a car," Chief Hussey said. He explained that the cab's passenger and the cab driver were having trouble communicating; he had gotten lost, so he called police on his cell phone. "We had him meet us in Cohasset Plaza where police were able to direct him to the resident's house," Hussey said.

Snow blower not taken

A snow blower that was reported stolen on Monday afternoon (Feb. 12) had not been taken after all. Police had received a report that the snow blower was missing and a lawnmower had been left in its place. As it turned out, workers taking care of the residence had moved some equipment around and the snow blower had not been stolen.

West Corner fight

Reports of a fight at West Corner last Monday (Feb. 12) were probably unfounded, Chief James Hussey said. The report came in from Hull Police at about 9 p.m. Hingham police are familiar with the calling party and wrote the report about the alleged incident, Hussey said.

Sideswiped

A 1993 Ford Econoline Van clipped a 2005 GMC pickup parked on Elm Street near the Village on Tuesday (Feb. 13), police said.

The Ford hit the side mirror of the pickup, whose owner was able to get a plate number. Police made contact with the owner of the van, who had not realized the incident had occurred. The van owner returned to the scene and the parties exchanged papers, Chief Hussey said.

Headlight out

A headlight that was out led to a motor vehicle stop last Saturday (Feb. 17) at about 9:50 p.m. that resulted in the operator, a 27-year-old Weymouth man, being summonsed to court for being an unlicensed operator. The passenger in the vehicle, to whom the car was registered — a 29-year-old Plymouth man — was cited for allowing the vehicle to be operated by an unlicensed driver, police said.

Rocky Lane incident

Police are still investigating an alleged assault and battery on a youth who lives on Rocky Lane. About 11:15 p.m. Saturday (Feb. 17), police received a call from the alleged victim's father reporting the incident. Police, while on their way to the scene, observed a pickup coming toward them that turned out to have nine youths in the truck and in the back.

Chief Hussey said police are investigating to see who among the youths could be responsible for the attack on the Rocky Lane teen. During the traffic stop, police came across some alcohol. The driver and one of the passengers are being summonsed to court for being minors in possession of alcohol. All the teens in the pickup were from Hull, police said.

No plate

A Cambridge resident is being issued a court summons following a traffic stop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) because the car he was driving did not have a plate, which turned out to be in the back seat. The car was not registered, police said. The driver was also operating on a suspended license. The car had to be towed, police said.

Crocker due back in court in March

Davenport B. "Dave" Crocker, Sr., was arraigned Jan. 18 in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham on charges of stealing money from the Cohasset Yacht Club from 2001 to 2005. Crocker had served as accountant for the 111-year-old club for many years.

He is due back in court for a pretrial conference March 5 and for a pretrial hearing April 12, according to the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office.

On Dec. 7 a Grand Jury indicted Crocker, 70, on one count of larceny over $250 by scheme on diverse dates during that time period. "By scheme" usually means the crime took place over a period of time.

Yacht club officials discovered the alleged theft of about $427,000 in late 2005 and subsequently sent a letter out to the 245 members of the 111-year-old facility. The letter, which caused uproar among club membership, explained the yacht club agreed not to prosecute Crocker if he would repay the money.

However, when the news broke in January 2006, Cohasset police launched a criminal investigation.

According to the yacht club letter sent in 2005, Crocker repaid $200,000 and agreed to pay an additional $260,000 within 18 months. The letter stated that the $260,000 was secured by a second mortgage on Crocker's condominium in Florida.

Yacht club officials have declined to comment on the case.

Obtain certified copy of deed

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell would like to inform the public of an ongoing direct mail offer that is being sent to local homeowners. "Our office has received many inquiries over the past few days from property owners who had received in the mail an offer from 'National Deed Service Inc.' to provide them with a certified copy of their deed for $59.50. The company, based in Washington, DC, according to their letterhead, states it will obtain a certified copy of your deed from the county office and forward it to you."

In an effort to prevent any homeowner from paying such an exorbitant fee for a service that is readily available locally, O'Donnell wants all residents of Norfolk County to know that a certified copy of their deed may be obtained from the Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, from Monday through Friday during regular business hours of 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., at a cost of $1 per page. If you can't come to the office you can send a request by mail to the Norfolk Registry of Deeds. P.O. Box 69, Dedham, MA 02026. The cost by mail is $2 per deed.

People who would like to view their deed can go online to the Registry Web site at norfolkdeeds.org and look at their deed in the research section. More information is available at the Registry by calling the customer service center at 781-461-6101.

Local girls ready for Australian adventure

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Come July, Australia is going to be invaded. But there is no cause for alarm. The invasion — that will include about two-dozen Massachusetts fifth-and sixth-graders — is the friendly variety.

Four of the future, young ambassadors spent Monday night in rooms donated by the Cohasset Harbor Inn on Elm Street.

Colby Callahan, 11, of Cohasset invited her fellow travelers Chelsey Crabbe, 12, of Marshfield; Danielle Dupris, 10, of Pembroke; and Lainey Sullivan, 10, also of Pembroke, for a "home-stay" which is part of the program preparing the girls for their trip.

In addition to the slumber party, Colby will show the girls around Cohasset. Staying overnight helps prepare them for the summer trip away from home including learning to pack a suitcase and being away from their parents. The visit also helps the girls bond.

However, judging from Monday's interview that took place just after they checked in at 3 p.m. – bonding has already occurred. The outgoing girls, who were nominated for the program either by a teacher, government official or someone who has participated in the program, were bubbling over with enthusiasm about their summer plans and the task at hand: having fun while learning about Australia and preparing for 15 days, literally on the other side of the world.

It is all part of People to People Student Ambassadors, a 50-year-old program started by President Eisenhower, through which American students travel abroad. The ultimate goal of the program is not only provide the adventure of participants' young lifetimes but to enhance global understanding.

About 100 students were initially nominated for the grade-school delegation from Eastern Massachusetts, and after interviews, about 40 were invited to participate. About 26 have signed on and will be making the trip. Preparations include a series of meetings and projects, as well as trying to find sponsors and conducting fundraisers to help pay for the $4,500 cost.

About People to People

- People to People was founded in 1956 by President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who believed that ordinary citizens of different nations, if able to communicate directly, would solve their differences and find a way to live in peace.
- Since 1963, People to People Student Ambassador programs have taken thousands of students across international borders to connect with people all over the world.

From left, Chelsey Crabbe of Marshfield, Colby Callahan of Cohasset, Danielle Dupuis of Pembroke and Lainey Sullivan of Pembroke, get together in the lobby of the Cohasset Harbor Inn, which donated two rooms for the night. The girls were spending a night-away-from-home in preparation for their trip to Australia this summer through the People to People Student Ambassador program.

For Danielle, a fifth-grader at Hobomock Elementary School in Pembroke, not going was not an option. "I was really excited," she said. "I jumped out of my socks when I heard I got it (selected)." She has an aunt in Australia and had planned to visit her after high school graduation and now won't have to wait, said her mother Ann Dupris.

Colby, who is in the sixth grade at Cohasset Middle High School, wasn't so sure. "I had my mind made up I wasn't going and then after the first information session I saw how much fun it was going to be," Colby recalled. "It is going to be a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity and I really want to go."

Colby and Chelsey, who is a sixth-grader at the Furnace Brook Middle School in Marshfield, have worked on a project together about Darling Harbour in Sydney.

Danielle and Lainey, a fifth-grader at North Pembroke Elementary School, have worked on creating games and filling out maps about Australia in preparation for the trip that will include "farm-stays," and a trip to the Great Barrier Reef, among other activities. Three chaperones will go on the trip with the students, the girls' mothers say.

They will keep journals of their experiences. Lainey says she plans to write an article for her local newspaper when she returns. The girls said they are also learning about how to conduct themselves as guests in a foreign country so they can show Australians what American students are really like. The girls and boys in the program wear "uniforms" that consist of kaki pants and golf shirts with People to People logos.

Chelsey's mother, Jean Crabbe, said the trip would expand her daughter's horizons. "There is a big world out there and she is used to seeing this little slice of life here," Crabbe said. "This will make her a better person."

Lainey's mother, Michelle Sullivan, said she is nervous and excited but most of all, very proud.

Dupris, Danielle's mother, said she too was nervous about the prospect of sending her 10-year-old child halfway across the world but knows her daughter has the confidence in herself to make the trip a success and will fit in well.

Colby's mother, Kim Callahan, who served as chaperone for Monday's overnight stay, said she was confident from the beginning that Colby would be one of the students selected to make the trip. "She is very mature and is ready to do something like this," she said. Colby has started her fundraising by sending out letters to family and friends, and conducting a raffle at the Teen Center in Cohasset.

Chelsey, who is a swimmer, loves to cook and wants to be a "Disney Imagineer" inventing new rides when she grows up, said her mother's boss offered to donate $1,000 toward her trip if she goes to the Council on Aging in Marshfield to help an elderly person and then write a paper about it – which she intends to do.

Her favorite subject is American History, as is Danielle's. Danielle loves karate and also likes to cook. She wants to open a restaurant and become a chef someday.

Lainey plays soccer, loves math and gym class, and plans to become a marine biologist. Colby is a cheerleader for Scituate-Cohasset Youth Football, likes computers, math and reading and wants to open a restaurant with her father some day.

Luckily, Monday was the first night of school winter break. The girls planned to go out for pizza and then spend the night having fun talking and comparing notes. Sleep may not have figured into the equation. "We're probably not going to bed," Danielle said.

gatherings in Rwanda in December. That day more than 1,000 children showed up and all wanted a doll. Plans are to return in June with more dolls.

Ross, the Creative Stitch owner, welcomed the Selinger's idea about getting involved in the project and hopes to have 1,000 dolls completed by the summer.

"The need is so huge, this is a way that we can give back," Ross says. "Everyone in the Friday class embraced the idea of doing the dolls." The excitement and effort has spread to other classes at the shop. People are also welcome to take the pattern home.

Traci Gilbert of Cohasset, who takes a class at the Creative Stitch, was so enthusiastic that her teenaged daughter has gotten involved and has organized sophomores at Cohasset High for a CHABA Challenge to knit dolls for the project.

The doll's "skin" is knit with brown yarn in keeping with the culture of the region but the doll's clothing varies widely depending on the colorful yarn scraps used.

Selinger said her four-year-old granddaughter saw a doll and wanted one. The moment provided Selinger with the opportunity to talk her granddaughter about children in parts of Africa that have no toys.

When the dolls are completed, Selinger will take them to her friend, Jane Davis, in Chester, Vt. for the trip to Africa.

Drift into French Memories for Drift Away

Musical duo performs Saturday afternoons

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There is more than coffee and croissants at French Memories on Saturday afternoons.

Continuing from 3-5 p.m. this weekend and throughout the month of March, patrons to the popular Cohasset Village shop can also enjoy live music along with their coffee or tea and conversation.

Cohasset native J Place and Joe Micarelli of Hingham have teamed up in a duo, dubbed Drift Away, in which they play what Place describes as "soul rock" and old American standards.

Both men are veteran, professional musicians and play with other bands and at many other venues. J is a vocalist and plays the harmonica, and Micarelli plays the electric piano; the combination seems just right for the coffee shop.

"When you are a musician and trying to make a living you do a lot of different things," Place explains. Drift Away fits the small venue where a band would be too overpowering.

Place, who is a single father, said he often walks to French Memories where he has been a regular customer since he moved back to Cohasset a year ago. He has also posted flyers there about other performances. He said after talking to Anne Gabanelle, who owns the shop with her husband Jean Jacques, he found her open to the idea and Drift Away had its premier performance at French Memories three weeks ago to a good response.

He said Drift Away – which was formed about 18 months ago and has its roots in jazz and blues — is not about being loud therefore the coffee shop's patrons can still enjoy a little conversation with the music.

"It is nice to play in a café," Place says. "People sit down and really appreciate the music – it is refreshing for a musician."

The tunes, Place and Micarelli perform, are a "mixed bag" in terms of genre and include "I Can See Clearly Now," "Lean on Me," "Don't Know Why," "Dock of the Bay," "Somewhere Over the Rainbow," and "What a Wonderful World."

Place said people who wander into French Memories during the performance have been pleasantly surprised. "You can see it on their faces," Place says. "They say to the kids, 'here have some more hot chocolate.'"

Micarelli, who has worked with Place for more than three years, echoed Place's comments.

"It's working out great, it's a nice, warm atmosphere," says Micarelli, who is married and the father of two children. "People are pleasantly surprised to see music – then there are all the kids. It's fun to interact with the kids a little bit."

Micarelli, whose son is drummer and whose daughter is a singer, points out that many children today are not exposed to live music especially at the acoustic volume, the way music was originally intended to play.

He notes he does not have to wear his earplugs at French Memories. "It is nice to play really soft," he says.

Lance Norris of Cohasset, a regular at French Memories, is pleased with the addition of music.

"What could be better than sitting in a French café on a Saturday afternoon, smelling the bread bake and listening to the dulcet tones of the J Place duo?" he asks. "Outside of church, where else are you going to find live music in Cohasset?"

Jean Jacques Gabanelle said having live music is working out well at French Memories.

"They are very good," he says about Drift Away. "After we tried it for a couple of weeks, people were asking to have them come back."

Place, who just recorded a CD with the five-piece J Place Band of which Micarelli is also a member, says music has always been a part of him even though he did not come from a musical family.

"As John Lee Hooker said, 'if you have music in you – it just got to come out'," he says. "Music is not something you choose, it chooses you."

Place, who has lived overseas where he says people embrace jazz and blues, says he wants to do as good a job as possible as a musician "even if I'm not in the limelight making a ton of money.

"It's my life's blood and I know I'm good at it," he says.

Quilt Show benefits pediatric AIDS

Quilts from last year's show are beautifully displayed in the sanctuary of Second Congregational Church.

Now that winter is finally upon us, Cohasset has decided it's time for a taste of spring. They will roll out their finery in the form of the Annual Quilt Show & Luncheon, on Saturday, March 3rd at the Second Congregational Church, 43 Highland Ave. on picturesque Cohasset Common.

"When the idea of a small quilt show and elegant luncheon came to mind, we thought it would be just a one-time, cheerful way to spend a March Saturday," says Carol Sandblom, one of the event's original organizers. "It was not intended to be a fundraiser, but — if we made a little money, it would go to benefit a charity. We must have struck a chord: over the past 13 years we've shown close to 1000 quilts and donated over $18,000 to charity."

This year, as many as 80 beautiful quilts will be on display at the Second Congregational Church in Cohasset from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., on Saturday, March 3rd. Tickets are just $12 each and include a lovely sit-down luncheon where volunteer waiters serve homemade strata, salads and a selection of delicious desserts.

"We decorate the tables with linens and beautiful flowers to help bring a hint of spring to the midst of winter. It's really a fun way to spend a Saturday."

— Carol Sandblom, an organizer

"We decorate the tables with linens and beautiful flowers to help bring a hint of spring to the midst of winter," Sandblom added. "It's really a fun way to spend a Saturday."

The quilts displayed come from all over the South Shore and beyond. And each quilt has its own story, which is shared in the Quilt Show's program. This year's show includes both new and antique quilts, as well quilts from the 30s and 40s.

All proceeds will be shared between the Pediatric AIDS Charitable Trust and Boston Medical Center's Reach Out and Read Program. Tickets should be bought in advance at the Second Congregational Church office next to Cohasset Town Hall. Stop by the church office from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday to Friday, or call (781) 383-0345 for more information.

PSO announces annual Tele-a-thon and auction

The Fourth Annual Cohasset Parent School Organization Tele-a-thon and On-Line Auction will take place Thursday, March 22, from 7 to 9 p.m., and will be broadcast live from the Cohasset Middle High School Auditorium on Comcast Cable channel 22.

While viewing the talent show, tax-deductible credit card pledges can be called in to be entered into the raffles. AnswerQuick will take phone calls and securely processing credit card pledges for the fourth year in a row. The call in number to pledge support to the Cohasset public schools is 800-505-5241. To send a check instead of a credit card, make it payable to the Cohasset PSO and have it postmarked by March 20, in order to have your name entered into the raffles. Mail your pledge to Cohasset PSO , P.O. Box 30, Cohasset , MA. 02025.

Remember the larger the amount pledged, the more chances there will be to win raffle prizes. For example, for a pledge of $100, your name will be eligible for the drawing of all the $100 raffle categories. If your name is not drawn for any of the $100 raffle prizes, then your name is entered into the $75 raffle categories and so forth.

If multiples of $100 are pledged, your name is eligible for being drawn multiple times. For example, a $300 pledge allows your name to be entered three times in the $100 raffle categories and so forth. The more you pledge, the more opportunities you have to win.

Last year, several callers pledged $300 to $500 and it paid off; they actually won several spectacular items. This year, they will also feature a Grand Prize for the $100 raffle category, which will be Boston Harbor Hotel's Romance Getaway Package. This gift certificate for $780 consists of a breathtaking room overlooking Boston Harbor, a pair of robes customized with your initials, which will be on the bed waiting for you, along with champagne and strawberries. You can enjoy dinner for two in their nationally-acclaimed four-diamond restaurant Meritage which will include a special romance price-fixed dinner including tax and gratuity.

Donations will be listed in the silent on-line auction. The on-line auction will open for biding Friday, March 16, at 9 a.m., and close Friday, March 16. Remember to bookmark http://psotelethon.cmarket.com /cohassetpso and get ready to bid high and bid often to support all of the students in Cohasset's public schools. They hope to get a few over bids this year, so let's get the bell ringing, as they do on WGBH telethon.

There's still time to donate an item or service for the raffle or auction prizes to receive the extra advertising recognition by becoming one of their proud sponsors. Simply send an e-mail to psotelethondonations@yahoo.com. Just include name, address, phone, item or service that you would like donate, as well as a retail value of the donation. To sponsor, at the cost of $350, contact Claudia McKeon at 781-383-6125.

If interested in performing for the telethon send e-mail to cohassetpsotelethon@yahoo.com with the performers name, age and talent act. No phone calls; only e-mail entries will be considered.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA
BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!
If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...
THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!
This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.
A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR
Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?
MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)
Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.
IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!
The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?
THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...
IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...
DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.
MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!
If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.
WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

OPINION

EDITORIAL

'Tis the season?

What a difference a year makes. If someone was moving into town this month, they might get the impression that Cohasseters are not opinionated and are generally apathetic about their government.

We know that could not be further from the truth. Percolating just under the surface is the same passion for this seaside community and its future that there was last year – when the townspeople voted in a hotly contested Town Election and later, in a divisive override election.

We agree with selectman-candidate Paul Carlson that the "bruising battles of the last few years have reduced the appetite for campaigning and serving."

In Cohasset there have always been lot of smart people willing to put their time and energy into town boards and other volunteer activities. So we hope the "bruising battles" of last year — the town election and override election — have people simply wanting to take year off and that next year, election contests will be back.

Debate is a good thing because airing the issues helps increase awareness by bringing them to the forefront. This year that is going to be a bit more difficult.

However, here at the Mariner we would still like to conduct the Question of the Week for the School Committee and Selectman candidates: Ralph Dormitzer and Paul Carlson, and Adrienne MacCarthy and Peter Richardsson, respectively.

Here are this week's questions:

- For selectmen candidates:
Voters may have lost their appetite for Prop. 2-1/2 overrides. But how can Cohasset continue to balance its budget without them?

- For School Committee candidates:
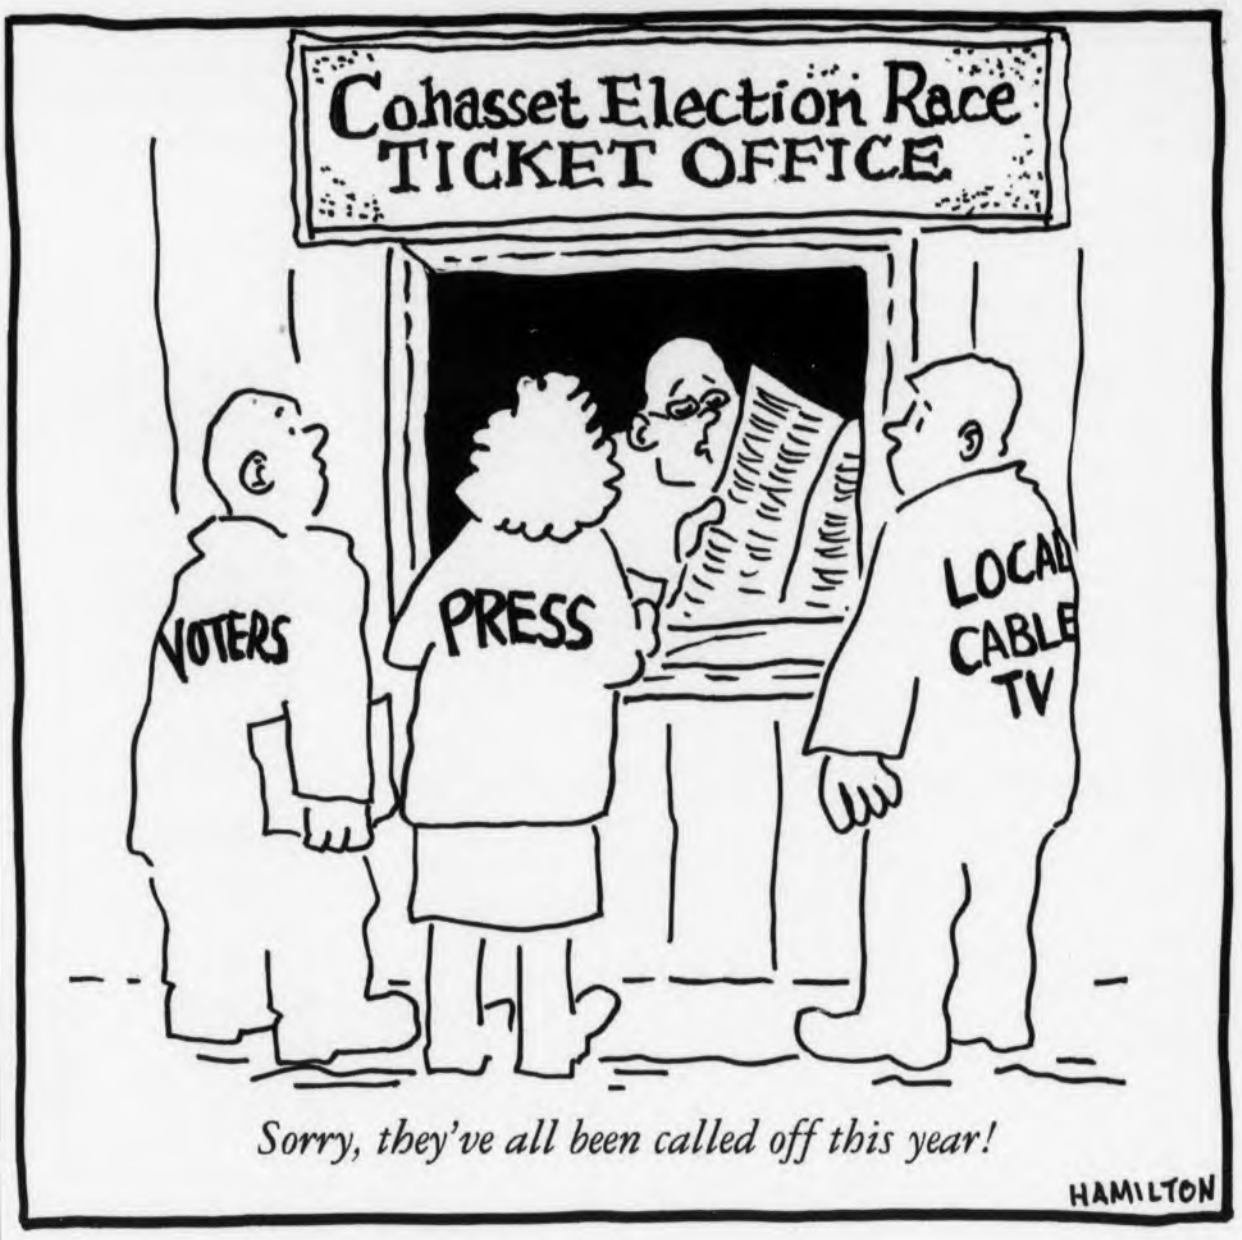
There's talk about more AP classes in Cohasset's quest to be the school system with "best and the brightest." With this focus, is enough being done for the students who might not be top achievers?



Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Wampanoags helped Pilgrims survive

COMMENTARY

WIGMORE PIERSON

As Governor of the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants, I am pleased to congratulate the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe on their recognition as a sovereign Native American nation by the U.S. Interior Department's Bureau of Indian Affairs.

Nearly 400 years ago, 102 people crowded onto a small merchant vessel called "Mayflower" and set sail seeking freedom from religious persecution in England. They were humble and deeply spiritual men, women and children. Decades later, they came to be called Pilgrims, a name they never called themselves.

After a perilous ocean journey, they anchored off Cape Cod until they could locate a suitable area to site their colony. While still aboard, 41 of the male passengers signed what came to be called the Mayflower Compact, considered the first document ever to describe a governance by, for and of the people. In late December of 1620, they came ashore at an area first called Plymouth by the explorer, Capt. John Smith.

The Pilgrims, who lost half their number during that first difficult year, probably would not have survived at all if it had not been for the assistance of the Wampanoags, particularly from the great Sachem Massasoit and his interpreter Squanto.

He taught the Pilgrims how and where to catch the abundant eels, how to use herring as fertilizer for corn and how to plant other crops indigenous to southeastern Massachusetts.

Squanto had learned English after surviving capture by an earlier expedition, which had landed him in Spain. He escaped to England, from which he eventually made his way back home. He taught the Pilgrims how and where to catch the abundant eels, how to use herring as fertilizer for corn and how to plant other crops indigenous to southeastern Massachusetts.

Massasoit and Plymouth Governor William Bradford maintained generally peaceful and mutually beneficial relations between their two peoples while both men lived. Massasoit even attended and celebrated Bradford's wedding to widow Alice Southworth in August 1623.

It was only after both men died that relations between the peoples degenerated, culminating in open conflict between colonists and Native Americans in King Philip's War of 1675-76. It was the large influx of settlers in the intervening decades and the second and third generations of leaders on both sides who failed to uphold the views of Bradford and Massasoit.

Governor Bradford often complained about the lack of spiritual life of those who came after the Pilgrims. Author Nathaniel Philbrick in his bestseller, "Mayflower", writes"...it was the material rewards of this life that increasingly became the focus of the Pilgrims' children and grandchildren."

Also according to Philbrick, Massasoit before he died expressed the hope that"...there might be love and amity after his death between his sons and them as there had been betwixt himself and them in former times."

Today, in recognition and appreciation for the assistance granted to our ancestors by the Wampanoag people, the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants annually awards college scholarships of $1,500 each to two high school graduates from the Wampanoag community.

Train-related happenings on 3A

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

For the past several weeks, this column has been about mostly non-Greenbush articles. This week we'll remedy that with several diverse Greenbush topics.

Route 3A Design and Construction — This summer, Route 3 A from the new Greenbush Station to Rose Hill will be a very busy place with lots of construction. There are five different construction projects that are likely to impact and add congestion to this half-mile stretch of 3A.

Starting at the Greenbush Station, we know that there will be station construction by the MBTA, which includes, in addition to a very large parking lot, a completely new entrance from 3A, including a traffic light..

Adjacent to the station to the south, will be Cohasset's first Transit Oriented Development (TOD). It will be built on the site of the "old Davenport" property, which is now demolished. The TOD will be a combination of residential and commercial uses and is being constructed by Connell Real Estate & Development Co. and will be called Old Colony Square. Permitting by the Planning Board should begin this spring, with construction starting this summer / fall.

As a part of its plans, the MBTA is also widening Route 3A at Lower King Street to include a left turn lane for southbound traffic. This will also restrict Route 3A traffic as construction gets under way this summer.

A new business development called Scituate Hill has been permitted by the Planning Board for the hillside immediately to the south of the Brass Kettle Building on 3A. Its entrance road to 3A will be opposite Lower King Street. Massachusetts Highway Department has permitted a traffic light at this location, as well.

And, lastly the Town of Cohasset will be using its recent TOD grant to construct a sidewalk from N. Main Street to the intersection on Lower King and Route 3A. Then, it will proceed along 3A to the new station. The sidewalk will connect to pedestrian access from Scituate Hill and Old Colony Square on its way to the Station. The sidewalk will also connect to the bike/walking path from the Greenbush Station to Wompatuck Park.

So, you can easily see that this part of Route 3A will be a very busy place, once construction starts. Please be careful as you drive along 3A. Be on the lookout for the hazards that accompany any construction project. Due to the large number of construction projects impacting this area, there will be workers on Route 3A for very many months.

Sohier Street Railroad Crossing — Last week, we uncovered a previously unknown circumstance (at least by this office and CBB, as well). We have spoken in prior articles about the need to relocate the "old" wires from the "old" poles on Sohier Street to the "new" poles, so the "old" poles can be removed and Sohier Street can be completed. If you look carefully as you drive down Sohier Street you will be able to see one "wire" still on the old poles. We had thought that this is what is commonly called a messenger cable. (A messenger cable is a strand of high-strength cable that is used to support other wires.) Last week we found out that it is not a mechanical support, but a fiber optic cable that is used by the schools to provide administrative connectivity between the school campuses. So, CBB is currently making the necessary arrangements to have this fiber cable relocated. Moving a fiber cable is a bit trickier that moving a normal electrical signal line due to the high technology splicing that must be done. We are coordinating this cable work with the schools so as to cause a minimum of disruption.

If you drive Border Street, you can see that the construction fencing is in place. The contractor is waiting for favorable weather and tides to begin his work.

And, lastly the Town of Cohasset will be using its recent TOD grant to construct a sidewalk from N. Main Street to the intersection on Lower King and Route 3A.

Late Train Survey – Many of you let us know your opinions regarding the MBTA General Manager's letter asking whether the Town would be interested in a train leaving Boston after the presently scheduled "late train" at 10 p.m.. At first, the results were very slow coming in. We publicized the survey for three successive weeks in these Mariner articles. This seemed to help increase the number of respondents. As of Feb. 6th, we had a total of 108 replies, 73 in favor and 35 opposed to a late train. We explained to residents that this poll was not intended to have statistical relevance. It was intended to be a straw poll in which residents could express their opinion, if they so desired. We feel that it does give a sense of the feelings for those residents who care about this issue. We reported these final data to the Town Manager. Throughout the survey period the "in favor of late train votes" have generally been in a 2 to 1 ratio to the "against" votes.

The following observations about the votes were also included in our report:

- Those in favor of the late train are not abutters to the train tracks
- The abutters and a few others are adamantly opposed to a late train
- Some of the yes votes may not reflect on the practicality of the actual process of getting from a venue of interest (Celtics game, Red Sox game, theater, etc.) to South Station at some time after 10:00 PM to catch the late train.

We received a few other comments about the scheduling, not relevant to the late train issue, but interesting nonetheless. One of these was the fact that there are Cohasset residents who work in the Boston hospitals and have early hours. Thus, the present schedule would not serve them well at the start of their work day, nor for their mid afternoon commute back to Cohasset. Additional service for this need may be a plus.

Several respondents seemed interested in whether the Selectmen would hold a public hearing on this issue. This might bear consideration.

Meeting with Cashman – Last Friday we held a very good project review meeting with the contractor, CBB. As we are all aware, there are a lot of items outstanding that need to be completed. Some of these pertain to unique circumstances of a specific resident. Some pertain to the entire Town or a neighborhood, such as completion of Lower King Street or Pond Street crossings. We have developed an Open Item list that we review with CBB on a periodic basis. Quite a few of these open items are waiting for better weather or, in some cases, for higher priority work to be completed. As important as we think certain small projects are, in CBB's overall scheme of things they are not a very high a priority. The priority is generally out of our control. We do feel that our job is to keep and monitor the list of open items so these smaller projects don't ever fall through the cracks. The MBTA and CBB keep assuring us that they will be done. We will do our best to not let them forget.

Non Greenbush - Border Street Construction – We mentioned in a prior article, that the construction will be starting shortly for rebuilding the Border Street seawall from the Mill River Marina to Atlantica. If you drive Border Street, you can see that the construction fencing is in place. The contractor is waiting for favorable weather and tides to begin his work. When work does start, Border Street will probably be reduced to a single lane. So be very careful and drive slowly through this congested area.

Anna Nicole and the news

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

I hope at least one of you is interested enough to ask where I was last week when I should have been filling this space with words.

Well, would you believe it if I told you I was in Florida seeking to assert my rightful claim as the father of Anna Nicole Smith's baby?

I was still 157th back from the sign-up desk when I ran out of money and had to abandon my plans for the future with the $450 million . . er, the child.

But already I digress . . .

Anna Nicole is only the latest in that peculiarly American breed that is famous for being famous...

What is it with us — and I include myself because, as much as I hate to admit it, I have spent the greater part of the past two weeks immobilized, desperately changing channels to get the latest in the demise of the bosomy former Playmate of the Year?

Anna Nicole is only the latest in that peculiarly American breed that is famous for being famous, although the fact that she went all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court on the hunt for the $450 million left to her by her 90-year-old husband of 14 months may lift her out of that category.

The thing that amazed me was the amount of time the cable news channels devoted to Anna's untimely passing at a time when there was fighting in Iraq, illegal aliens were pouring over our borders and a female astronaut was hurrying to confront a love rival wearing an adult diaper.

The main event seems to be a free-for-all to be named father of her daughter, Dannielynn, among Anna's former lovers, including her attorney, Howard K. Stern (no not that one); freelance photographer Larry Birkhead; Prince Frederic von Anhalt, Zsa Zsa Gabor's husband; and her late husband, J. Howard Marshall II, who died in 1995 but thoughtfully left behind some frozen sperm for the occasion.

The only former lover who has not shown up to stake a claim appears to be Billy Smith, the cook at the fried chicken restaurant in Mexia, Texas, that she married at 17 when she was known as Vicky Lynn Hogan and fathered her first child, the one that died as she was giving birth to Dannielynn.

The picture I will remember longest from the TV coverage is that of Fox News Channel's Steve Harrigan, last seen broadcasting from Baghdad, standing in front of Anna's house in the Bahamas and repeating over and over, "We think Dannielynn and Howard K. Stern are inside."

I don't think we ever found out who was in that house because the owner, J. Ben Thompson, changed the locks when Anna died. He was suing her for the house at the time. She claimed he gave it to her. You wouldn't expect a man to give a house to a bosomy blonde who was Playmate of the Year, would you?

I hope Fox didn't pull Steve back from Baghdad just for that. It would be like going from the editorial page to the comic page, wouldn't it?

Oscar night and some California dreamin'

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

L.A. Story (part 1):

Oscar night is the signature Southern California event, and although I don't have time to watch the whole show I usually try to catch the first eight or nine hours. I do love movies, and the combination of great films with sunny scenes of beautiful people strolling around Los Angeles always reminds me of my stint there in the late 80s, when I realized my dream of working in special effects, and soon abandoned it so I could get some sleep. For the next few weeks I'd like to write about my first impressions of California, its people, its climate, and its tendency to fling you out of bed at six in the morning.

On the whole, native Californians are wonderfully warm, happy, carefree people. And why wouldn't they be? They live in California. But the drawback to their earnestness is that they're completely immune to sarcasm. Imagine how hard it would be to fathom a deliberately ironic comment like, "I used to hate the violence on local news until I became a serial killer," when you take everything at face value. "Do you... really like the news or are you, um, joking?" they'll ask. "I'm joking. I can't stand it," you'll say. "They blow everything I do out of proportion." And they'll look at you like a deer in the headlights, trying to unravel the complex English-like language you've been speaking.

They're not stupid. They just aren't used to being lied to all the time, which is essentially what kidding is: saying things that are patently false over and over with a straight face. Why anyone would choose to do that, given the freedom to be completely open and honest that California's culture affords, is beyond baffling to them. So as a New Englander you have to make adjustments, either laughing loudly as you deliver a punch line or peppering your speech with, "not literally of course!" Happily the joke isn't spoiled; they're fully able to enjoy the humor once it's been pointed out to them.

On the whole, native Californians are wonderfully warm, happy, carefree people. And why wouldn't they be? They live in California.

Now, in case you have the impression that I feel superior to anyone let me state for the record that I'm about the least sophisticated guy on the planet. If you met me in person you'd be convinced I fell off a turnip truck and cracked my skull at a young age. As proof I need only briefly describe my first few months in Southern California.

Looking for an apartment in an unfamiliar city is always a bit stressful, all the more so when you're right out of college and can't afford much more than the average American spends on donuts every month. Rattraps you wouldn't have boarded your dog in on Day 1 begin to look positively charming by Day 4. So on Day 6 I was quite happy to find an available rm in a 3br apt in a nice-looking nbrhd for $400/mo — about three-quarters of my starting salary at nearby Southern Star Productions.

I had lived in this apartment with two other guys for a good month before someone informed me I'd moved to the biggest gay enclave in Los Angeles. In my defense, the name West Hollywood sounded almost exactly like Hollywood, and didn't raise any pink flags with me. I wasn't really bothered by the news, but certain neighborhood eccentricities suddenly made a lot more sense. It occurred to me that both my roommates might be gay too. For one thing they ate fresh cake at every meal. For another, the guy who owned the couch forbade me to put my feet on it. At the time this seemed like conclusive evidence, but the fact is nowadays I would gladly eat fresh cake at every meal if I were allowed, and half the quality time I spend with my children is devoted to slapping their grubby feet off my couch and fetching the vacuum.

The truth is, if you took away our wives most husbands could easily pass for stereotypical gay men. We can not only name, but recognize on sight over 150 different shades of white paint — Linen White, Atrium White, Dove White, Decorator White, Brilliant White, Lancaster Whitewash, Whindham Cream (say when), Super White, Navajo White, China White, Bone White, etc. We cry every time the Iron Giant blows up. Secretly we're huge Jane Austen fans, like to dance, and prefer pina coladas to Guinness. We're like gay women in men's bodies or something.

Anyway, living with the cake eaters was affordable, which was the main criterion then. After rent, student loan payments and a car payment I had just enough money left over for gas and three cans of Campbell's Chunky Vegetable Soup per day. The original Johnny Rocket's was a brand new restaurant on Melrose Avenue across from Southern Star, and I marveled at how my boss could afford to eat $7 hamburgers there, have her new BMW detailed every Tuesday morning, and save enough quarters to do her laundry on the weekends.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, an enclave of some sort south of Boston.

In our next episode, John finds an unopened 12-pack of cheese burritos in a dumpster near his apartment, and has his first celebrity encounter..

'High energy' state rep keeps his perspective

that week that had raced through this entire family.

But, despite it all, Bradley, a former Plymouth County prosecutor and "triple Eagle" — BC High, Boston College and Boston College Law School graduate — is quick to laugh and handles questions about myriad issues with ease. He is proud of the fact he works in the private sector for the Boston law firm, Thornton & Naumes. He says when the legislature was first envisioned it was a "citizens' legislature," not one made up of full-timers.

'I'm a high-energy person," Bradley says. "And working in the private sector helps me keep a balance and perspective. Sometimes legislators can be too insulated – this is supposed to be a citizens' legislature and we are not supposed to be removed from reality."

While his counterpart in the Senate, state Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, enjoyed an open-door relationship with the Romney administration, Bradley — who went to law school with Gov. Deval Patrick's deputy chief of staff — will now have that benefit. In fact, he had a private meeting with Patrick last Tuesday (Feb. 13).

Bradley, who represents the Third Plymouth District, consisting of Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and North Scituate, embarks on the new session with a committee chairmanship; he is now House Chairman of the Joint Committee on Election Laws.

"It's good for the district – it's a good return on investment," Bradley says, noting that Hedlund, who was recently named minority whip, has moved up into a leadership position on the Senate side. "We are a good team," he says.

A key issue that will come before the Election Laws Committee is "same-day, voter registration," Bradley explains, noting about a half dozen bills have been filed on the issue. Essentially the legislation would allow voters to walk in on polling day, and say: "Here's my license, I want to vote," he says. The cost of the program, which would have to be addressed, would entail additional training of election workers and having equipment, such as laptops, available to check the state centralized voter list to prevent voter fraud. For example, if a voter comes into the polls at the Hingham Middle School and says he used to live with his mother in Weymouth – the election official would need to ensure the individual got switched immediately to Hingham, so he did not go back to Weymouth to vote because his friend is running for City Council, Bradley explained.

Other legislation includes handicap access to voting machines, which is still a problem in some areas of the state including assistance for the visually impaired. Also full financial disclosure and reporting requirements on advertisements and Internet blogs that can be critical of candidates. Bradley cited an example of a selectwoman in another community, who was opposed to a "big box" store coming to town. An advertisement critical of her position included a link to a blog that was also highly critical. It was determined after the election that the large retailer backed the blog.

"The internet is a new frontier that legislation does not currently speak to," Bradley notes. "But we need to know who is paying the bills in these cases."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley welcomes a constituent, Vin Bucca, to his office hours on Friday night at the Sons of Italy Hall. Bradley, now in his fourth term, has been appointed as House Chair of the Joint Committee on Election Laws.

"The thrust of the legislation coming before us is how to get more people involved in the process, how to get more people registered to vote and how to get more people to the polls."

— State Rep. Garrett Bradley, House chairman of the Joint Committee on Election Laws

Bradley says he is fortunate to be able to call on experienced town clerks, Marion Douglas (Cohasset). Eileen McCracken (Hingham), Janet Bennett (Hull) and Bernice Brown (Scituate), for guidance as "same day registration" and other legislation before his committee.

"The thrust of the legislation coming before us is how to get more people involved in the process, how to get more people registered to vote and how to get more people to the polls," Bradley says.

As these bills reach the House, it is Bradley's job, a committee chairman, to organize the debate and respond to proposed amendments. In a nutshell, committees conduct hearings where they hear testimony on bills; they report a bill our favorably or unfavorably (or say it needs further study). Bills then go to the floor for debate; and differences are ironed out between the Senate and House before a bill is sent to the governor's desk.

Legislation

In addition to his duties as a committee chairman, Bradley has also filed legislation that should help the district.

An issue that Bradley sees as key to helping the bottom line in his district, is reforming retired teachers' healthcare benefits. If passed, the legislation could result in a substantial increase in state aid.

Due to early retirements there has been a large increase in teachers' health insurance assessments that are billed back to the towns. For example, Cohasset allows teachers upon retirement to go into the state insurance pool until 65, when they are Medicare eligible. Cohasset has a 70/30 split for teachers' health insurance, meaning the town pays 70 percent of the cost with the teacher picking up 30 percent. But when the teacher retires, he or she goes into the state system where the split is 90/10. The town, in this case Cohasset, has to pick up the additional 20 percent that shows up as an annual assessment of $750,000.

"I have filed legislation to relieve the community of this retired teachers' health insurance assessment," Bradley said.

He explained that he spoke to Gov. Patrick about the issue and he is receptive to the idea. "He agreed that given the cost of health insurance and the amount of local aid – there should be a way to relieve communities of this burden."

Bradley said towns like Cohasset adopted the concept of the state handling retired teachers' health insurance about 30 years ago to save on administrative costs.

Other legislation that Bradley has filed includes:

• Extending for an additional 10 years a federal reimbursement program for the upgrade of the Aquarion Water Treatment Plant in Hingham that also serves North Cohasset. The program should have allowed reimbursements on interest payments on the loan, but did not, Bradley said. Without this legislation, water users would see their bills rise.

• Establishing reimbursements and tax credits to gas stations that install ethanol pumps. (The closest commercial ethanol pump is in New Jersey).

• Removing all mercury-based preservatives from vaccines given to children under three and pregnant women. He noted, while mercury-based preservatives have been removed from some vaccines, it has not been removed from flu shots that are now recommended for pregnant women and infants. "I am pro-vaccine," Bradley said. "My position is about the preservatives which allow the drug companies to manufacture the vaccines cheaper because they can mass produce them." Bradley said New York, California, and three other states have enacted similar legislation.

• Requiring seatbelts be installed on school buses. Bradley said he received an email from Michaela Brickley, a fourth-grader at the South School in Hingham, asking why school buses do not require seatbelts. He said one major issue preventing this requirement is cost. "As a father of three, I find this unacceptable," he said. "I look forward to moving this bill forward with Michaela and her class's input."

• Raising the high school dropout age from 17 to 18 years of age. While this is not a major problem in the district, as a citizen and taxpayer, Bradley asks, "Why should be pay for 11 years of education but allow kids to drop out before the last year?"

Bradley knows with the possibility of a billion-dollar shortfall looming, tough fiscal choices are facing the new governor and Legislature in fiscal 2008.

He says the state has lost 150,000 jobs since 2001, corporate profits have leveled off, and capital gains are way down due to the sluggish housing market.

Bradley says he will look at the governor's municipal package — which is a bundle of proposals designed to help communities — and if it is good for the district, he will vote for it.

One example that he might not support is a local meals tax, which Patrick has floated. "The more I am involved in government – the more I realize the importance of local government," Bradley says. When the issue surfaced a few years ago, Bradley consulted with town managers in his district, and determined that a meals tax would like help larger cities but not smaller towns. He plans on discussing the issue with town officials again.

Despite all the challenges and balance he must find in his family life, Bradley enjoys being a state representative and has no plans to leave or to run for the state Senate.

"Unless people in the Third Plymouth District forcibly retire me, I like what I am doing in the House," Bradley says. "With three towns plus part of a fourth, I can manage to make it everywhere I want to be," he says.

Town Election to be a sleeper

In Cohasset, it is very unusual for "open seats" on the Board of Selectmen and School Committee to go unchallenged.

However, it is not uncommon for incumbents who are up for reelection — whether they are running for the Planning Board, Library Trustee, Board of Health, Sewer Commission, Water Commission or Recreation Commission — to be unopposed.

Carlson said he was as surprised as anyone there are no competitive races this year. "While I can only guess what motivates people," he said. "I believe that the bruising battles for the last few years have reduced the appetite for campaigning and service.

"Many people for various reasons are tired of politics," he said. "Cohasset has always had a healthy democracy and I hope that the willingness to serve will revive. Vigorous elections are critically important to the success of democracy at any level of government."

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer, who is seeking a second term, said the new candidates for selectman and School Committee (Carlson and Richardsson) got off to a strong start almost from the day that nomination papers were available, which made a challenge to their campaigns more difficult.

Dormitzer said a candidate who challenges an incumbent looks at the dissatisfaction index to calculate if it is possible to defeat the incumbent. "Conversely, if there is reasonable satisfaction with the incumbent, the expenditure of energy, time and money makes the challenge unattractive," he said.

There was a potential race for Water Commission but Reginald Murphy of Linden Drive – who would have challenged incumbent commissioner Nathaniel Palmer - did not return his nomination papers, Douglas said.

Douglas said she is happy that all the seats will be filled - meaning someone has pulled papers for every seat. "But what a difference from the past several years," she said.

Last year's Town Election, which featured "hot" races on both the Board of Selectmen and School Committee, drew 48 percent or 2432 of the town's 5099 registered voters. The year before 44 percent went to the polls.

Here are the other candidates, who were not mentioned above: James Richardson, Lillian Curley, and Daniel J. Martin (Recreation Commission, 3 seats); Stacey Weaver, Sarah Pease and Barbara Power (Board of Library Trustees, 3 seats); Elsa Miller (Board of Assessors); Ralph Perroncello (Housing Authority); Steve Bobo (Board of Health); Al Moore (Planning Board); and Sean Cunning (Sewer Commission).

Friday, March 9, is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting, which will be held Saturday, March 31, and for the Annual Town Election which will be held Saturday, April 7.

Candidates Corner

Carlson thanks volunteers

Selectman candidate Paul Carlson wants to thank all the volunteers and donors who have helped launch his campaign.

Paul will be researching town issues and writing responses to the questions posed by the Editor of the Cohasset Mariner for the next few weeks.

This past week he met with the Elder Affairs Council and attended the meeting of the Stormwater Committee. Both sessions were very informative, raising issues worthy of substantial attention and energy during the next three years.

For more information on Paul's background and positions, please visit his website at CarlsonForSelectman.com.

Palmer files paper for reelection

Nathaniel Palmer has turned in the required documentation to qualify for re-election to the Cohasset Water Commission. The candidate explains, "Three years ago, when I first sought this position, I knew I had big shoes to fill. Then my biggest concern was whether I could distinguish myself among the significant contributions of my fellow Commissioners."

He adds, "It has been a steep learning curve, but I am grateful to have the opportunity to make tangible contributions to the quality of life in Cohasset."

As explained by Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt, "Nathaniel has led the Commission through the multitude of technology upgrades implemented over the last few years, and as we continue our aggressive capital improvements to the water system, he is a tremendous asset."

Elected to Vice Chairman of the Water Commission last year, upon his anticipated re-election Nathaniel will continue to take an active role on issues of process and technology improvements within Water Department operations.

Pratt adds, "Nathaniel has been a visionary to bring technology the Department's operations, he has worked tirelessly to implement automation to the treatment plant operations, establish a base GIS/GPS mapping system for the department, and coordinated the installation of a system wide security surveillance system."

'It is not easy being green'

TOWARDS A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JoAnn Mirise

Two thousand seven. This is my year to start making significant changes toward living sustainably. I decided this on my own. No one is paying me to live this way. It didn't come to me in a dream. I just decided. And despite the book "It's Easy Being Green" that sits on my desk as one of the many references I regularly turn to, it is becoming clear that it is decidedly not easy being green. In fact, I have found it frustrating, guilt-ridden, time-consuming, subject to intense scrutiny from others, and most of all inconvenient.

And the truth is I haven't been this happy in years.

I have always been aware of my role in protecting the environment: I buy organic when possible, I recycle, I support farmer's markets, I use organic lawn care and natural cleaners at home, and I dabble in some causes (memberships to organizations, signing virtual petitions, etc.). But I still had the nagging suspicion that there was more, much more, that I could be doing. I started upping the ante during the middle of last year. I read every book I could, subscribed to thought-provoking magazines and signed up for a number of Web sites dedicated to conscious living. Spending hours hunched over a big table at the library I got lost in fantasies that the research I was doing would lead to big, big things. I at least looked the part with my piles of books, laptop whirring and glasses perched ever-so-scholarly at the end of my nose. But was I accomplishing anything? I had no deadline, no paper to turn in, no boss to report to. After all of this time spent, I was left with a vacuous feeling of being so far from making a difference, yet at the same time feeling so incredibly inspired to try.

A lot of people have asked me what specifically was my tipping point — what propelled me to step up action. As with any complicated issue there is never one answer. For me, one aspect was that I was so tired of being duped. Tired of being duped by a government that used the tragic events of 9/11 to erroneously justify a war. Tired of being duped by advertisers who send the message that SUVs are a safe family car that will provide a closer connection to nature. The fact is that most people do not come close to using the features of these vehicles, certainly not enough to justify the damage they do to the environment. And I was tired of being duped by the overall American sentiment that more is better. If more is better than why are we such an obese, stressed and depressed nation?

Most of my motives, though, come from a less caustic place. I started to understand what people had meant when they said they worry that the earth won't be around for our children, or at the very least, life would be very, very hard for them. Like most parents I fell into the deepest love possible when my children were born and realized that the love expanded to my children's children who I would likely never know but for whom I already felt responsible. It occurred to me that this love, harnessed on a global scale, could be the ultimate alternative energy source.

More immediately though, there was a deep level of happiness, humor and fulfillment that had surfaced in me. I liken it to starting a healthy eating and exercising plan after ignoring the need for too long. There are a couple of weeks of feeling hungry, deprived and uncomfortable. But then the benefits start to kick-in like having more energy, breathing deeper, looking better — feeling good. How could I deny this and go back to old ways? No way!

So I continue on my bumpy, uncharted path of sustainable living. To do my part. To honor my interconnectedness to all things. To do all of this despite knowing there are no guarantees. Because I can't go back.

JoAnn Mirise is a writer and graphic designer grateful to be living in this beautiful village by the sea.

Sally Ayers, Cohasset resident and treat-provider for Sustainable Cohasset's Film Series, shares her thoughts on being green in the kitchen.

1 cup butter – I had Cabots Creamery on hand. Cabots is a far-reaching farm co-operative so I suspect this butter has traveled further than from Vermont. It is also not organic.

1 cup sugar – I used turbinado, which is minimally processed, however, it's imported from Africa!

1 cup brown sugar – I suspect this one has traveled far and has a big petro-chemical footprint.

2 eggs – Yes! Score! Mrs. McCarthy's from Rockland. And I walked to natural foods store, All the Best, in the Village, to get them.

2 tbsp. water – I'd like to think sustainable here, but who knows. Canada? Ukraine?

1 tsp. vanilla – It is organic, however, South America is a long way for this little glass bottle to come from. But I did buy it from a food co-op.

1 1/2 cups flour – I used organic whole wheat pastry – good, but milled in Oregon.

1 tsp. salt – This one I could have harvested locally, however, I used sea salt from the co-op.

1 tsp. baking soda – Sodium bicarbonate – sounds simple enough, but I have no idea how or where this is processed.

3 cups rolled oats – I used organic and walked to the store, but still they are not exactly a local crop.

Handful chopped figs, dates and raisins – all the way from California.

Now for my bad: I ran out of time and used the Cuisinart to chop the figs and dates and the Kitchen Aid to mix it all up. Next time – no power. And that is my promise!

Oh, and then there is the oven…

Health Notes

Forms of arthritis can be a pain

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Lets face it, if you have ever complained about arthritis, you're not alone. One in five adults in the United States has doctor diagnosed arthritis. Half of adults 65 years and over have reported an arthritis diagnosis: the nation's leading cause of disability. Each year, arthritis results in 750,000 hospitalizations and 36 million outpatient visits. Direct medical costs were more than $51 billion in 1997. Arthritis is not just an old person's disease. Nearly two-thirds of people with arthritis are younger than 65. Although arthritis affects children and people of all racial and ethnic groups, it is more common among women and older adults.

The most common form of arthritis, Osteoarthritis, is also known as degenerative joint disease and occurs following trauma to the joint, following an infection of the joint or simply as a result of aging. An estimated 21 million adults have osteoarthritis, over a million in Massachusetts alone.

While evidence of osteoarthritis has been discovered in dinosaurs, the first known traces of human arthritis date back as far as 4500 BC to skeletal remains of Native Americans in Tennessee and Kansas. Evidence of arthritis has been found throughout history, from Ötzi, a mummy (circa 3000 BC) found along the border of modern Italy and Austria, to the Egyptian mummies circa 2590 BC. The Bible cites one of Job's complaints apparently to be arthritis (Job 7:3-4 and 30:16-17).

Around 500 BC willow bark gained popularity when it was discovered to help relieve some of the aches and pains of arthritis. In the early 1820s, European scientists began to scientifically study the chemical compound in willow bark, salicin, that alleviated the symptoms. However, salicin was found to be noxious to the stomach. Almost 80 years later, in 1897, an employee, Felix Hoffman of Bayer Company — then a dye production company — discovered how to make salicin less irritating to the stomach. Hoffman was attempting to help his father who suffered from arthritis. In 1899, Bayer Company trademarked Hoffman's discovery under the name "Aspirin." Today it is believed that over a trillion tablets of aspirin have been sold worldwide.

Osteoarthritis commonly affects the hand, feet, spine and the large weight-bearing joints, such as the hips and knees, although in theory, any joint in the body can be affected. In time, the affected joints appear larger, are stiff and painful, and usually feel worse, the more they are used throughout the day, thus distinguishing it from rheumatoid arthritis.

Among adults with joint osteoarthritis, moderate physical activity at least 3 times per week can reduce the risk of arthritis-related disability by 47 percent. Weight control and injury prevention measures can lower a person's risk for osteoarthritis. Self-management education programs can reduce pain and costs. The Arthritis Foundation Self-Help Program teaches people how to manage arthritis and lessen its effects. Their 6-week course reduces arthritis pain by 20 percent and physician visits by 40 percent. However, most people choose to take a few aspirins, ibuprophin or other non-steroidal anti-inflamatories.

Gout — Gout is caused by deposition of uric acid crystals in the joint that results in subsequent inflammation. People who are overweight or obese report more Gout than thinner people and such arthritis has been called the rich mans ailment. Additionally, there is a less common form of gout that is caused by the formation of needle shaped crystals of calcium pyrophosphate. An estimated 5.1 million adults report having a doctor diagnosis of Gout.

Rheumatoid Arthritis and Psoriatic Arthritis — Rheumatoid Arthritis and Psoriatic Arthritis autoimmune diseases in which the body attacks itself, can affect multiple organs and cause widespread symptoms. About 2.1 million adults are affected by rheumatoid arthritis. Pain from rheumatoid arthritis is usually worse in the morning compared to the classic pain of osteoarthritis where the pain worsens over the day as joints are used.

Treatment is divided into disease-modifying antirheumatic drugs (DMARDs), anti-inflammatory agents and analgesics. DMARDs have been found to produce durable remissions and delay or halt disease progression. In particular they prevent bone and joint damage from occurring secondary to the uncontrolled inflammation. Early treatment is important as such damage is usually irreversible. Anti-inflammatories and analgesics improve pain and stiffness but do not prevent joint damage or slow disease progression.

Fibromyalgia — Common symptoms include pain, aching, stiffness, and swelling in or around the joints. Some forms of arthritis such as Septic arthritis is caused by joint infection. About 3.7 million adults have fibromyalgia.

Since most of us get arthritis sooner or later, I guess we just have to grin and bear it.

Steve Bobo is a longtime member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Defeat Holbrook; secure ticket to postseason

For a team as young as the Cohasset High girls basketball squad, anything beyond the 20-game regular season can be considered a bonus.

Well, it's bonus time for the Lady Skippers, as a 58-29 romp over Holbrook last Thursday earned them another trip to the Division 4 big dance.

Lacey Richardson led the attack with 18 points, followed by Kayla Farren (12 points) and Haley Haracz (10). Haracz added 14 rebounds on the night, and Carly Salerno joined Farren to play a solid game in the backcourt for the Skippers (10-10).

ROCKLAND - Talk about making a statement.

The Rockland High wrestling team had defeated Cohasset by just five points during the regular season, so many would have likely expected a similarly close encounter in Wednesday night's Div. 3 South semifinal.

Not so fast said the Bulldogs, who came up with some big wins – none bigger than at 125 – to come away with a 44-21 victory over the Skippers.

"They just completely outwrestled us," Cohasset head coach Torin Sweeney said afterward. "It's a credit to them."

Cohasset took a quick 9-0 lead, with Rudy Helboch winning via forfeit at 103 pounds and Jack Murphy pulling out three points for his team with a late reversal to win a 6-4 decision. Rockland's Matt Mahoney got his team on the board with a first period pin at 119 pounds, setting the stage for the turning point of the match.

Ryan McLellan, a sectional champion at 119, certainly had to be considered the favorite on this night against Rockland's Andy Daigle at 125. Daigle, however, after going down 4-2 through one period, stunned McLellan with a pin just 28 seconds into the second period.

"That was a big match for us," Rockland head coach Tim Brown said. "McLellan pinned him the last time they wrestled and was the heavy favorite tonight. Andy just wrestled really tough."

Cohasset's David Toomey won the match of the night at 130, outlasting Tom Molloy in a 22-20 slugfest. The second period alone saw Molloy outscore Toomey 11-9, but Toomey came up with a big takedown late to win it.

With the team score tied at 12, the Bulldogs took over, winning seven of the next eight matches. Rob Downey (135) and All-State-bound John Bellrose (160) won via pin, and Chase Hoffman (171) earned five points for Rockland with a 17-2 win.

Adam Smith, who will compete at All-States this weekend in the 145-pound weight class, earned three points for the Skippers (16-13) with a 9-2 decision at 140.

Both Nick Cambi of Cohasset and Rockland's Petros Hologitas moved up in weight class to wrestle at 285 pounds for the last match of the night. Cambi, a state champion at 189, did well against Hologitas' aggressive style, going ahead 7-1 through two periods before getting a pin just 14 seconds into the third.

It was a disappointing way to end the season for the Skippers, but Sweeney said the year overall was a good one for his young squad.

"We had eight freshmen and sophomores in the lineup tonight, to show you how young we are," he said. "I think we made some tremendous growth from the beginning of the season with those kids. The experience they got this year was excellent, and I'm really looking forward to next season."

Defeat Carver/Sacred Heart to earn tourney berth

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

The Cohasset High hockey team took care of business in a major way Tuesday night.

Needing two points in their final two games to qualify for the Div. 3 state tournament – and not wanting to leave anything to chance in Wednesday's season finale against South Shore Voke – the Skippers pounded Carver/Sacred Heart, 12-1, at Bridgewater Ice Arena.

Andrew Smith led the scoring brigade with a hat trick, followed by three teammates with two scores each: Charlie Czerkawski, Brendan Doonan and Alex Goetz. Pat Doonan, Corbin Faber and Conor Holway all scored once apiece.

With the game being so one-sided, Skippers head coach Bob Walsh was allowed to be rather liberal with his line usage. All the lines saw equal shifts, and Andy McKenna, a freshman backup goalie, even saw time at forward in the first period.

Cohasset had its last tune-up for the postseason Wednesday night at Pilgrim against South Shore Voke. It was Senior Night for the Vikings, but the Skippers were looking to ruin the party and make amends for a 6-0 loss to the same Voke team earlier in the season.

The Skippers acquitted themselves relatively well in a 4-2 loss, with the star of the show being sophomore goalie Johnny

Martin's dunk tells it all as season ends on high note

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The Cohasset High boys basketball team's season came to a close last week with an outstanding performance over Holbrook. The team won 67-35 and dominated every aspect of the game.

When the game started, neither team looked ready to play, both making amateur mistakes. With about six minutes left in the first half Cohasset turned it on and began to pull away, going up 10 after junior co-captain Pat McCarthy hit two free throws after a technical foul on Holbrook's coach.

The rest of the half was very much the same as the Skippers played mistake-free offense and solid defense. At halftime Cohasset led 39-20 and was spreading the scoring around. Co-captains Justin Alexander and McCarthy both had 11 points at the half and both finished with 15. Junior Kyle Pinkus also had five points in the first half.

In the second, the story didn't change as the Skippers continued their dominance over Holbrook, playing the backups for most of the second half.

And then, out of nowhere, it happened.

Sophomore sensation Danny "D-Mart" Martin leaped into the air following a missed foul shot, grabbed the ball in mid-air, and slammed it in for two points. The entire crowd and Cohasset's bench went completely nuts when they saw this; Martin had just dunked over everybody.

"All season, players, coaches and fans have been asking me when I'm going to dunk in a game," Martin said. "I would always say, When I get the chance,' and that chance finally came tonight. It was exciting and good to finally do."

Martin once again showed his bright future with the Cohasset basketball program, amazing everyone that came to watch the game that night. He finished with 10 points, 10 rebounds and six blocks on the night.

The dunk truly summed up the night for both Cohasset and Holbrook as the Skippers went on to win the game easily and really spread their wings over Holbrook. All but two Cohasset players scored and everyone made some sort of contribution to the team's win.

Junior Dave Snowdale finished off his strong season with four points, fellow junior Mark Flibotte scored six points, and another junior, Ryan Crough, chipped in with five. Another sophomore on the rise, Marcus Charles, completed his breakthrough season with a seven-point performance.

For one Skipper, though, it would be his final game wearing the blue and white. Alexander played his last basketball game as a Skipper and played very well. All season long, Alexander has had to deal with being the lone senior on the team and it appeared no one could have done it better. He gave it his all every single night and had his best basketball season in his entire four years.

"I'm going to miss the team," Alexander said. "It was a good season, and a good group of guys."

The win gave Cohasset its eighth victory of the season, more than the past two seasons combined. They only missed the tournament by two wins and that's a good sign for next year.

"We've taken a lot of positive things out of the season," head coach Dorian Bryant said. "We've got a good shot at getting to the tourney next year. We've got to work hard to make it though."

Bryant also mentioned how it felt to win the final game, saying, "I'm pleased to win it, especially since everyone is coming back except for Justin. It's a nice achievement."

The team will look to turn it around next year and finally make the tournament, something they have not done in quite a while. With the team looking relatively the same, they will still have a large gap to fill with the loss of starting center Alexander, but the team is positive about the outcome of the season. Look for Cohasset to be competitive for that South Shore League title in years to come.

Wade. Wade stopped four Voke breakaways – two of them being 2-on-0's – to keep his team in the game.

It was a 3-2 contest with a minute left in the game, when Walsh pulled Wade to go for the equalizer. Voke wound up scoring an empty-netter to finish it off.

Holway and Brendan Doonan scored Cohasset's goals, with Ian Lyster and Tommy Buckley both earning assists.

"We just battled back-and-forth, back-and-forth with them," Walsh said. "It was their senior night so they had a big crowd there, but we played well."

Finishing the regular season at 8-8-3, Cohasset got the minimum 19 points it needed to make the postseason. The Skippers are likely looking at a preliminary round game; if they win that, they will go on to face one of the top seeds in the bracket.

"We're going to have to bring our A-game if we're going to play well in the tournament," Walsh said. "I love the tournament for that sense of, one game, and you're out. And I know the seniors are really up for it."

Tournament pairings should be available Saturday afternoon on the MIAA's postseason Web site, miaa.ezstream.net.

his team's only two seniors, Richardson and Haracz, along with sophomore center Sam Lehr, was critical to the Skippers' postseason qualification.

"We had a pretty good week at practice (leading up to the final game), and I think their leadership was really important to that," Levangie said. "The three of them did a really nice job down the stretch."

From the coach's standpoint, getting tournament experience is not the only benefit for his team. Having these extra weeks of practice to further teach the game will also be crucial to the program's development for next season and beyond, he said.

Tournament pairings should be available this afternoon (Feb. 23) on the MIAA's postseason Web site, miaa.ezstream.net. Preliminary indications suggest that the Skippers are looking at a 14-seed and a possible road trip to Westport, one of the best teams in the Mayflower League that also features top-seeded Sacred Heart.

"I think we are probably one of the best defensive teams in Div. 4," Levangie said. "The question for us is whether the offense is steady enough to score some points."

Affluent water? Are you kidding?

By Robert Belley
SPECIAL TO MARINER

I'm sure you've heard the buzz lately. "High-end water leads to purer-self." "Feel better, live longer, and revitalize your being with luxury water." Amazing, a $75 liter of water is the ACTUAL fountain of you … well sort of.

I will forever hold my stance on water as our nutritional fountain of youth (you don't have to be fitness expert to know that) but is a $200 gallon of Bling water any better than a $1.50 gallon of Poland Spring or even better than water straight from your faucet? I don't think so. And unless they seemingly a guarantee a six pack, it's no more than a superfluous jeweled embedded vase … bring on the flowers!

According to a Good Morning America weekend segment that aired Feb. 18, 2007, a blind taste test of 16 regular luxury bottled water tasters provided their analysis of three different water sources: a glacier water from Canada that priced at more than $100 a gallon, Poland Springs, and municipal tap water which equates to about two-tenths of a penny per gallon.

Thirteen of the 16 refined connoisseurs of water chose the exaggeratedly priced glacier water as their numero uno choice. Of course, I believe it has more to do with their preliminary consistency of tasting luxury water to know the difference.

However, in another blind taste test done by Good Morning America, 10 crewmembers of the weekend morning segment also were asked to try the waters. The results of the test were drastically different. Only three of the 10 crewmembers chose the high-end water as the premium source.

To be honest, I'm not surprised. I can slightly tell the difference between the variant tastes of waters, too. For instance, I was a sponge for municipal faucet water for years, leaving only Poland Spring or Acadia for my travels between clients. But, not too long ago, a client of mine urged me to indulge in a glass of water from a Brita-filtered pitcher.

I was blown away with crispness the water (for one it was very cold), and I could actually taste the difference in mineral levels. Since then, I still consume tap water, but I'm sure to drink it once my Brita has had its way with it in my fridge. Now, will I abandon municipal water? Heck no. Will I forever filter my tap water? Absolutely! Will I ever buy a $40 750mL bottle of Bling water? Absolutely not! I find it absurd and 100 percent ridiculous. But more importantly, what does my opinion mean to you?

I would hope that unless you're accustomed to drinking a particular brand or style of water you will never know the difference between luxury, middle-class bottled and tap waters. Furthermore, there is no such thing as the perfect blend of anything, including mineral/vitamin waters. The perfect blend of vitamins and minerals for the human body differ from person to person, and the need for complete nutrients comes from your daily activity levels, blood work, and nutritional plan more so than a single bottle of water.

So save your money, grab either a Brita or Culligan water filter (I receive no financial restitution for promoting said products), and start tapping into the proverbial fountain of youth while savoring your VERY OWN high-end filtered water … you'll be amazed how great you'll feel after a few weeks.

Cohasset Youth Basketball

Abington Stars League - Weymouth Air Station

The Cohasset 5A boys came away with a riveting 24-23 win over rival Hull this past Saturday. The boys led nearly from start to finish in this one, although Hull kept it a nail-biter until the final horn sounded.

Cohasset got off to an early lead, and Joe Buckley and Steven Maher carried the load early on. Buckley scored eight of Cohasset's first 12 points. Maher played great interior defense from the four position, as he played great positional defense, contested every Hull shot, rebounded effectively, and scored on a put-back after an offensive rebound. He was a force all evening.

Cohasset maintained a lead throughout the first half. Brendan O'Connell and Mark McKenna were consistent as the guard tandem in the early going. They consistently brought the ball up court and passed the ball well through the tough Hull defense. O'Connell took the ball to the basket to score, and McKenna got himself to the free throw line on a fast break drive.

Rocco Laugelle was terrific off the bench. He played great in-your-shirt defense and stripped the ball from Hull ball handlers several times. Laugelle's quickness and ability to anticipate the pass helps the boys to ratchet up the defensive pressure.

Matthew MacCormack aggressively looked for his shot, knocking down two jumpers. He also took advantage of creases inside to drive to the basket effectively.

The second half was an intense defensive struggle. Cohasset used their press and man-to-man defense effectively to turn the ball over and to wear down Hull. The boys accomplished this while being outmanned by the Hull bench.

McKenna, O'Connell and Laugelle fought through Hull's press to get the ball in the offensive end, where Dakota Achin and Conner Green took advantage of Hull's broken press to work the fast break. Achin pulled down several rebounds, and was actively looking for his shot. He scored on a key put-back from an offensive rebound to keep the lead intact.

Green's intensity was key, as he rebounded, dove for looses balls, and kept position down low all evening. He also hit huge free throws as time wound down to provide the final margin.

The last few minutes provided great excitement as Maher, Green, Laugelle and company made stop after stop to ensure this win.

Coach Liam O'Connell explained, "This was a great win because every player made an important contribution. We won this game as a team, and I am proud of our boys."

competition.

Cambi won a state title at 189 last weekend in Wayland, and said his goal for All-States will be to make the finals, which will begin Saturday night at 6.

Cambi said after Wednesday's match that conditioning has played a big role in his and Smith's success this season.

"We worked out everyday in the off-season, and we both went to wrestling camps," the senior captain said. "We've both been working so hard all year. Plus, I played football and Adam played soccer, so we got all that extra conditioning coming into wrestling season."

Smith, who will be making his first trip to All-States (this is the second for Cambi, who finished fifth last year to move on to New Englands), lost his first match in Wayland, only to come back and win five in a row to make the third place match and assure himself a spot in Salem.

"Losing that first match upset me a little bit, and I knew I had to step it up," Smith said. "It's been a goal of mine since I started wrestling to place at states."

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Explore camp options that might meet your search criteria.
By Bette S. Bussel - Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

There are a number of tools available to parents and kids to help in the critical process of finding the right camp. From camp fairs to online searches to the tried and true referrals from friends and family, there are many ways to identify and explore options that could suit your child's camp search criteria once you and the child have decided on your camp expectations.

Following our tried and true guidelines can help you to identify the right camp—one that's a match for a child's current needs and interests. The American Camp Association, New England recommends four basic steps to a successful camp experience for your child:

1. Consider and list CAMP expectations for your child and yourself.
2. Explore CAMP options that might meet your search criteria
3. Decide on a CAMP
4. Prepare for CAMP

Attend Camp Fairs. Meet camp directors and staff face-to-face and learn what a camp has to offer: www.campfairs.org

Ask folks you know and trust. Relatives, friends, coaches and school counselors may have suggestions of camps that might work for your child. CAUTION: Just because someone had a great experience at a camp doesn't automatically make that camp a good match for your child!

Consult professionals. There are a variety of camp consultants and referral agents who can help point you to camps they represent that might meet some or most of YOUR camp search criteria.

Look carefully at how camps present themselves to the world in print, in photographs, and in person! You can gain a more comprehensive understanding of each camp by reviewing a variety of their materials and by speaking with camp representatives, especially the camp director.

Questions to ask camps under consideration:
• What training does the staff receive on safety, supervision, counseling, problem solving and other issues unique to working with children?
• Is the price all-inclusive or are there extra charges for … Registration • Uniforms • Horseback riding • T-shirts • Waterskiing • Group photos • Field Trips
• Is transportation available and what are the specifics?
• How will the camp meet my child's special dietary or physical needs?
• In what way may I communicate with my child while he or she is at camp? With the staff?
• How does bad weather affect the daily schedule?
• Are there family visiting days?
• What is unique about your camp?

Next week the article will focus on Steps #3 and #4.

Fire chiefs plead with media for help in reducing fire fatalities

Editor's note" the following press release from the International Association of Fire Chiefs was provided by Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia.

The International Association of Fire Chiefs is pleading with the media to help inform the public of the high number of house fires with fatalities that have occurred since the beginning of February.

"We have lost too many people in home fires in the last two weeks," said President Chief Jim Harmes. "On the night of Feb. 15, six were killed in a house fire in Louisiana, two in house fires in Tennessee and one in my own community in Grand Blanc, Michigan. It is mid-February and by media reports, 59 people in the U.S. have perished in house fires in 17 states since the beginning of this month. We have got to do something," said Harmes.

He added, "These are not just statistics; these are lives; lives of the people we serve in our communities. These are the same lives that you, the media, serve. Help us to get the word out to our readers and listeners. Our citizens now have more protection available for their homes than ever before and yet people are losing their lives because they are not taking this protection seriously."

A quick check of media reports for the first 16 days of Feb. reveals 59 house-fire fatalities. Thirty fatalities were single or double fatalities, and 29 deaths resulted from just six house fires that were counted as multiple fatalities involving three or more individuals.

"These are not just numbers; these are personal tragedies that each of us as a fire chief feels every time a life is lost. Help us prevent these needless tragedies. Help us get the word out to those communities that we-the media and the fire departments-both serve," said Harmes.

President Chief Jim Harmes offers these life-saving suggestions: Check smoke and carbon monoxide alarms to be sure they are working properly; Have an escape plan with a meeting place; Once you exit your home, do not return. Too many people lose their lives going back into a burning home; Stoves are not made for heating homes; Supplemental heating devices should be used and maintained in accordance with manufacturer recommendations. Keep combustibles clear. Do not leave supplemental heating devices unattended; If you are burning wood in your fireplace, make sure your chimneys are properly maintained. That goes for your furnace, as well; If candles are necessary, use them in a safe environment in a fireproof container and away from children. Do not leave them unattended; And for the long term, consider getting a residential fire sprinkler. According to statistics, the risk of death by fire is reduced by 82 percent when smoke detectors are accompanied with residential fire sprinklers.

"It is mid-February and by media reports, 59 people in the U.S. have perished in house fires in 17 states since the beginning of this month. We have got to do something."

— Chief Jim Harmes, International Association of Fire Chiefs

DESTINATIONS

Head to Hawaii

50th state is worth the trip

By Nick French
NFRENCH@CNC.COM

While it took winter a little longer than usual to find New England, late December was still as good a time as any to take a trip 5,000 miles to the west, and visit the 50th state, Hawaii.

The island of Oahu — home of Honolulu — is by far the busiest, and most populous of the Hawaiian Islands, and is where I spent the final few days of 2006.

Waikiki Beach is the tourist epicenter of Honolulu: shops, restaurants, and hotels line the area, providing plenty of activity for the non-beach goer. This is also the epicenter for the nightlife of Waikiki, and with last call coming at 4 a.m. there is certainly plenty of time to see it all.

The beach itself is a wonderful way to spend an afternoon with the cool water, warm sand. Surfing is one of the most popular activities, and was certainly one of my favorite experiences. But be forewarned: the amount of people on surfboards going in both directions causes many crashes.

There are so many other water-related activities it's almost mind boggling. You can scuba dive, parasail, and even dive into a shark cage, and watch the offspring of Jaws in their everyday life.

Snorkeling the Pacific is also a favorite pastime, and one that was among the more memorable experiences I've had. Seeing the schools of tropical fish, and large sea turtles up close in their own element was fascinating.

Golf on Oahu is also extremely popular; there are roughly 27 golf courses on the island, for all levels of play. I spent the morning of New Year's Day on one beautifully designed course with a spectacular view of the mountains, and Pearl Harbor. My play was more hilarious, than horrendous, as I managed to lose nine balls, hit all five water hazards on the course, and clanked a pair of shots off the adjacent condos on the first and 10th tees.

Pearl Harbor is as beautiful as it is historic, and a must visit for any tourist. It is still an active navy base, and you can see many modern day battleships docked within the harbor. I happened to be there on a quiet, sunny Sunday morning in December, not unlike the day that lives in infamy. It was eerie, but captivating. The USS Arizona Memorial is the big attraction, and among the more somber places I have ever been. After walking through a small museum dedicated to the history of the vessel and the story behind the attacks, you are taken to a video room to watch a short presentation.

Following the video the Coast Guard takes you on a small boat out to the memorial, which sits atop the sunken vessel that was never raised. A quiet reflection period for those who gave their lives to this country is a nice way to wrap up the entire experience.

Another required experience while visiting is a luau. There are a couple of different companies that offer luaus, and it's easy to find them in your hotel lobby. Most are buffets with plenty of drinks and spectacular entertainment. I'm not a big fan of pork, but after my dinner, I'm ready to dig a luau pit in my backyard when the ground unfreezes.

No matter your interests, be it water activities, golf, shopping, or just lying on the beach, Hawaii has plenty to off for the entire family.

Golf on Oahu is a popular activity for all skill levels, and yes an errant tee shot of mine found this water hazard.

The USS Arizona Memorial is a somber but enlightening visit, and a great way to honor those who gave the ultimate sacrifice for our country.

Sea turtles are an amazing sight in their own element beneath the Pacific.

Having fun with 'Legends!'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Tony Award-winning producer Spring Sirkin has made a name for herself by backing Broadway productions of dramas from A-list playwrights like Arthur Miller, Terrence McNally. August Wilson, and Brian Friel, so Sirkin's role as one of the producers of "Legends!," a comedy about two past-their-prime movie stars which comes to Boston's Shubert Theatre next month on a national tour starring Joan Collins and Linda Evans, represents a departure for the Quincy resident.

"I just had the desire to do something that felt like more fun," explained Sirkin from her Boston office recently. "I love the heavy stuff, but after 'Frozen' (playwright Bryony Lavery's tale of a grieving mother, her child's killer and the psychiatrist who brings them together), I was ready to do something fun."

With that in mind, Sirkin — president and producing director of the Boston-based Chamber Theatre Productions which has toured nationally since 1977, bringing original stage adaptations of classic literature to life for school-age audiences — chose a comedy by the late James Kirkwood ("A Chorus Line"), which first played the Shubert 21 years ago in a legendarily ill-fated pre-Broadway run starring Carol Channing and Mary Martin. Kirkwood not only wrote the story of two aging actresses pursued by a young producer to star together on Broadway even though they have hated each other for years, but he also later penned a very dishy book, "Diary of a Mad Playwright," about the troubles he faced working with real-life legends Channing and Martin.

That original pre-Broadway tour never made it into New York, and it is unclear whether or not this one will either, but Sirkin remains in good spirits about the new production being toplined by Collins and Evans, who memorably lit up the small screen as dueling divas in the 1980s prime-time soap "Dynasty."

"I read 'Legends!' and I thought it was hysterical. I never saw the original production, but I have heard that those ladies may have had some trouble remembering their lines. When I heard that Joan Collins and Linda Evans were attached to the project this time around, I was immediately interested. Joan and Linda are incredibly well-suited to these roles. The play is fluff, but for what it is it serves a purpose. It makes people laugh and that's never a bad thing. Audiences have a good time just watching these two ladies have a good time together on stage. Joan and Linda are true professionals and they're wonderful in these roles."

That's high praise from Sirkin, who is among the producers of the London-to-Broadway transfer of the Old Vic production of "A Moon for the Misbegotten," which stars Tony- and two-time Academy Award-winner Kevin Spacey and begins performances next month at New York's Brooks Atkinson Theatre, and also an investor in the highly anticipated West End production of "Equus," starring Daniel Radcliffe of "Harry Potter" film fame, opening in London this week.

"The Howard Davies-directed production of 'A Moon for the Misbegotten' is being transferred intact from London. I'm proud to be a part of the move because it is such an important production. Kevin Spacey is terrific, of course, but I am most excited to be one of the people helping to introduce Eve Best to American audiences. She is quite a phenomenal actress."

Spring Sirkin with Joan Collins

Whether producing national tours of "Master Class" with Faye Dunaway or "Legends!" with Collins and Evans, Sirkin says she never loses sight of her own role.

In Eugene O'Neill's only love story, Best plays Josie Hogan, a fierce woman with a razor-sharp tongue and a ruined reputation who lives in a ramshackle Connecticut farmhouse with her conniving father (Colm Meaney). During one long moonlit night fueled by drink and lust, Josie shows her softer side through her feelings for her landlord, Jim Tyrone (Spacey). Before long, the two implacable souls reveal to each other the profound sadness, longing and unrequited love they have kept hidden from the world.

The O'Neill classic may be a revival, but it was as one of the producers of a new play by another iconic American dramatist that Sirkin made her own Broadway debut in 1994.

"I had read a piece in the 'New York Times' about producing on Broadway in which Arthur Miller's longtime producer Robert Whitehead was quoted. It got me thinking that producing at this level was something I wanted to do," recalls Sirkin, who turned to the dean of Boston theater critics Elliot Norton for assistance.

"Elliot wrote me a letter of introduction to Robert Whitehead, and sometime later, I met with Bob in his office in New York. There was a connection between us from our very first meeting. During our conversation, I asked him what he was working on and if he needed help. Before I left his office, he put 'Broken Glass' by Arthur Miller in my hands. I remember being so excited to have a copy of a new play by Arthur Miller ('Death of a Salesman') to read, but I fell asleep on the train before I even opened it. I read it a few days later, though, and I called Bob Whitehead and told him then and there, if you still want me, I'm in."

With Sirkin among its producers, "Broken Glass" opened in April 1994. It closed two months later, but the Miami native was already hooked on her new career.

"We had just gone down the drain with 'Broken Glass,' but I was ready to go again. I was scared to death, of course, but still ready to go when Bob handed me a copy of a new play by Terrence McNally called 'Master Class.'"

With Whitehead's Tony Award-winning wife Zoe Caldwell as its star, "Master Class" enjoyed acclaimed pre-Broadway runs in both Philadelphia and Los Angeles. By the time the show arrived in New York in October 1995, Caldwell's bravura performance as opera singer Maria Callas had made the show the must-see play of the season. It went on to win three 1996 Tony Awards including Best Play, shared by McNally, Whitehead, Sirkin and Lewis Allen, Best Actress for Caldwell, and Best Featured Actress for Audra McDonald. In the decade since that success, Sirkin has produced four more plays on Broadway. Three, Arthur Miller's "The Ride Down Mt. Morgan," "KIng Hedley II" by August Wilson and "Frozen," earned Tony nominations as Best Play in 2000, 2001 and 2004, respectively. The fourth, last season's limited engagement of Brian Friel's "Faith Healer," starring Ralph Fiennes and Cherry Jones, was nominated for a Tony Award for Best Play Revival.

Kevin Spacey and Eve Best

Sirkin found success from the earliest days of her career in the theater as a founding member of the Profile Theatre, now known as the Portland Stage Company, and as co-founder of Chamber Theatre which today employs some 65 actors, directors and technicians. She is quick to credit Whitehead and Norton, however, for their help and inspiration with her work on Broadway and in London.

"Elliot taught me to turn the other cheek and let things go. He also taught me to always be kind to the people around you. Elliot Norton and Robert Whitehead were both true gentlemen. I had a very soft entrance into this world because of them. I will be eternally grateful."

Whether producing national tours of "Master Class" with Faye Dunaway or "Legends!" with Collins and Evans, Sirkin says she never loses sight of her own role.

"It is a producer's responsibility to help realize the playwright's vision in whatever form that might take in order to allow the work to speak about the state of humankind," according to Sirkin.

While theater is her professional home, Sirkin says ballet is her first love. Along with husband Arthur Frank, Sirkin has presented several world-class companies in Boston including the Kirov and Royal Ballets.

"It is a joy to give a helping hand to the Celebrity Series and the Citi Performing Arts Center. I love Boston and that is why I was thrilled to be able to bring these magnificent companies here."

Her love of Boston aside, Sirkin's work as a producer is often just that.

"I'm a Tony voter which means I have to see everything. That is wonderful, of course, but it can also be wearing to see every show on Broadway. I'm good at it, though - sometimes I see nine shows in six nights, or ten shows in nine nights. Broadway is very healthy these days. This spring, there will be more new plays and play revivals than there have been in years. You can't even find a theater to put a show in, which is one of the reasons 'A Moon for the Misbegotten' is only scheduled to run through June."

If Sirkin has become an expert at marathon show-going sessions, then it is a skill she plans to pass on.

"My daughter Ashlyn is only 9, but she can sit through three shows a day with me. Ashlyn loves the theater, just not the ballet as much as her mother does. She is my best production."

("Legends!" will be presented at the Citi Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont St., Boston, March 6-11. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit citicenter.org. "A Moon for the Misbegotten" begins previews at the Brooks Atkinson Theatre, 256 West 47th St., New York City, on March 29. Movie review

Astro... not

"The Astronaut Farmer" (C+)

By James Vemiere
FILM CRITIC

Talk about an Astro-nut. "The Astronaut Farmer," an unlikely mash-up of "Field of Dreams" and "The Right Stuff," conspicuously fails to launch.

Houston, we have a problem. Directed by Michael Polish and co-written by him and his brother Mark Polish, whose previous collaborations include "Northfork" (2003) and "Twin Falls Idaho" (1999), the film is a populist, conservative fable about keeping the faith and being right when everyone says you're wrong. It features Billy Bob Thornton as a Texas rancher with a dream and a tightly knit and loving family.

George W. Bush, do I have a movie for you.

Thornton is former NASA astronaut Charles Farmer. Charles never got to ride the NASA rocket into space because of a family crisis, and so he has built his own rocket out of spare and salvaged parts.

Charlie Farmer (Billy Bob Thornton) and his daughter Sunshine (Logan Polish) attempt to simulate the feeling of G-Force.

It's in his barn, and it's several stories tall and full of extremely volatile fuel, 10,000 pounds of rocket fuel to be exact. Stop giggling. I didn't make this up.

Charles' adoring wife Audie (Virginia Madsen), who is a waitress at a local diner, makes pancakes that remind her and the kids of planets. The couple have a son named Shepard (Max Thieriot) and a daughter (Logan Polish) named Sunshine.

If this isn't Capra-corn-y enough for you, the bank is threatening to foreclose on the Farmer ranch because Charles is months behind on his mortgage (rocket fuel does not come cheap, my friend). Charles later takes his kids out of public school to tutor them at home and use as a cheap labor force.

Thornton, oozing smug self-satisfaction, rides a horse in a spacesuit in one scene and plays Charles as a man who has never doubted himself (Hmmm, who does that remind me of?). His Astronaut Farmer would make the perfect leader of a cult.

In the supporting cast, Madsen is trapped in the stand-by-her-man role. Bruce Dern's lanky grandpa is a bit scary, although Tim Blake Nelson makes a nice impression as the town's eccentric sheriff. Bruce Willis appears halfway through as a seemingly sympathetic fellow astronaut.

Stick around to see Charles, who becomes an international celebrity, appear on Jay Leno. Or better yet don't.

"The Astronaut Farmer," we do not have liftoff.

Rated PG.

New Releases

"BREACH" (B-)

Anyone in the mood for "The Devil Wears Brooks Brothers"? How about for a bleak political fable about a deeply religious, high-ranking government official so delusional he thinks he's knows more than anyone else? He's actually betraying his country and responsible for the deaths of others. "Breach" boasts a darkly tormented turn by Massachusetts-own Chris Cooper as Robert Hanssen, the real-life veteran FBI agent who specialized in computer technology and security and caused the greatest intelligence breach in U.S. history. Based on the 2001 Washington scandal, "Breach" also features Ryan Phillippe in the "Donnie Brasco"-meets-"The Departed" role of real-life Eric O'Neill, an FBI agent-in-training assigned to spy on the spy by an FBI handler, the demanding higher-up Kate Burroughs (Laura Linney). (Rated PG-13)

"COMEDY OF POWER" (B)

Based on France's Enron-like scandal, where businessmen bribed their way to access to African oil, "Comedy of Power" isn't so much a comedy of the laugh-out-loud sort as it is a merry consideration of the human capacity for greed, deception and even murder. Isabelle Huppert is wonderful as the chief judge investigating corruption. The more we see her Jeanne, the scarier she becomes. The case becomes her life, ruining her long marriage and creating serious complications for France. The film is ultimately a study of a woman's power, the power of the state and the powerlessness of the many men who think they can wiggle their sorry butts around this obsessed figure. (Not Rated)

— Stephen Schaefer

"DADDY'S LITTLE GIRLS" (C+)

The softer side of Tyler Perry shows up in "Daddy's Little Girls," a sentimental romantic comedy that breathes new life into the term "chick flick." The story centers on down-on-his luck mechanic Monty (Idris Elba), who is trying to support three adorable girls. Their mother is cheap, out-of-control and dating a sleaze. Monty finds a new job as a driver for Julia (Gabrielle Union), a brassy, hot-shot attorney who is sexy, single and rich. Between hurling insults at Monty, she gabs on the phone to her gal pals, complaining about the lack of decent single men. As expected, the road to love is bumpy. Loaded with sappy cliches and featuring a pair of mismatched lovers, Perry milks Cupid for all he's worth. (Not Rated)

— Chelsea Bain

"GHOST RIDER" (D)

If you mixed Goethe's "Faust" with the ballad of Evil Knievel, you'd have "Ghost Rider," a lame, superhero flick that answers the question: What if the devil pimped my ride? The film is based on a Marvel comic book I found too lowbrow when I was about 12. During the day, Johnny (Nicolas Cage) is a "hotshot" stunt motorcycle rider who dresses and talks like an Elvis impersonator. But after Johnny sells his soul to Mephistopheles (Peter Fonda of "Easy Rider") as a teenager, strange things happen at night. Johnny's head turns into a flaming skull and his Harley chopper into a motor-sickle from hell. (Rated PG-13)

"OSCAR NOMINATED SHORTS" (A)

Are you in the mood for a quickie? This year's Oscar-nominated shorts prove that great stories can be told at lightning speed. With so many foreign entries, the program feels like a whirlwind trip around the world. Those with musical inclinations will find Ari Sandel's "West Bank Story," a spoof of "West Side Story," an absolute hoot. No Jets or Sharks here. The rival gangs are the Israelis and the Palestinians, who sing and dance as they settle their score. The animated portion of the program is just as delightful. Put "The Departed" and "The Queen" on the backburner; it's time for the little guys to have their moments in the sun.

Cohasset hawk returns home

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Wednesday afternoon, a Cohasset hawk was released back in to the wild after six weeks of rehabilitation. The effort to save the hawk's life involved four different agencies, and a lot of caring people. The hawk was found injured with a broken wing by a local resident in January. The resident called the Environmental Police who in turn called Cohasset/Norwell Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy to the scene. Murphy captured the red-tailed hawk near train tracks about a half-mile from the Village.

"He's feisty and he is a fighter."
— Paul Murphy, animal control officer

Murphy's initial thought was to bring the severely injured hawk to the New England Wildlife Center in South Weymouth for treatment. However, the Center was closed due to a holiday weekend. He immediately thought of Crazy Paws located right outside the Village. The veterinary hospital owned by doctors Fawn Stevenson and Gregory Conrad has experience with both exotic and wild animals.

"They took the hawk in in a heartbeat," attests Murphy, "they happened to be there and they saved the bird's life."

Crazy Paws vet techs Liz D'Arcangelo and Lynda Gullicksen dubbed the one-winged hawk "Pete".

"He just looked like a Pete," says Lynda. The vets and employees at Crazy Paws made an educated guess that the hawk was a male based on his larger size. A hawk's sex can only be determined through a DNA test, which was not performed during his brief captivity.

Dr. Fawn Stevenson treated the hawk for two weeks. The wing was

Quick thinking teen makes ice rescue

Girl skates near rock, falls in

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

When 15-year-old Sarah Beacham of Raleigh, N. C. donned ice skates for the first time over February vacation she could not believe she was really skating on a pond.

Her mother, Jacqueline, said she was exclaiming that fact with such excitement that it brought a smile to Rich Ofthsun's face. Rich, who lives on Fair Oaks Lane and had one skate on at that moment, was getting ready to join his son Conor and some other boys in a pickup hockey game on Lily Pond. It was about 1 p.m., Sunday (Feb. 18).

The temperature had consistently been well below freezing for weeks and the pond had been populated with ice fishermen as well as recreational skaters. The ice on the pond was estimated to be five or six inches thick.

Therefore Janet Costa, who lives nearby Lily Pond on Whitney Woods

Land quest

Public hearing continues Mar. 5

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen came a little closer to deciding the fate of roughly 40 acres of land off Norman Todd Road between South Main Street and Route 3A on Monday night. The Cohasset Land Foundation (CLF) entered into a purchase and sale agreement for the land, however, under a Massachusetts statute, the Town has the right of first refusal.

The land's designation as forestland places it under a Chapter 61 statute that grants the Town the option to match a bona fide offer to purchase the land. The option comes with a time restraint of 120 days. The Town's clock to make a decision began Jan. 11 and ends May

Police want to know about attempted telephone scams

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A resident reported to police on Tuesday (Feb. 20) that she had received a call from a male with a foreign accent saying that he wanted to give her a free cell phone. The man, who said he was from New York, attempted to get the woman's social security number and other personal information, police said. She declined to do so and hung up, but the man kept calling her back.

Police Chief James Hussey said people should become immediately suspicious if someone asks for their social security number. "Never give your social security number out over the phone," he said. He explained that social security numbers are key when people are trying to create a false identity or steal someone's identity.

"This woman did the right thing by not being suckered in and then, by contacting us," Hussey said. The chief said the information about the call was passed to police detectives, who are contacting other towns to see if there have been similar incidents. "If there have been we would like to know out it," he said.

Shoplifter

On Wed. (Feb. 21) at about 2:47 p.m., police received a call about a potential shoplifter at Stop & Shop. The caller said a female was in the store attempting to steal a lot of products. The description that was provided matched someone who police say had been involved in other, similar incidents. However, when the officers arrived at the scene the person had left the store. As it turned out, the individual, apparently realizing she was being watched, started returning the items to the shelves. Further investigation revealed the woman was indeed the same person that police thought she was. Stop & Shop was able to provide the plate number of the motor vehicle that she left in.

Stop & Shop decided not to press charges because she did not actually take anything but the store may seek a non-trespassing order against the woman.

Chief Hussey explained that someone does not have to actually leave a store to be charged with shoplifting. If an individual is concealing items on their person or in their purse or bag, the person could be arrested. However, in this case the woman did not take anything.

Tagging

At 10 a.m., Thursday (Feb. 22), police responded to a call from Deer Hill School to look at graffiti (tagging) on the roof. Police went up to the roof and took photos; the tagging looked similar to other recent incidents in town.

That same day an officer responded to a call from a resident on Forest Avenue about a teen wearing a brown, hooded jacket who was trying to open his car doors. When the resident confronted the individual, he just kept walking, police said. Based on the description, the officer came across the person on Forest Avenue. In talking to the 16-year-old, who lives in Hull, the officer said he made an admission about being responsible for tagging on some Forest Avenue signs using a black magic marker. Further discussions led police to believe the male is also responsible for the Deer Hill graffiti incident and tagging under the Rocky Lane Bridge.

They also think there may have been more than one person involved. The matter is still under investigation.

"Tagging" is a form of graffiti in which the vandal leaves his or her unique "signature."

Cruiser mishap

At 10:47 a.m., Friday (Feb. 23) a police cruiser ran over a water hole cover that shot up and broke the transmission fluid pan underneath the vehicle.

The fluid spilled out along a stretch of Sohier Street creating sheen along the roadway that was cleaned up by the Department of Public Works, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said.

The amount of fluid spilled estimated at about a gallon or two did not reach the threshold that would require the state Department of Environmental Protection be notified, Silvia explained. He said the fluid was not pooled but was spread about 200 feet along the road. "It was just enough to cause a problem on the road," he said.

Police Chief Hussey said the hole in the transmission pan was repaired right away and that the water department said it would cover the cost.

In an unrelated matter, the cruiser involved in a Route 3A accident two weeks ago ended up being "totaled," Hussey said. He explained the accident apparently damaged the frame of the vehicle. "We are now looking at what options we have to replace the cruiser," Hussey said.

MV crash

A single-car motor vehicle crash that involved a vehicle hitting a utility pole at about 8:34 a.m. last Thursday (Feb. 22) on Old Pasture Road caused some power outages, Fire Chief Robert Silvia said. Although the pole was not broken as a result of the crash, the impact apparently popped a fuse causing partial outages on Old Pasture and extending up to Ripley Road. Firefighters went house-to-house in the immediate crash area to make sure there were no electrical problems, Silvia said.

Police Chief James Hussey said an 18-year-old female was driving the car and was apparently distracted for a second, taking her eyes off the road, when she hit the pole. The car had to be towed; the girl was not injured. She was not cited, Hussey said.

Wood stove

A Beechwood Street resident called the fire department at about 7 p.m. last Thursday (Feb. 22) with concerns about the operation of the wood stove in the home. Fire Chief Robert Silvia said firefighters removed the fire from the wood stove chamber by using gloves and buckets to carry it outside. Afterwards, they ventilated the structure and made sure there was no fire extension to the smoke pipe or chimney. He said there was minimal damage. The resident called when the smoke pipe started to turn cheery red, he explained. There is not supposed to be any fire in the pipe.

Silvia stressed the residents with wood stoves and/or chimneys should have them cleaned out at least once a year to insure there is no creosote buildup.

Loose dog

The Animal Control Officer has written a report and has spoken to a resident whose dog was found on the loose twice in the same day in the village last week. Dogs must be kept under their owner's control at all times in Cohasset, according to the town leash law.

No license

A Hull man has been arrested for unlicensed operation of a vehicle and his 16-year-old daughter was arrested for disorderly conduct following a traffic stop at Forest Avenue and North Main Street last Friday (Feb. 23) at 2:55 p.m.

Chief James Hussey said an officer was on radar patrol on Forest Avenue, which is one of the most problematic areas in town in terms of speeding traffic. The officer clocked a van traveling 45 mph in a 30 mph zone. The officer observed two people in the car but the rear windows were darkened. The officer made the traffic stop and asked the man who was driving for his license and registration. The man said he was driving his son to work and said he did not have his license with him; he also allegedly provided police with a variety of different names. Finally, he provided police with his real name and it turned out he did not have a license. He was arrested and charged with operating without a license and giving a false name to a police officer. He was also cited for speeding. Hussey said he had three children with him. Initially the kids did not want to get out of the car and one of the children, a 16-year-old female, became disorderly and was arrested. Everyone was transported to the station where the kids were released to their mother. The van was towed, Hussey said.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

In honor of Black History month, the Cohasset Historical Society has chosen to highlight Thomas Loney, who in a 19th century newspaper clipping was described as "one of Cohasset's substantial citizens."

Thomas Loney was born a slave on a plantation in Virginia in 1833. When the Civil War broke out in 1861, he ran away to the north and joined the Navy. According to archival documents during his time in the Navy, "so high was his integrity and truthfulness valued that his sole testimony in court saved 12 colored men from hanging."

A few months after his discharge from the Navy, Loring Bates, a well-known ship owner, brought Thomas Loney to Cohasset. He worked in a stable for eight years, finally going into business for himself breeding pigs, which he did successfully for 17 years. Mr. Loney lived on Pleasant Street with his wife Marion. He held minor town offices and even owned a pew in one of the town churches.

Stop by the Cohasset Historical Society to learn more about Thomas Loney. They are open Monday through Friday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Questions remain for 40 acres

10. The public hearing on this issue will carry over to Monday, March 5 so the Selectmen can gather more information.

The CLF has negotiated a price tag of $1.25 million to purchase the 37.5 acres of land, a combination of wetlands, ledge and forest. If the Town were to purchase the land, the price and terms would remain relatively the same.

The agreement between current property owner, Osborne Ingram and CLF stipulates that at least 50 percent of the land remains undeveloped and put under conservation restrictions. A closing cost of $100,000 would be due by July 31, 2007. The balance plus 5 percent interest would be due within five years.

Members of the Foundation, Chairman Rick Swanborg, Jack Keniley, Tom Callahan and Wayne Sawchuk presented their intentions for the land — if the Town decides not to pursue the purchase. Selectman Gary Vanderweil, a member of the CLF, recused himself from the discussion and sat in the audience.

According to Rick Swanborg, perc tests have determined there are only three buildable lots on the property, each covering two acres. "We want to keep the building footprint to a minimum, then restrict [further development] through conservation boundaries," Swanborg said. This means that although the future homeowners may own two acres of land, portions of it would have conservation restrictions.

The six acres of developed land is essential to CLF's project as it is the only way the non-profit organization will recoup the cost of purchasing the land. "With the sale of three houses and contributions, we will make the money back," says Swanborg, "and maybe have a little left over for the next project."

The CLF has talked to the Vedanta Centre, a spiritual retreat center and land abutter. The center has expressed interest in increasing its open land by purchasing 6.25 acres adjacent to its property.

The CLF envisions the remaining 25 acres as open space and/or conservation land. A portion, if not all, of that acreage will be a park named in Ingram's father's honor. The possibility of a small parking area off Beechwood Street and walking or bike trail was discussed.

Swanborg made note that it is not in the Foundation's charter to be landowners, but rather the mechanism behind the purchasing of property. Eventually, Swanborg foresees the land being handed over the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

"We're going to do work with the appropriate committees and Boards, take the land through the development process, get areas solidified, then put the project out to bid," Swanborg said, "our objective is to save most of the land for natural habitat with little effect on current homeowners."

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer agreed, "I think the objectives you bring forward are our objectives, too."

The Selectmen praised the Foundation for getting the ball rolling and bringing the project to this point. "Cohasset is fortunate to have individuals willing to come forward and do this sort of thing," said Selectman Fred Koed.

However, Selectman Rob Spofford expressed reservations at passing on this offer. "I think personally it's an attractive offer [for the town]. There are 40 acres being put in front of the Town of Cohasset. This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity; it's too big for us four to make this decision. I do believe it should go to Town Meeting."

Koed worried with strapped budgets the Town would have a difficult time taking on a $100,000 payment over the next 20 years. Spofford suggested that a combination of funding through a bond and working with the Community Preservation Committee might just make it possible. None of these possibilities have been investigated thoroughly as of yet, he said.

"I think it would be a missed opportunity to the Town of Cohasset not to gain control of this land. Forty acres is an asset to have at the Town's disposal. I believe it's in the best interest of the total and long-term community to obtain this land," Spofford said, when reached for comment on Tuesday.

Dormitzer was inclined to bring some certainty to the project, rather than leave the issue unresolved for another week or another month. This land acquisition was first mentioned to the Board of Selectmen in October 2005. However, the letter of intent to sell that activates the Town's right of first refusal was not received until Jan. 11, 2007.

Selectman Ted Carr requested more time to talk to prospective property owners, the Vedanta Centre and current property owner, Osborne Ingram. The public hearing will reconvene on Monday, March 5. The Selectmen will need to determine whether to add an article to the warrant for the annual Town Meeting, scheduled for March 31. If the Selectmen decide to try to purchase the land, Town Meeting will need to authorize the purchase with a two-thirds vote.

Who's who in Cohasset land acquisition

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Land Foundation is a relatively new non-profit organization established in February 2004 to assist the Town in identifying, acquiring and appropriately developing parcels of land. Its birth came out of the 2003 Cohasset Master Plan (which is still considered a draft) as a means to achieve the goals outlined without burdening the Town in financial obligation. The Foundation is modeled after a similar program in the Town of Lincoln that successfully met the challenges of protecting the environment, deterring urban sprawl and creating affordable housing.

The objectives are to maintain the character of the Town by providing Cohasset landowners with an "environmentally sensitive and economically viable non-profit alternative to traditional development," according to its charter. The group aims to secure open space and develop what needs to be developed by creatively matching funding and development interests with the needs of the Town.

The Foundation hopes to acquire real estate at market rates and to build on it only as much as needed to cover costs. By eliminating the need for a profit margin that is essential in normal land developing, more open space will be preserved. The group only aims to be the catalyst and "dealmaker" in these land purchases. It's not in its charter to own or maintain land.

The Foundation will work with the Town of Cohasset and its constituents, including landowners, Selectmen, the Conservation Commission, Community Preservation Committee, Open Space Committee, Senior Housing Committee, Housing Partnership, as well as the private organization the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

Members of the Foundation come from varied backgrounds in law, real estate and land developing. Trustees include Rick Swanborg, Richard Avery, Tom Callahan, Jack Keniley, Frank Neer, Glenn Pratt, Wayne Sawchuk, Gary Vanderweil, David Weltman, and Michael Westcott. The purchase of the Ingram property would be the first major action of the Cohasset Land Foundation (see related story).

The Cohasset Conservation Trust is another non-profit organization within the Town of Cohasset. Begun in 1967, the organization was the vision of three Cohasset residents, Ed Long, Dick Leggat and John Hartshorne. The Trust's first acquisition in 1968 was Bassing Beach (on the Cohasset/Scituate border), which was donated to the Trust. The Cohasset Conservation views its conservation lands as a legacy for area residents, and considers stewardship of these lands as its basic responsibility. Its purpose is the preservation and protection of open space and the encouragement of the study of our natural resources.

In its 40-year existence the Trust has become the stewards of more than 90 acres of land. The Trust works to obtain an entire lot of land either through purchase or donation and ensures the parcel is deeded under conservation restrictions. Fourteen properties are wholly owned by the Trust and are devoted to passive recreation and accessible to the public. There are several other properties that are meant for wildlife protection, including Pegram Preserve off River Road. More information is available at their website www.cohassetconservationtrust.org.

Road named Rosano Lane

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Joseph A. Rosano, a commercial real estate investor and local developer, is proud of his family name.

So proud, in fact, that he recently asked Selectmen for permission to rename the lower portion of Crocker Lane — on the east side of Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) — Rosano Lane.

Rosano's request will not affect the part of Crocker lane on the west side of the highway that continues westward to the top of the hillside, which is owned by Paul Barry and where Barry's company Graham Waste is located.

Rosano explained in a recent letter to Town Manager Bill Griffin that his grandfather's property on North Main Street was originally named "Rosano Lane" and was changed to Rocky Lane in the early 1990s. (Rosano's uncle Rocky Rosano developed the housing subdivision in that neighborhood).

Rosano stated that lower Crocker Lane, which forms part of the perimeter of Rosano's triangle at the corner of lower King and 3A, has been in his family for more than 50 years.

"I feel the resurrection of my family name on this piece of property in Cohasset is historically appropriate and fitting to replace and preserve the legacy of our name for five generations of a Cohasset family," he wrote.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he consulted with the police and fire departments, which do no object to the name change. The change would not cause a problem with the E911 system, he said.

Selectmen gave the OK. Rosano said Tuesday that DPW Supt. Carl Sestito would be ordering signs for the tiny, private lane.

What is next for Rosano is constructing a colonial-style professional building on Rosano's triangle. The Zoning Board of Appeals gave the OK for the project. The building will be an exact copy of the colonial at the corner of Beach Street and Highland Avenue (on the Little Harbor side), Rosano said.

"I feel the resurrection of my family name on this piece of property in Cohasset is historically appropriate and fitting to replace and preserve the legacy of our name for five generations of a Cohasset family.'
— Joseph A. Rosano

"I want it to blend with the residential character of the neighborhood," he said. "It is going to be extremely nice."

In February 2005, the ZBA granted Special Permits with conditions to allow the construction of a professional office and single residential unit at the site, housed in a single structure. The plans require the first floor be used as a medical and/or professional office and the second floor as a single residential apartment. Cedar trees will be planted to provide 100 percent screening from residences; signage will conform with the bylaw; and the site will include 19 parking spaces.

That stretch of 3A is in for some fairly big changes. Plans are to install a traffic light at lower King Street; a commercial subdivision is being planned for the west side of the state highway across from lower King Street. The train station and Transit Oriented District are just down the street. And up 3A toward Scituate, Avalon Bay is planning a 200-unit apartment complex.

School budget gets stamp of approval

Level services budget proposal is $13.6 million

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Wednesday night, the School Committee voted to approve a bottom line budget of $13,686,400 for fiscal year 2008. The vote was 4-0 (Member Steve Fusco was out of town). The certified budget proposal will now go before Town Meeting and face voters' scrutiny on March 31st. Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh and staff received word from the State House on the allocation of Chapter 70 state aid funds at noon on Wednesday and they were pleased with the results.

"Governor Deval Patrick used the words balanced and responsible to describe his budget and I think those are the same words we can use to describe our budget," Walsh said. The Town of Cohasset will receive a sum of $136,686 in state aid, which made up the one percent difference the level services budget was lacking up until Wednesday. The School Committee voted on Jan. 17th to recommend a level services budget – with no override.

The Town Manager, Bill Griffin, recommended a 3 percent increase over the fiscal 2007 budget, which is a dollar increase of $409,903. This increase was short of School Committee projections. The School Committee's working budget included a 5.5 percent increase over last year's budget, or $13,687,626.

The Chapter 70 funds coupled with a $160,000 savings from the teacher retirement health assessment from the Town brought the School Committee just $1226 shy of its target budget.

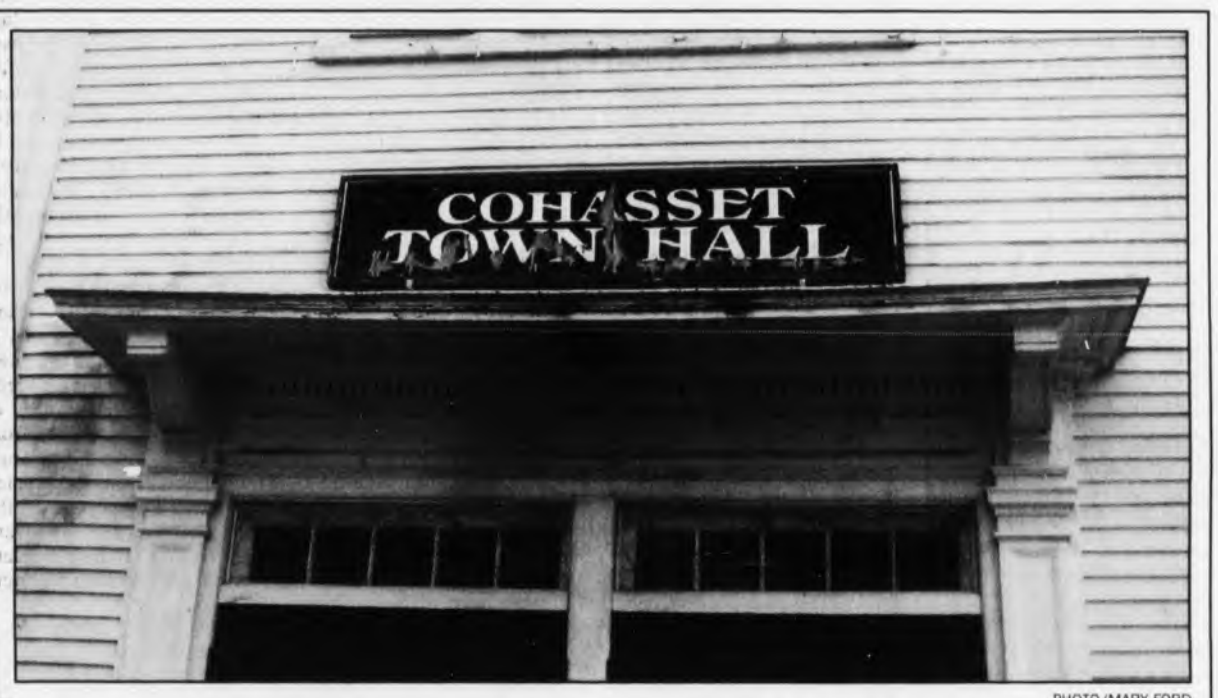
Chapter 70 funds are provided from the state to the town for use in the district's school system. Because this is a state grant given to the Town, Cohasset taxpayers will not be burdened with this additional sum.

Walsh, along with School Business Manager Dave DeGennaro, walked the Committee first through the District Wide budget and then the breakdown by school.

Salaries for teachers and staff constitute 73.6 percent, or $10,072,717 of the total budget. All contracts are settled through the 2007-2008 school year.

Notable items include decreases in both the transportation and utilities allotment. A district wide 12.2 percent decrease from fiscal 2007's transportation line item is due to the recently established bus fee that will offset next year's cost by $107,295. All three school buildings will have a lower budget for utilities due to a re-negotiated rate with gas and electricity, DeGennaro said. He also noted there has been increased efficiency of utilities across the board.

The impact and benefit of "pre-purchasing" on the budget was also discussed. If there are remaining funds at the close of a fiscal year, items that the schools know they will need for the upcoming year (usually textbooks or paper materials) can be pre-purchased for the following fiscal year. This allows those expenses to be taken out of the upcoming fiscal year's budget.



Vice Chairman Al Slanetz said this year's mild winter meant lower heating costs and that could translate to an opportunity to pre-purchase supplies at the close of this fiscal year. Only 5 percent of fiscal 2007's budgeted amount for heating the Middle/High School has been used.

The budget that will be presented at Town Meeting will be a level services budget. This means that the Cohasset schools will be able to operate in the same way they operated this year. The School Committee has also outlined a supplemental budget request that contains items that they feel are necessary to move the schools forward.

"It's important to recognize that there is $700,000 in supplemental requests. I would say about $450,000 to $500,000 is mission critical to moving this school district forward," said Slanetz. The supplemental items include eight additional teachers, maintenance staff, technology, junior varsity/freshman sports teams and textbooks.

The supplemental budget outline was put together in collaboration with the Superintendent's office and each school's administration to answer the question "what do you need to move the district forward?" Although town organizations, such as the Cohasset Education Foundation and PSO, have been able to provide additional revenue for needed supplies and education initiatives, additional teacher salaries would need to come through the budget, Walsh said when reached on Thursday morning. Currently, there is no plan in place to get the additional revenue needed for supplemental items.

Town Meeting will vote whether to accept the School Committee's budget based on the bottom line number of $13,686,400. The School Committee reserves the right to re-allocate funds between line items as fiscal 2008 progresses.

Town Meeting voters will be asked to approve money to replace the peeling sign on the front of Town Hall. The proposed sign has "Cohasset Town Hall" all on one line, not on two lines as shown above.

Old Town Hall sign could be replaced

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Building Inspector Bob Egan described the current sign as an "embarrassment" because of its condition.

The peeling sign on the front of Cohasset Town Hall could be replaced at the cost of $4140 that includes the price of the sign and the installation.

Building Inspector Bob Egan, who described the current sign as an "embarrassment" because of its condition, brought the matter before the Community Preservation Committee this week.

"I kept the wreaths up there as long as I could," Egan quipped.

The CPC makes recommendations to Town Meeting about how money in the town's Community Preservation Fund should be spent.

Egan explained that the Cohasset Common Historic Districts Commission liked the sign, which would it said would be in keeping with the look of the Town Common.

The current sign is at least 20 years old, Egan said. The new sign will look a lot like the existing one. It will have gold lettering on a black background. The proposed sign that would be manufactured and installed by Hassan Sign Company off Route 3A has the words Cohasset Town Hall all on one line; the existing sign uses two lines.

The CPC recommended the expenditure with the caveat that town archivist David Wadsworth be consulted about the design.

The CPC recommends appropriating money from the Community Preservation Fund on projects supporting low and moderate income housing, historical preservation, and open space acquisition and preservation.

Money received from the Commonwealth is deposited into Cohasset's Community Preservation Fund and combined with the revenues raised locally by assessing a 1.5 percent surcharge against real property values. The fund is spent on projects endorsed by the Community Preservation Committee and then approved by Town Meeting.

The money provided by the Department of Revenue is raised by a surcharge assessed at all Recorder of Deeds offices each time someone records a deed or mortgage on the land records.

The old part of Town Hall is steeped in history, including the theatrical kind. During the summer of 1934, actors Humphrey Bogart and Broderick Crawford – who at that time were not that famous – graced the Town Hall stage in summer stock productions.

BRIEFLY

Historical tour available on DVD

The Cohasset Planning Board Office has recently reproduced a 1953 film produced by Dan Cotton and Claus Gellotte to present at the 1954 town meeting to encourage acceptance of adopting zoning in Cohasset. With narration by Cotton and filming by Gellotte, the pair set out on a road tour to film the sights and landscape of 1953 Cohasset. Also filmed was Route 53, at that time called Route 3, from Queen Anne's Corner in Norwell to Hanover as a contrasting warning that, without zoning, Route 3A in Cohasset could soon "look like this."

Memorable sights of 1953 Cohasset include Cohasset Common, Jerusalem Road, the Causeway, Stony Beach, Sandy Beach, Cunningham Bridge before it was rebuilt, the Olde Salt House, John Smith Memorial Landing, the "Oakes" Estate, the Old Beechwood Ballpark and Fire Station, the Wheelwright Dairy Farm and Farmstead, Lily Pond, and the Old Nichols House built in the 1700's. The first Zoning Bylaw was adopted one year later.

This 11-minute color film is now available in DVD format for $40. Anyone interested in purchasing a copy should contact Jo-Ann in the Planning Board Office at the Town Hall, 781-383-3517.

Sustainable Cohasset launches film series

Sustainable Cohasset will commence its documentary film series with the first film to be shown in March. There will be three movies in all dealing with energy issues. Two of the films focus on energy issues in the United States and the third documents how Cuba survived an oil embargo.

The first film, "Who Killed the Electric Car," deals with the successful launch of the EVI by GM's Saturn division. The leased cars were extremely popular and therefore when the leased vehicles were not renewed to their satisfied users, there ensued a unique campaign to return the vehicle to the California highways. Tom Hanks, Phyllis Diller and Jay Leno make appearances in the film. When the EV1 devotees did not succeed they even held a formal funeral. The film brings a humorous note to a serious study of a unique political and social phenomenon.

The public is welcome to view the film at Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Monday, March 19, at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

Our offices will be closed Saturday, March 10th

A quiet space, to relax and recharge

Seaside retreat welcomes all

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In today's fast-paced society it is often a challenge to find a moment during the day, let alone a quiet space, to relax and recharge — mentally, physically and spiritually. Saint Joseph's Retreat Center, located on Cohasset's scenic Jerusalem Road, offers a solution to both problems with a peaceful setting to spend a morning or a week. Owned and operated by the Boston Congregation of the Sisters of St. Joseph since 1974, the Retreat Center welcomes men and women of all faith denominations.

Acquired by the Sisters of Saint Joseph in 1947, its original purpose was a summer vacation home for the Sisters. "The organization saw a need for a place the Sisters could come to relax and renew," says Sister Joan McCarthy, Program Director for the Retreat Center, "and that tradition holds true even today."

From 1947 to 1974, the Sisters would come and stay at the house for a week or two in order to reconnect with God and with their mission. In 1973, the function of the house started to take on the form of a retreat center. The following year it officially became St. Joseph's Retreat Center; broadening its purpose by opening its doors year round to people of all religious beliefs and walks of life as a home of solace and reflection.

Today, the opportunities to participate in a retreat at the St. Joseph's Retreat Center are plentiful. The programming is designed to accommodate different lifestyles and spiritual goals. The length of retreat varies from a simple morning prayer to a popular eight-day retreat during the summer months. Different levels of spiritual direction are available and each retreat, no matter the length, centers on quiet reflection.

"We offer [guests] a space to be with themselves and with God," says McCarthy. There are plenty of places to sit, reflect and pray throughout the house and grounds. A gazebo is located near the edge of the Atlantic Ocean where, during summer months, benches overlook the water. There is a small crescent shaped beach that is well used during the warm weather for walking or swimming. A labyrinth nestled between the house and the ocean offers guests another means for meditation and reflection. Chairs are strategically positioned at every window to take full advantage of the seascape.

"As soon as guests enter they experience an inner peace; they look forward to this time for themselves."

— Sister Ann Marie Ghiloni, administrator for the center

"As soon as guests enter they experience an inner peace," attests Sister Ann Marie Ghiloni, administrator for the center, "they look forward to this time for themselves."

"The spirit of the place draws you in," says Eileen Fortunato, Program Coordinator, "[some visitors] may take 50 photos because they feel inspired by the beauty of the location."

A tour of the house reveals comfortable accommodations (15 bedrooms, some with multiple beds) with all the necessities — blankets, towels, and a Bible in every room. The second floor houses the chapel where mass is held during retreats and various group gatherings would take place. Its cut glass windows have an expansive view of the Cohasset shoreline and the ocean beyond. A sound system in the dining area and living room pipes soothing music into these rooms to accompany the sound of rolling waves.

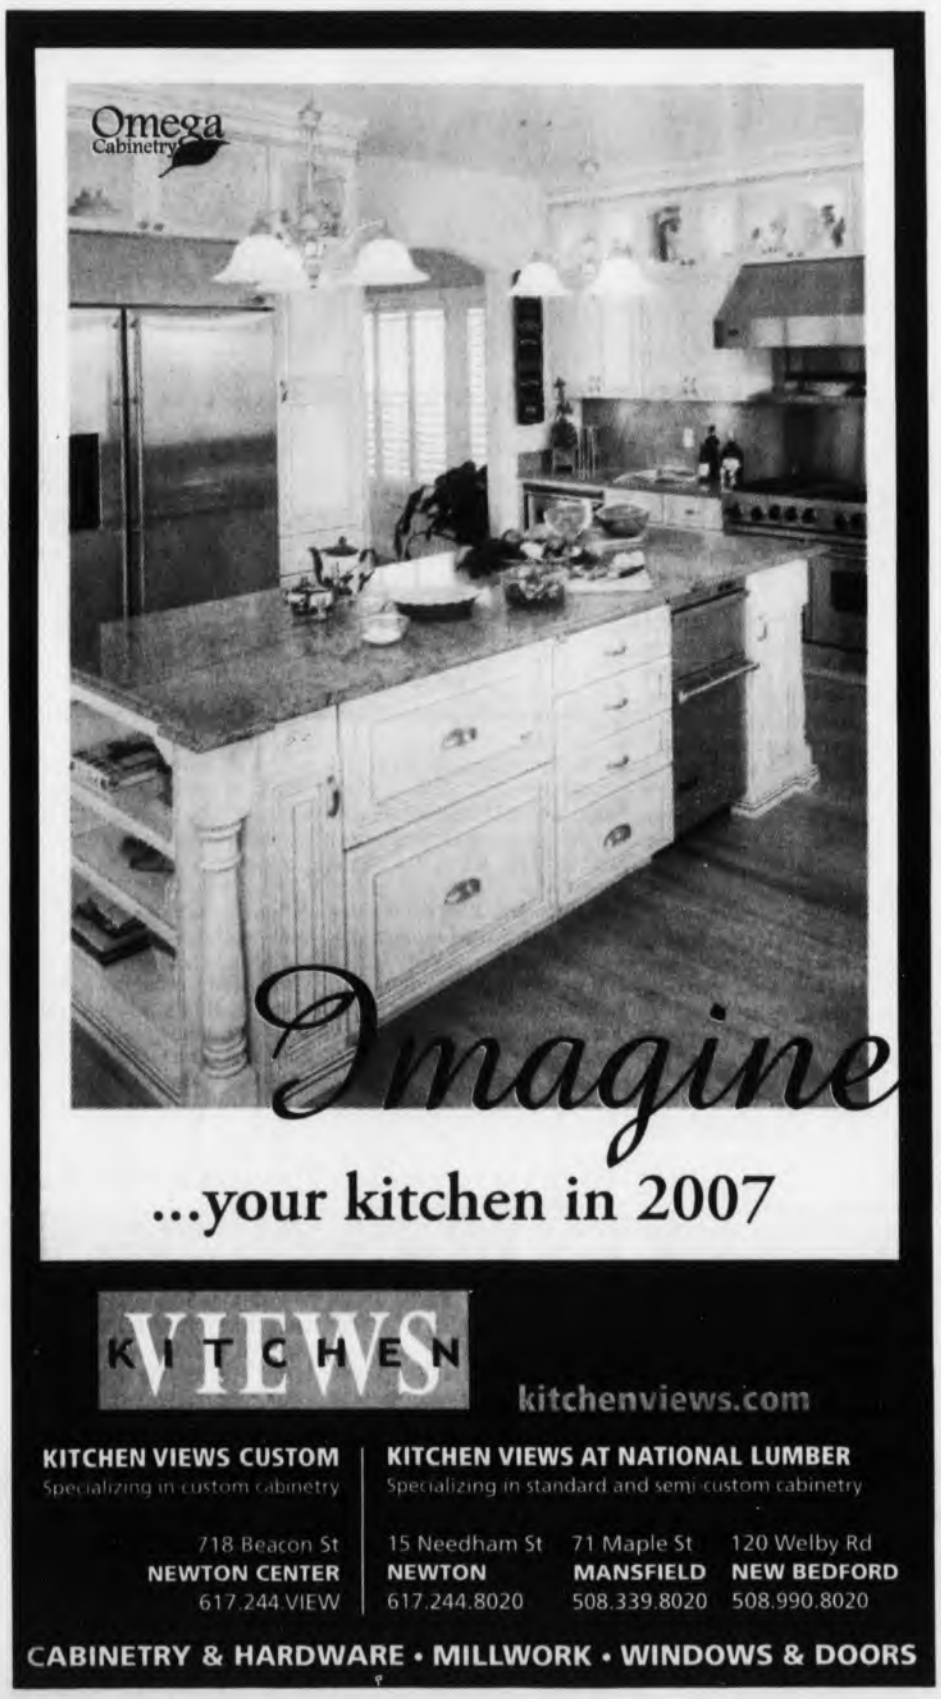
Over the last 32 years projects to renovate and modernize the home have been completed to create more bedrooms, functional space and utility. Yet, the historical charm and structure of the home remains the same as when the Sisters of St. Joseph purchased the house. The same could be said for the organization itself.

The Congregation of Sisters of Saint Joseph, based in Roman Catholic faith, was founded in mid-17th century France. It was begun by six women under the leadership of a Jesuit priest whose goal was to do "whatever is possible for women to do." Twenty-three congregations are currently scattered across the United States, doing myriad work based on individual skills and needs in the community.

The Sisters of St. Joseph's mission and desire since its inception, in its most basic terms, is to "reflect a profound love of God and neighbor without distinction." This mission is prevalent at the Retreat Center in both its physical location and its greater purpose. Sister Joanne Gallagher, Communication Coordinator for the Congregation explains, "The Retreat Center is a part of something much bigger. The home is part of a 356-year history that has reached out to the neighbor in a way that's inclusive and welcoming." The word "neighbor" means much more to the Sisters than its dictionary definition, it's about strengthening and connecting communities.

"We encourage the relationship between neighbor to neighbor, neighbor to nature, neighbor to all of creation. It's the whole of creation becoming holy, creating rippling circles of love," McCarthy says with a smile. She sees the Retreat Center as the ideal place for this type of discovery and exploration.

"We have a strong foundation. Take this house; it is literally built on rock. But also we have a rich heritage [as an organization]. We're interested in serving the needs of the people and reaching out to help those people any way we can."



Their solid "foundation," as McCarthy calls it, in both their faith and mission, has allowed the organization to remain relevant in the 21st century. They remain committed to developing "ever widening and rippling circles of relationships" through technology, education, and service work.

"As a [lay person] outside of the congregation, I really admire the organization's commitment to the house," says Fortunato, who is working to diversify the Center's offerings and tailor them to community needs.

"It's a deliberate and conscious desire by the Sisters to have this type of resource and to use it and share it with the public," answers McCarthy.

And for those closest to the Center: "we want the people of Cohasset to know that they are welcome," says Ghiloni.

More information about the retreat opportunities and the Sisters of St. Joseph is available at their website www.csjretreatcenter.org or by calling (781) 383-6024.

realigned and then wrapped tight to the body to prevent movement while it healed.

Crazy Paws did not have the facilities to keep Pete while he made a full recovery so once he was stabilized Murphy transported him down to the Cape Wildlife Center in West Barnstable. There they have a flight cage where Pete could learn to fly again.

There is no way to know how Pete suffered his injury, D'Arcangelo said that it is common for hawks to get caught on power lines or hit by cars when going after prey. They are completely focused on the food and don't realize there's something in between, she said.

When a hawk is injured and rehabilitated, it must be released back into the wild in the same area that it was caught. Murphy collected Pete from the Cape Wildlife Center and brought him back to his hometown of Cohasset.

He was released behind Crazy Paws on Pleasant Street shortly after 2p.m. on Wednesday afternoon. It is recommended that rehabilitated animals return to the wild three to four hours before sundown to allow them ample time for acclimation with their territory.

"It took about 10 minutes to catch him in the flight cage. He's feisty and he is a fighter," Murphy commented as the Pete flapped his wings in the travel case.

D'Arcangelo donning leather gloves pulled the reddish brown-and-white feathered hawk out of the cage. She held Pete firmly by his talons. He spread his wings several times then calmly waited to be released. After wishing him well, she gave him a lift into the air and he flew off into a nearby tree. Then, after a short pause, he disappeared into the trees.

His release is occurring at just the right time as the species' mating season is approaching. With any luck, residents will be seeing "baby Petes" in the near future — thanks to the people and organizations involved in getting this red-tailed hawk healthy and back to the wild.

Conor Ofsthun, 15, holds the hockey stick he used to rescue a girl on Lily Pond after she had fallen through the ice.

Lane, said she did not think there would be any danger. The girls — Sarah and her younger sister Laura — went skating that day with their cousin, Janet's daughter, Amy, 13. Jacqueline, and Amy's dad, Frank Costa, accompanied them to Lily Pond.

However, as soon as Sarah got on the ice, she went straight for the big rock in the middle of Lily Pond and unbeknownst to her, the water right next to the rock was not frozen. She skated right into the water and then surfaced and screamed for help.

Conor, who is 15 and a sophomore at Cohasset High, first heard one of his friends say he had heard a call for help. Then he saw Sarah, who was trying to pull herself out of the ice. He and the other boys skated right over.

Quick-thinking Conor was the closest and immediately crouched down; he extended his hockey stick to Sarah, and pulled her out.

Then Sarah's mother Jacqueline and her uncle Frank dragged Sarah across the ice.

"We thanked him profusely the next day for saving her life."
— Jacqueline Beacham, mother

The entire incident happened so quickly that Conor's dad, Rich, who had dialed 9-1-1 on his cell phone had barely gotten through when he could report that Sarah was safely out of danger. (Cell phone 9-1-1 calls are routed through the State Police).

"Frank called me with panic in his voice and said to have a warm tub and some dry clothes ready," Janet recalls.

Conor, who played with the Coastal Stars Youth Hockey program for five years, said he and his friends were playing hockey about 50 yards from the rock when they heard Sarah scream. Once he had skated over, Conor said Sarah grabbed his extended hockey stick right away; he said she had been submerged for a few seconds because her ponytail was wet. Conor said he knew not to get too close; he was crouched down on his side to distribute his weight and he used his skates as traction to get the leverage needed to pull Sarah out.

In a telephone interview, Jacqueline said the entire incident was very scary. "We all panicked when this happened but were impressed with Conor's ability to stay calm and skate quickly to pull Sarah out. We will always be thankful," she said. "We thanked him profusely the next day for saving her life." The Beachams were in Cohasset for a five-day visit with the Costas.

Rich Ofsthun said he and Conor's mother Kathy are proud of their son.

"Kathy and I are very proud and rather impressed that a 15-year-old could think so quickly and clearly," he said.

OPINION

Beware of scams

A smart woman last week contacted police after a man saying he was from New York called her home and wanted her social security number. He told the resident that he wanted to give her a free cell phone and was pretty persistent, calling back several times.

Police Chief James Hussey said police want to know if anyone else has received this type of call recently in Cohasset.

He said under no circumstances should anyone give their social security number out over the telephone.

Incidents of identity theft and similar types of fraud are on the rise. Having an individual's social security number can be helpful for a would-be thief in obtaining credit cards and other information using another's identity.

Even if you have not provided your social security number to anyone, it is a good idea to check your credit card bills carefully as soon as they arrive and make sure that all the purchases are yours.

The Mariner editor's husband was the victim of identity theft. Luckily a sharp customer service representative at a J. C. Penney's store in Texas called him up and said she thought someone was trying to use his credit card over the phone.

A quick look at the Master Card bill and it was evident that the credit card number was being used. More than $1400 in purchases had been made within about a 48-hour period at a variety of stores — all the purchases had been made over the phone using his credit card number. Investigation revealed the items were delivered to an address in Minnesota.

We did not find out how the number became compromised but we are now are a lot more careful with disposal of receipts and the like.

Local hero

For the record, Conor Ofsthun, 15, did not want to be the center of attention this week. Like most heroes, Conor did not plan to do anything out of the ordinary when he went skating with friends on Lily Pond over February vacation.

However, when an incident occurred – he acted quickly and used common sense. He had the presence of mind not to panic and not to put himself in danger while helping someone else.

Conor is very humble about his heroic efforts. The family of the girl who fell through the ice that afternoon had hoped that the paper could recognize Conor. Jacqueline Beacham said her family would be eternally grateful to Conor for saving Sarah's life. They also wanted others to be aware of the danger of skating near the Lily Pond rock.

We congratulate Conor and all of Cohasset should be proud of him.

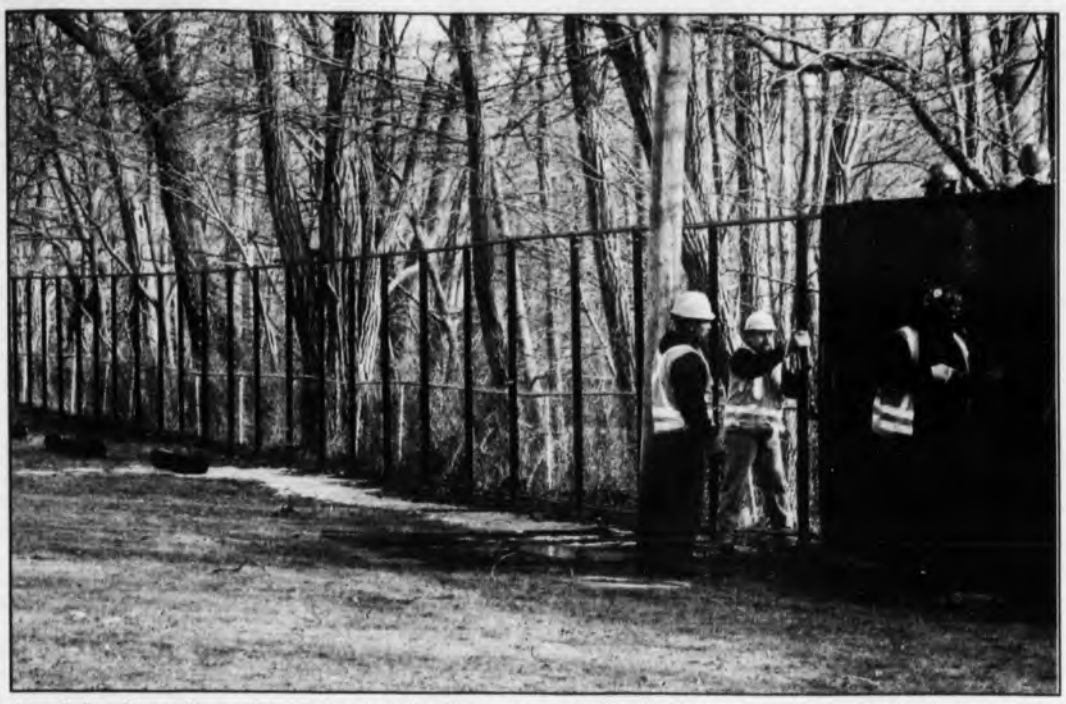
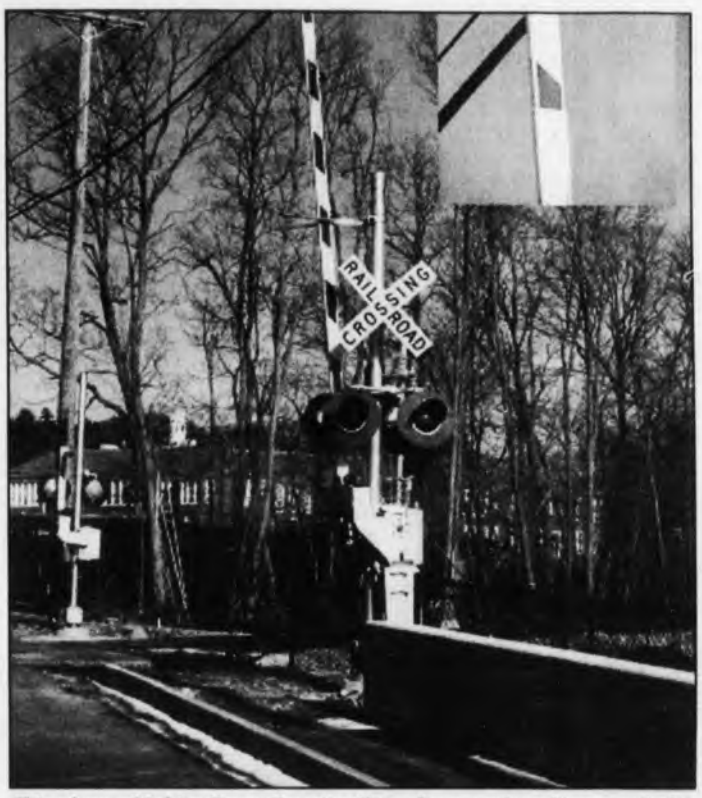
Pond/Spring streets 'a giant mess'

MAKING TRACKS



TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

We continue to get a variety of calls from abutters in the Pond Street / Spring Street area regarding numerous issues. We readily admit that this area is a giant mess and a major inconvenience for the abutters to the work area from all sides. Since this is currently a "Dead End" area most residents can't see what's happening (or most properly what's not happening here).



Essentially, CBB, the MBTA's contractor did a lot of grading and drainage work for this crossing and then left and turned control over to the Cohasset Water Department's contractor to have the water lines upgraded approximately from Lantern Lane to the corner of Spring Street and Cushing Road. As soon as the Water Department finished, the big freeze occurred and the top surface of the ground is as hard as a rock. We are waiting for this to thaw (which should happen soon) so work can begin. However, also we need to consider that even if CBB finishes the grading and is ready for paving, the asphalt plants are not open yet. So, there is not much point in finishing the grading if the paving cannot be done. Additionally, there is still a little work to be done to relocate wires on some of the poles in the area. CBB still needs to have their utilities get these wires relocated.

Meanwhile, the area residents put up with all of the inconvenience. Water and mud wash off of the road across private property. Inventive pedestrians find ways to get around the construction barriers even if it means trampling over private lawns. This makes a mess of private yards. We've tried to find ways to stop it, to no avail. Perhaps, if you know of anyone who thinks short cuts across private property are OK, you might mention to the trespassers that it is not a good idea. The construction area is closed to pedestrians for good reason. It is a dangerous place. And, trespassing is an illegal practice.

More on Town Parking Lot — As we have mentioned many times in our articles, the Town and the MBTA are still in dispute over the number of parking spaces left in the Town Lot once Greenbush is complete. Progress is being made. Early this past Monday morning, we had the opportunity to attend a meeting arranged by state Rep. Garrett Bradley to revisit some of our Town Parking Lot needs with the MBTA. The Greenbush Guys along with the Town Manager and the Chairman of the Board of Selectmen represented the Town, while Jim Eng and Eric Fleming represented the MBTA. Garrett did his usual masterful job in brokering the meeting and leading discussion. Some of the issues involved are the number and arrangement of the parking spaces, and the possible addition of plantings and green space to soften the look of the lot. When the final decisions have been made we'll be sure to let everyone know.

New 8-foot Pratt Library fence being installed. This fence it looks a bit different from the "standard" chain link fence used elsewhere.

More Yet on Safety... — We always try to thread topics on safety through these articles. The MBTA's interest in safety is foremost in their designs and operations. On March 30, the MBTA will be holding a meeting for the safety forces of the Greenbush Towns to review the aspects of safety that will be important to both fire and police as the train begins its commercial service. Items such as the communication protocols between the Town safety personnel and the MBTA are of paramount importance when crises arise.

Similarly, there are a number of train-related issues, which are of concern to the DPW in each Town. The MBTA will hold a seminar on April 16 exclusively for the Greenbush Towns' DPW departments to make sure that each Town fully understands how the DPW will be interfacing with the MBTA and who maintains what as train service begins in the fall. The DPW is particularly important because they have roles to play on behalf of the Town during the every day railroad operation as well as during possible emergency situations.

Fence Stuff — CBB's contractor, McCoy Fence, has been installing fence along the right of way. We're told that the areas that get wood fence and steel picket fence will be delayed. Most recently we snapped a picture of McCoy workers installing new fence behind the Pratt Library. If you happen to look at this fence it looks a bit different from the "standard" chain link fence used elsewhere. First, it is black. This color is used in all areas determined to be historic. Second, it is a very tight weave fence designed so that children's feet won't fit into the loops of the fence. This makes it very hard, if not impossible for children to climb. Third, the fence in this area is 8 feet high rather than the standard 6 feet. This is designed to give an added level of protection to the children and youth who use the facilities behind the library.

Sohier Street Gates — The crossing gates have been installed at the Sohier Street crossing, but are not quite complete. Recently, CBB discovered that one of the relocated poles needs to be moved again, slightly away from the road. The accompanying photo shows a minor hiccup with the wires as they are presently located. If you look at the photo you will see an inset close up of the top part of the gate that nearly touches the overhead wires. Since the gate arm is not metal, there is no threat to personal safety. But CBB recognizes that the wires need to be moved a bit.

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

A total of $1,166 a month to lease a Cadillac DeVille . . . $27,000 to change the décor in the corner office . . . expensive helicopter rides . . . $72,000 a year for a secretary to keep your wife's appointments . . . Kind of makes you long for the good old days of Michael Dukakis, doesn't it?

Would you believe that almost a full generation has passed since Michael was the governor of the Commonwealth for a record dozen years.

For most of you, he is just a guy who ran for president against the first George Bush, made a fool of himself by riding in a tank with a helmet too small for him on his head, and turned murderer Willie Horton loose on furlough to rape and pillage once more.

But no one ever accused Michael of leasing a Cadillac for his own use. Or a Ford, for that matter. Michael's milieu was the MBTA, which he caught every morning at his home in Brookline, got off at Park Street and walked to his office in the state house.

For most of you, he is just a guy who ran for president against the first George Bush...

He was so devoted to the T that he almost missed the birth of his first child because of it.

Wife Kitty, in her book "Now You Know," tells of the time she went into labor and someone called Michael, then a state representative, at the State House to alert him that he was about to become a father.

"Michael sprinted down the steps of the State House, across the Boston Common, and into the Park Street subway station. He was halfway home, when suddenly, without any warning, the streetcar went dead. The lights went out, the power stopped. This was the Big Blackout of 1965. Michael got off the street car and ran the rest of the way home."

Neither the Herald or the Globe have honed in on our new governor's dining habits as yet but I'm willing to bet that whatever they find, filet mignon or lobster thermidor, it won't stand up to Michael's lunching tastes.

Peter Lucas, my old colleague at the Herald, was once invited to lunch with the Duke and recounted his experience in a 1979 column.

"I met him in his austere office in the law firm of Hill & Barlow, expecting that we would go out to some restaurant, even if I had to pick up the tab.

"Instead, he sent out for two ham and cheese sandwiches, mine with mustard, his with mayo.

"His secretary returned with the two little things, carrying one in each opened hand as though they were two captured rare birds.

"He unwrapped his sandwich thoughtfully and carefully as though, beneath the wrapping, was something extravagant — like Genoa salami.

"I unwrapped mine and two little limp slices of pickles dropped out. He picked at his sandwich while I devoured mine. He drank a glass of water and I indulged myself in a Pepsi."

When he was governor, Michael used to throw a Christmas party for the State House press and Peter Lucas noted a strange thing — the bar was always shut off when he went for his third beer. He checked on it.

"There is no reporter around," he wrote, "who has ever had three beers at the governor's party."

HEALTH NOTES

Ounce of prevention for house fires

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In Massachusetts, home heating oil spills and leaks have become an all too common problem.

The recent cold weather has brought more than inconvenience to many Massachusetts Towns. The Cohasset fire department has issued a warning about fire danger: Nationwide, for the first 16 days of February there were 59 house-fire fatalities. The Cohasset Fire Service passes along the following life-saving suggestions:

- Check smoke and carbon monoxide alarms to be sure they are working properly.
- Have an escape plan with a meeting place.
- Once you exit your home, DO NOT return. Too many people lose their lives going back into a burning home.
- Stoves are not made for heating homes.
- Supplemental heating devices should be used and maintained in accordance with manufacturer recommendations. Keep combustibles clear. Do not leave supplemental heating devices unattended.
- If you are burning wood in your fireplace, make sure your chimneys are properly maintained. That goes for your furnace, as well.. Any flu can develop dangerous cracks. Have a Chimney sweep check the lining of your flu for cracks to ensure a safe fireproof heating system.
- If candles are necessary, use them in a safe environment in a fireproof container and away from children. Do not leave them unattended.
- And for the long term, consider getting a residential fire sprinkler. According to statistics, the risk of death by fire is reduced by 82 percent when smoke detectors are accompanied with residential fire sprinklers.

Related problems: In Massachusetts, home heating oil spills and leaks have become an all too common problem. The culprit in most cases is the delivery or supply line that carries home heating oil or kerosene from storage tank to the furnace.

Tanks and delivery lines sometimes leak! Particularly in older homes, delivery lines are buried underground, or placed within or beneath concrete basement floors. They are generally made of copper, steel, brass or iron. When they come in direct contact with soil or concrete and water, the resulting chemical reactions can make them corrode and spring leaks. Delivery line breaks can also occur when there is shifting or settling in a home's foundation, basement floor, or the soil that supports them.

It's the law! State fire prevention regulations now require all new delivery lines to be encased in a non-metallic protective sleeve when installed. Sleeves are also required for replacement delivery lines when a listed oil safety valve is not used. Remember that if you own or purchase an older home, your delivery line may not have a protective sleeve since the original heating system may never have been upgraded. And leaks can continue undetected for years, seriously damaging your property and lowering its value.

Extra Protection — Even better than just a sleeve is the sleeve plus a double wall tank which protects the entire fuel delivery system. The Board of Health will soon consider requiring double wall tanks for new construction and fuel tank upgrades.

Paying a little now may save a lot later: A home heating oil leak insures a couple of things: First the cleanup will be expensive. Second, the experience will be highly disruptive to your family, and maybe your neighbors. Investing a small amount of money now by having your home heating oil delivery line encased in a protective sleeve can prevent leaks, sparing you the cost of cleanup and the potential loss of property value

When home heating oil leaks out of a buried delivery line, it initially migrates into the soil beneath the house and eventually may affect the groundwater. Drinking, breathing or coming in contact with contaminated water, air, or soil can damage your health. Thus, DEP regulations require cleanup to State standards within specific timelines. Such actions may include excavation of contaminated soil to protect public health and the environment. Most homeowner insurance policies do not cover losses from leaking tank systems and environmental cleanups.

One such leak recently cost a Cohasset homeowner big bucks. You should check with your insurer to see whether or not your policy covers such losses. You should also consider checking into and joining an insurance and/or oil company program if you are not currently covered. Joining such a program could provide you with financial assistance and protection in the event of a leak or spill.

Ask your oil burner technician to check your heating system and evaluate it for possible leaks. Inexpensive preventive measures such as the installation of an automatic shutoff valve or replacement of the oil delivery line with one encased in a protective sleeve can greatly reduce your risk of a heating oil leak. Elected officials could lose option for town health insurance benefit

MFORD@CNC.COM

The issue was put on the list of priorities to be explored by Selectmen this year.

Selectmen are grappling with the issue of whether to allow elected officials, who are paid a stipend, to be eligible for town health insurance benefits.

State law allows towns to consider those elected by popular vote eligible for health insurance coverage during their term regardless of the number of hours spent in service to the town.

Members of the Board of Selectmen, Board of Assessors, and the Town Moderator are eligible in Cohasset. However, only two people — both on the Board of Assessors — are currently taking advantage of the benefit.

As a cost-saving measure going forward, Selectmen are considering restricting health insurance for elected officials only to those who work regularly more than 20 hours per week.

In an interview this week, Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said Selectmen are revisiting the issue now as one of many opportunities to reduce town expenses.

He explained the town could grandfather those now receiving the benefit as long as they continue to be reelected; terminate the grandfathering at each individual's next election; or terminate the coverage on a date specific.

Like any other employee, paid elected officials are entitled to health insurance after they leave office if they are vested in the state retirement system. One becomes vested after 10 years of service. Therefore, if the town does not make any changes, a paid elected official receiving benefits under the current act with 10 or more years of service, could continue to receive the benefit when they are no longer in office.

A state law enacted in 1955 governs the matter.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said there does not appear to be any former selectmen or assessors who are receiving the health insurance benefit.

Several months ago, a town resident suggested ending this benefit for elected officials, however grandfathering those who currently receive the benefit.. It was put on the list of priorities to be explored by Selectmen this year, Griffin explained.

The town must offer health insurance to employees who work at least 20 hours per week. The Cohasset Town Clerk, who is elected, works more than 20 hours per week and is entitled to health insurance like any other employee, Griffin said.

The courts have ruled that towns may discontinue coverage that has previously been provided to elected officials working less than 20 hours per week.

Town Counsel has said Selectmen have the right to restrict health insurance coverage to those elected officials who work more than 20 hours for week and has the authority to grandfather those who are currently receiving health insurance but do not work 20 hours per week.

At a recent meeting Town Counsel Paul DeRensis said Selectmen should make the decision and said, due to the personal nature of the issue, Town Meeting might not be the best forum to hold the discussion. "The law gives the decision to you," DeRensis said.

The town offers two plans: HMO Blue and Blue Care Elect. Under HMO Blue, the town's share of an individual plan is $4,863 (89 percent of the total premium); the town share of the family plan is $10,104 (69 percent of the total premium). Under Blue Care Elect, the town's share of an individual plan is $3,142 (50 percent of the total premium); and $7,996 for the family plan (also 50 percent of the total premium). Ninety active employees and 20 retirees take the individual plan, while 125 active employees and 14 retirees take the family plan. Two active employees and one retiree take the individual Blue Care Elect plan and three active employees and one retiree take the family Blue Care Elect plan.

Active teachers are part of the list of active employees on the health plan. Retired teachers on the other hand receive their health insurance through the state's Group Insurance Commission.

The Chairman of the Board of Selectmen receives an annual stipend of $1500, with the other two selectmen receiving $1,000 a piece. The Chairman of the Board of Assessors receives an annual stipend of $1300, with the other two members receiving $1200; the moderator is paid $1 a year.

Water bills could be rising

Commissioners propose rate hike

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

There could be a fair number of Cohasset residents who did not live in town during the infamous summer of 1994 and therefore, don't have any idea that the town faced a water crisis of monumental proportions.

It was that summer when the then antiquated water distribution system effectively broke down – leaving many homes along the coast with nothing much coming out of their taps.

The Cohasset Water Department, which is self-supporting from user fees and other water revenue, got the message that things had to change and the system had to be upgraded.

Water Commission John McNabb described the water crisis of 1994 as a "wakeup call" and explained that nothing had been done to improve the distribution system since the plant was built in 1978.

Now turn the clock head 13 years. The Water Department has continued to move forward to meet the demands of the 21st Century, the commission says.

But the cost associated with upgrades to the plant and water mains, and acquisition of land in the watershed, could cause a few ripples at the March 31 annual Town Meeting.

The Water Commission will propose a 27 percent increase in water rates. If Town Meeting gives the go-ahead, the new rates would take effect on April 15, 2007.

The Water Commission is having a public hearing on the proposed rate increase at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday (March 6) at the treatment plant, 339 King St.

At last week Selectmen's meeting during which the Water Commission made its presentation, Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said water rates increased in 2005 and water users would not be expecting another hike. He said he expected angry calls and a firestorm of opposition.

The proposed rate restructuring covers the $150,000 cost of hydrant rental (see related story) that has been charged annually to the town. The increased rates would cover that cost and pay for planned major improvements to the Lily Pond Treatment Plant to improve drinking water quality and to meet stringent federal drinking water standards, the commissioners said in their budget message.

Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer explained this week rate increase would add about $35 per quarterly bill – or about $12 per month – to the majority of customers' bills. Families with large irrigation systems would pay more when they are running "full blast" during July and August.

The difference is based on a typical quarterly bill today of $126 increasing to $161. Palmer explained that for those residents whose homes are on the sewer – the sewer bill shows up on the water bill. So if the sewer bill is $300, about $120 of that is for water. This proposed increase is not related to the sewer rate and will not cause sewer rates to go up, he said.

Because of the many capital improvement projects — most initiated after 1994— debt service (principal and interest payments on loans) accounts for 58.6 percent of the fiscal 2008 Water Department budget. Land acquisition makes up another category of loans.

The rate increase is necessary to pay for the capital improvement plan voted on by the town that includes at $21 million investment plan being implemented over several years, Palmer Said.

"We have been following a specific project plan which takes us out to about 2010, but the scope of the project is finite, based on what was presented to voters in 2004, which was based on issues identified through an assessment of the current state of our infrastructure," he said.

Plans include a major retrofit of the Lily Pond Water Treatment Plant including a new pretreatment system allowing the water system to be in compliance with increasingly stringent water quality standards.

"The improvements delivered through this system will no doubt come as a great relief to residents who have dealt with the 'dirty water' issues recently. The miex system we have successfully evaluated is specifically designed to address this by removing dissolved solids that cause water discoloration."

Palmer pointed out water rates have grown at roughly the rate of inflation. He noted the Water Commission has elected to go before Town Meeting for water rate approval. "This is not a requirement but is something we have elected to do," he said.

Since 1994, the Water Department has replaced or rehabilitated 15.5 miles of water mains, making up 43 percent of the 36 miles of mains. The Water Department's aggressive land acquisition program, with funding assistance from the Community Preservation Fund and the state, has protected 121 acres in the Lily Pond and Aaron River watersheds since 2001.

The Water Department is also reducing the impact from stormwater from the Peppermint Brook sub-watershed area of Lily Pond by installing 56 raingardens, which passively clean the stormwater and overall discharge of pollutants from that area into Lily Pond.

McNabb explained to selectmen that proposed water rates were "progressive" in structure meaning they encourage conservation by charging heavy users more. The Water Commission proposes going form a two-step to a three-step system, so those in the first step (lower users) would not be increased even more. About 60 percent of water users would fall in the first step.

Hydrant fees flushed out of town

Water Dept. to charge users

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The town has been renting the fire hydrants from the Cohasset Water Department but due to fiscal constraints, has not been paying the entire bill for years.

Therefore, the water department is taking matters into its own hands and plans to charge water users for the "hydrant fees."

"The reason we propose the change is that we've practically never had the entire amount paid," Water Commissioner John McNabb told Selectmen.

The $150,000 hydrant fee based on $375 per hydrant has been part of the fire department's budget. The fee was approved at the 1997 Town Meeting. Last year the town paid the water department $75,000 and in fiscal 2006, the town paid $52,091. Town Manager Bill Griffin said he increased the amount as a good-faith gesture to show the town intended to address this matter over a period of time

"The reason we propose the change is that we've practically never had the entire amount paid."
— John McNabb, Water Commission

The issue surfaced during discussion of water department warrant articles during last week's Selectmen's meeting that included a proposed water rate increase and restructuring. If the article passes at the March 31 annual Town Meeting then the hydrant rental fee would be repealed.

The water commissioners are proposing a 27 percent increase in water rates, which are subject to Town Meeting approval (see related story).

Selectman Fred Koed, a former water commissioner, was not pleased with transferring the hydrant fee over to water users. "Currently everyone is billed fairly over the real estate tax base," he said.

The town continues to pay for Hingham hydrant fees. Aquarion Water Company, whose plant is in Hingham, serves North Cohasset. Hydrant fees include fire protection costs for municipal buildings, all of which are served by Cohasset water.

Koed explained this week that the entire town pays for the Hingham hydrant fees. But if the budget shift is made, only Cohasset water customers would pay Cohasset hydrant fees and only Cohasset customers would pay for municipal protection costs. All town buildings are served by Cohasset water.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said Cohasset pays Aquarion Water Company $17,120 annually for 28 hydrants.

Koed also said those people on well water would not be paying anything for fire protection if water customers pick up the hydrant fees.

Question of the Week

Selectman candidates: Voters may have lost their appetite for overrides. How can Cohasset balance its budget without overrides?

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

The three big drivers of annual increases in expenses for the Town are contracted salary obligations for personnel, debt load and medical benefits. In the fiscal year 2008 upcoming, these increases amount to (including all costs) approximately $1.5M. Revenue for the Town from taxation and new growth is approximately $1.0M. The Town, therefore, must find new sources of revenue to cover the difference.

It is an annual problem. For the past two years and including the fiscal '08 year we have covered the difference by reducing expenses where possible, with new growth, by increasing fees, with foundation grants and through additional State aid. In the future there are opportunities to reduce expenses with the cooperation of town and school employees through collective bargaining agreements, but there are limited additional opportunities to reduce other expenses. In fact, there are increasing demands to increase expenditures for the maintenance of Town infrastructure and buildings, and to meet high performance goals for the schools. Revenue opportunities through increases in fees are encountering resistance and people have already been very generous in supporting the schools through voluntary contributions. Additional State aid cannot be relied upon. There is, however, revenue potential in new growth in residential and commercial properties.

The Town cannot therefore indefinitely avoid Prop. 2-1/2 overrides. It can reduce the frequency of the requests for overrides and limit the amount of the requests. The leadership of the Town has an obligation to provide efficient and effective government but also to recommend overrides when to do otherwise would be imprudent.

SELECTMAN/ Paul Carlson

Under Proposition 2-1/2, we can increase spending by 2-1/2 percent over the prior year plus new revenues from tax base growth. With a growth factor of about 2 percent, our spending can rise by 4-1/2 percent. Since we have little population growth and low inflation, we are not facing major increases in the town budget. However, there are always pressures to expand spending on town services. Besides seeking more state aid, we do have some important options that are under our control:

1. Foster more commercial development. The Economic Devel-opment Committee is reviewing opportunities to generate more commercial activity. Two recommendations we adopted created the Transportation Overlay District at the railroad station and relaxed our very stringent parking requirements for Route 3A developments. The town is also discussing village development options.

2. Carefully control spending in all our departments. For example, some towns with much better academic results spend less per student than we do. We should perform serious research to find out which of their practices we can adopt.

3. Hold all departments accountable for effective and efficient operations as well as determine whether their practices are consistent with changing conditions.

4. Continue to raise fees consistent with commonsense, state law and other restrictions.

5. Cut our large debt burden and associated debt service through asset sales and expense savings elsewhere in the budget.

Spending growth of 4-1/2 percent strikes a fair balance between the interests of those who want more town services and others who receive and expect few services. Cohasset's financial and budget strategies must not rely on routine overrides.

Nevertheless, we must understand that, if the Avalon project goes forward, we will probably need substantial spending increases (and overrides) to provide services to our new residents.

School Committee candidates: There's talk about more AP classes in Cohasset's quest to be the school system with "best and the brightest." With this focus, is enough being done for the students who might not be top achievers?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

As a School Committee member it is incumbent upon me to make sure that our goals address the needs of all of our students. We cannot lose focus on the well-being of the entire student body, to accommodate a certain segment. With this in mind, here are four district goals for our Schools which address the needs of all of our students:

- Challenge all students to proficiency and beyond
- Close achievement gaps where they exist
- Function as a professional learning community
- Partnership with families and community

With in each of our goals, each administrator has identified their needs to achieve these goals. A need can be as "simple" as a new textbook or as "grand" as adding a teacher. However, each need is geared toward providing the support and resources necessary to enable all students to meet or surpass our high expectations.

At the high school, one can look at it as a ripple effect; we need to be able to challenge all students to advance within any given subject. For instance; the college prep student challenged to move into an honors course or an honors student to move into an AP course. Ultimately, this will take an increase in AP courses so our students can meet our challenge and be competitive as they search for their postsecondary education. Currently, a student may not be able to advance within a subject due to overcrowding and/or lack of staffing. This need is directly linked to another goal of being within the top 10 Public Schools in the State and being within the top 100 Public Schools in the Country.

It is imperative for us to realize, in order to reach our district goals within 3-5 years, our schools will need an adequate and predictable budget, annually.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Peter Richardsson

"A rising tide lifts all boats!"

The school committee's goals do call for more AP classes; from 8 currently to 15 by 2011. This is both necessary and laudable. What is more important is that the goals also call for AP participation to jump from 20 percent to 70 percent. Increased opportunity, participation, and assets will challenge more students to become "top achievers." Additional goals/metrics will make achievement opportunities even more ubiquitous.

- 0 percent of all students in all subjects scoring Failing/Needs Improvement on MCAS.
- 0 percent of all students in all subjects scoring Advanced on MCAS.
- 100 percent of students scored at or above aptitude on Stanford 10, grades 3 through 10.
- Differentiated instruction for students of all aptitudes.
- Recruiting highly qualified content specialist teachers with degrees in their content area to reduce class sizes.
- Student centered rather than an institution centered philosophy.
- Addition of mandatory co-curricular tracks (Art, Music, Drama, Athletics, Academic Interscholastic Competition) for students with varied strengths or interests.

Mr. Slanetz and the school committee have developed more precise and granular goals to improve performance at all levels, and increasing AP offerings is necessary for the 70 percent of the students that will now be prepared and encouraged to handle an AP course.

A quick anecdote; as a high school ski coach in Maine our team won the state championships, (10 teams competed with 12 skiers per team). The success of our team was our depth. While I could count on my top three skiers to finish in the top 15, the secret to our success was that I could also count on skiers 4-10 finishing in the top 50. The plan here is not to offer AP classes at the expense of the middle; it is to prepare the middle to finish in the top 50, metaphorically.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For both school committee and selectman candidates: When it comes to the budget, town appears to be split into two distinct "camps" - the town side and the school side. What could you do to encourage better communication and decrease the appearance of distrust and skepticism between the "two sides?"

Responses should be brief —no more than 300 words — and should be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

CAMBI HEADS TO NEW ENGLANDS

Cohasset's Nick Cambi has a hold of Central Catholic's Mike Leavitt during his close 5-4 loss in the championship semifinal during All-States in Salem on Saturday. Cambi would eventually finish fourth in the 189-pound weight class, a finish good enough to qualify him for the all-New England competition this weekend in New Haven, Conn.

Skippers can't get by Sacred Heart

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

KINGSTON - With only three upperclassmen on the roster, any hope the Cohasset High girls basketball team had of knocking off a tournament-tested Sacred Heart squad in the first round of the Division 4 South girls basketball tournament was slim at the very best.

The Lady Skippers held their own early in the game, but Sacred Heart's suffocating defense eventually took over on the way to a 49-29 victory.

The Lady Saints had as many turnovers as blocked shots (six) and after slow start to the night offensively, they put things in motion more than enough to take a 28-20 lead at the break.

"This was a great experience for the kids to be able to play in this type of a game in a playoff atmosphere," Skippers head coach John Levangie said after the loss that closed the book on his squad's campaign. "There's only two seniors on the roster (co-captains Lacey Richardson and Haley Haracz), so the rest of the squad got a taste of the tourney atmosphere and they'll all want to come back and maybe stay around a little longer next season."

Playing without starting point guard and offensive catalyst Ari Eisenstein (flu), Sacred Heart struggled to find a groove early on in the game, while Kayla Farren (six points) and Haracz (four points) were each able to drain outside jumpers to put Cohasset up 4-0 in the opening minutes of action.

Skaters bow out of tourney

By Rich Eldred
RELDRED@CNC.COM

ORLEANS - It took two schools combined to end the Skippers' season, but it ended Tuesday night at the Charles Moore Arena in Orleans when Cape Tech/Chatham defeated Cohasset 7-4 in a Div. 3 hockey state tournament preliminary round game.

The Skippers wound up 8-9-3 while CT/C (10-9-2) moves on to play top seeded Norwell (16-3-1) tonight (March 2) in Bourne.

"It was a great effort. My hats off to Cape Cod Tech," Skippers head coach Bob Walsh reflected. "Every time we put something up then they were able to battle us back. My guys worked their heads off tonight. Nobody has to hang their heads. They kept working and working right to the last buzzer."

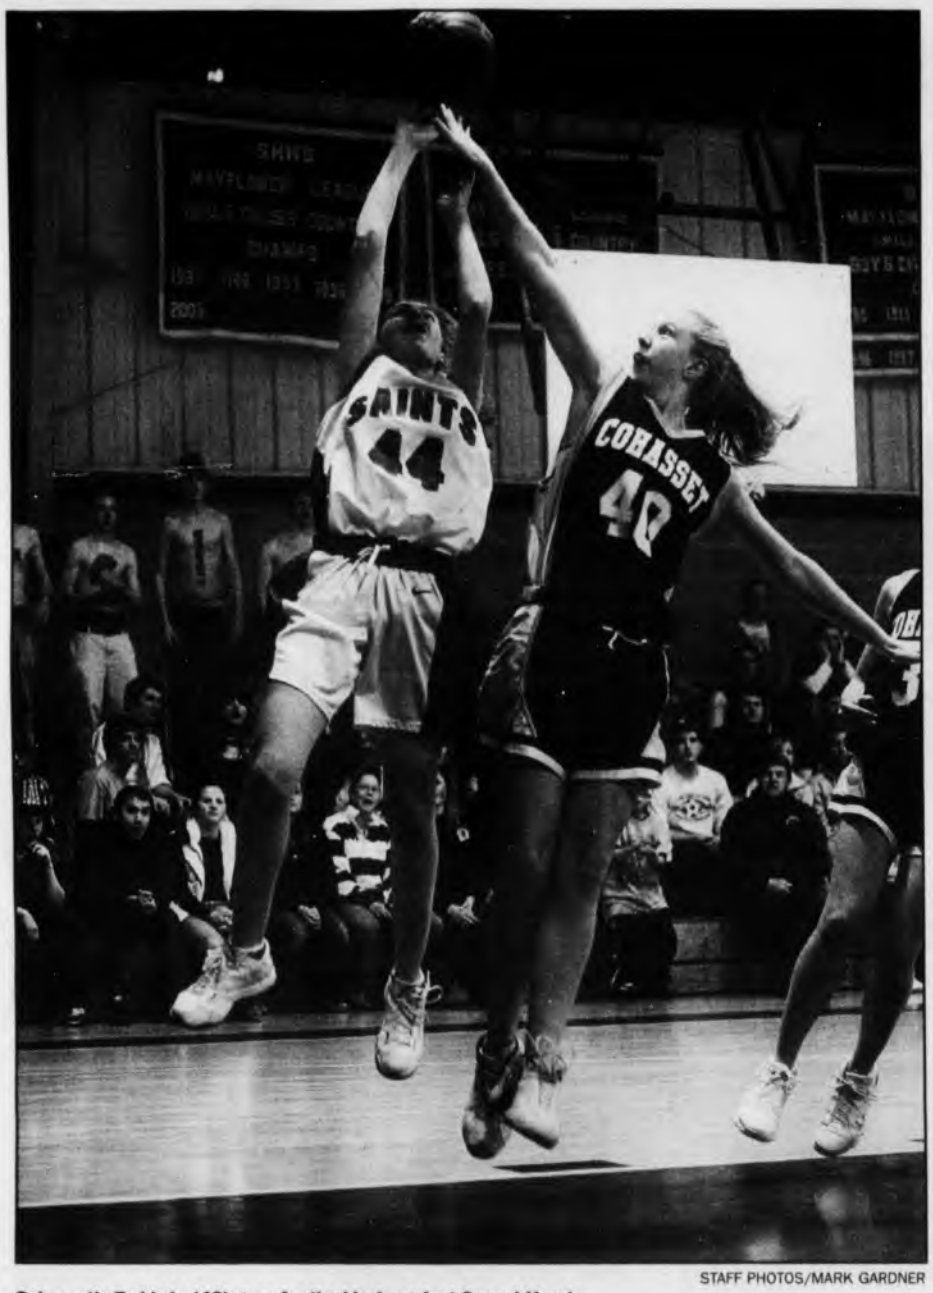
Cohasset hit the skids late in the first period, falling behind 3-1, and while they fought back the unified team from Cape Cod always had a quick counterpunch to rebuild a two-goal lead. The last tally was an open netter with 30 seconds remaining in the game.

"Everybody was in it to win tonight, right from the get go," said Cape Tech/Chatham head coach Scott Rebello. "It's a good thing because the other team came off the bench and they wanted it too. They were skating hard. Their goaltender had some nice saves. I thought both goaltenders were phenomenal tonight."

It was a solid year for the Skippers, one that saw them finish third in the South Shore League.

"We were a .500 team," Walsh noted. "But these guys trained harder than a lot of teams I've coached. They came to work early in the mornings for 5 a.m. practices. They were there at 4:30 in the morning. These were the hardest working guys I've ever had the pleasure to coach."

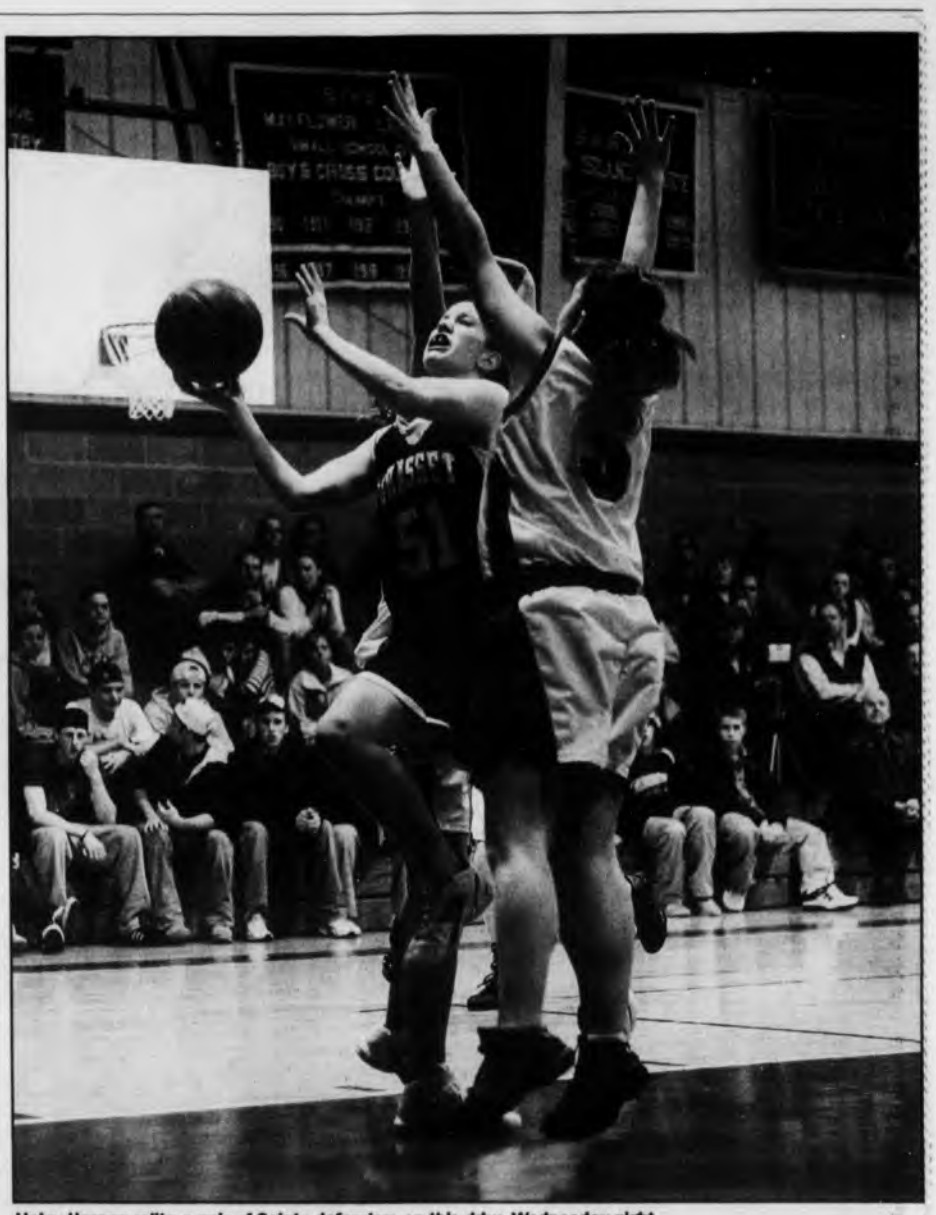
It's always hard to say goodbye, Walsh added, saying, "It's a great group of seniors and they're going to be sorely missed. But we've got a great group of young guys coming up. That's the thing about high school hockey, it comes in cycles."



Cohasset got on the board first with their first shot when RK Quebec blasted a slapshot from the blue line through as screen 1:35 into the game. Chuck Czerkawski picked up the assist.

The Skippers outshot CT/C in the first period 7-6 but the unified squad picked up three goals. Richie Randall's shot dribbled between goalie Johnny Wade's pads. Matt Donoghue caught the inside of the far post with a wide shot from the circle and followed that by breaking away with the puck after a face-off and flipping it over Wade's shoulder for a 3-1 lead with 3:30 left in the period.

That two-tally margin set the pace for the night. The Skippers played well, especially in the opening minutes of each period, but CT/C goalie Mike Aiesi was enjoying a good night.



"There were a bunch of times we had opportunities in front when the goalie gave us the

The Mayflower League champions finally got the lead at 9-8 with 9:32 left in the first half thanks to a free throw by Alyssa Barry, and the Saints would never trail again. Sophomores Ali Lyons and Molly Cahill each had eight of their 11 points on the night before the break as Sacred Heart built an eight-point lead going into the half.

Sacred Heart turned up the defense several notches in the second half, stretching the lead out to as many as 20 points. Cohasset never got its legs under them after the break as they were limited to just one basket from the field (a jumper by Tori Lehr) over a 14-minute span that started the second half.

There were some strong signs for the future of the Skippers in the loss, as sophomore Sammi Lehr led all scorers with 12 points. Tori Lehr added five points and Richardson had a basket in her final high school game.

"We'll learn from this. We've been up and down offensively most of the season and this wasn't one of our better nights," Levangie said. "But to hold a team as good as Sacred Heart to less than 50 points is a feather in our cap."

Skippers 51,
Bristol-Plymouth 18
By Eric MacCarthy

With a 10-10 record the Skippers just snuck into the tournament, and had to play a preliminary round game Monday at home against Bristol-Plymouth, a team they beat by a very large margin earlier in the year.

Nothing changed this time around, as the Lady Skippers were able to easily defeat Bristol Plymouth winning 51-18.

Right from the tip-off Cohasset began to dominate the game as they started on a 9-0 run. They played a very strong and disciplined half-court press that flustered Bristol-Plymouth's offense and led to many offensive opportunities for Cohasset.

The rest of the half went about that same way as Cohasset began to pull farther and farther ahead, and it was clear they were the better team. At halftime, Cohasset led 28-10 with Sammi Lehr doing most of the scoring, putting up 12 points.

Haracz and Richardson also played very well, as they have all year. Richardson put up four points, finished with six, and really helped the offense to function. Haracz finished with only two but it was her defensive awareness and presence that helped to shut down Bristol-Plymouth's offense and hold them to only 10 points in the first half.

As a result of the large lead, both Haracz and Richardson played very little in the second half of what would be their final home game as Cohasset Lady Skippers. About this, Haracz said, "It was good because all of the younger players got to play a lot in the second half. They are going to be all set for next year and years after with all the talent."

One of the groups of these "young players" is the freshmen. Meredith Kelly, Samantha Crough and Tori Lehr have made huge contributions to the team throughout the entire season, and continued their strong play in the tournament.

Lehr, who has been a very reliable inside presence, like her sister, put up eight points. Crough, as usual, came right off the bench and scored almost immediately, finishing with four points. Kelly, who has shown the ability to become a league all-star in the next couple years, finished with seven points. All three girls will be heading the basketball program throughout their high school careers.

In the second half, Cohasset once again dominated every aspect of the game, from rebounding to staying out of foul trouble. Everyone was able to play and make contributions to the fine win. Sammi Lehr led all scorers with 14 points and also had over 10 rebounds for a double-double.

rebound we needed," Walsh noted. "But we had a hard time putting it in. That could have made the difference in the game."

Wade was sharp as well and he stuffed Tech/Chatham captain Corey Ritchie on a breakaway early in the second period. Aiesi matched that, blocking a Pat Doonan breakway, but 5:36 into the period Doonan scored on a power play, with another slapshot through a screen. Conor Holway and Czerkawski assisted.

"I guess we expected a dogfight," Rebello said. "It was going to be up-and-down hockey. Once you get here you aren't playing the weak sisters in the league. Now we know we can put the puck in the net against a quality team."

The Skippers pressed hard but couldn't get the tying goal, and when they gave Tech/Chatham a power play at the end of the period, Donoghue completed the hat trick when he took a feed from behind the net and fired the puck just under the crossbar with five seconds left in the period.

The Skippers took a long break in the locker room and came out flying, taking the first six shots of the final period. They trimmed the lead to 4-3 on a beautiful play when Czerkawski whacked the ice calling for the puck and Doonan fed him from behind the net. It was a bang-bang play and Czerkowski nailed it.

The goal came at the 3:33 mark but two minutes later Zach Buckley picked up a loose puck, put a few shifts on and put it into the net from right in front for a 5-3 lead.

That was the Cape team's first shot of the period and Cohasset kept the pressure on; at one point they'd out-shot CT/C 12-3 in the period. A minute later, with 7:59 left to play, Czerkawski banged the puck into a pack and it deflected and bounced over Aiesi's stick into the net. It was the first real break the Skippers got. Doonan and Zach Murray got assists and Cohasset trailed by just one, 5-4, with plenty of time left.

As they'd done all night, the CT/C dug in its skates. At the 9:48 mark Buckley pounced on a loose puck in front of the net and punched it in. When the Skippers pulled Wade, Randall skated the length of the ice and lobbed the puck into the empty net with 30 seconds to play.

Cohasset out-shot CT/C for the game, 28-25.

Morris to host camps

Marshfield native will have something for every laxer at weeklong July clinics

By Julie Ann Nevero
JNEVERO@CNC.COM

Sean Morris had to learn the hard way.

The skills and strategy the Marshfield native has acquired over the years helped him guide his UMass-Amherst lacrosse team to the NCAA title game last summer but they didn't come easy. Morris spent years developing the chops that helped land him a gig playing professionally for the Chicago Machine in the MLL (Major League Lacrosse) but believes other kids shouldn't have to take that route.

Accordingly, the former Ram is developing the Sean Morris Lacrosse Academy and will be conducting two top-notch camps this July. Morris' pair of weeklong sessions will feature other professional players, local collegiate players, top area high school coaches and players, and his camp partner and director of the EMass Jr. Minutemen, Dan Chouinard.

"It's our opinion that there just aren't any quality camps on the South Shore that will have these kids playing at the level they want to be at," Morris said while fiddling with a lacrosse stick inside Choinard's Minutemen office in Rockland. "Basically, the sport has outgrown the coaching. Most of the youth programs are conducted by Dads who haven't played the sport."

Selected as a Tewaaraton Award finalist twice in his UMass career, that is the Heisman Trophy of lacrosse, Morris said camps all too often feature the same drills, skills, and techniques and this repetitive activity does little to help a lacrosse athlete develop to the next level.

At Morris' two camps (a co-ed slated for July 9-13 at Hingham High and a boys only July 16-20 at Thayer Academy) athletes will benefit from a 7-to-1 player to coach ratio. Essentially, there will be a coach available to offer instruction for every area of the field. All of Morris' and Choinard's instructors have played the game.

"Every guy is really going to know his stuff," Morris said. "We're pulling in the best the sport has to offer for these kids and we're really excited about it. The people we're bringing in and the tools they're going to learn are things they won't see anywhere else.

"We'll do the drills and skills stuff, but more importantly, the kids are going to learn a lot in terms of the strategy of the game and why you do things a certain way. We'll demonstrate it for the kids and then have them go through the motions with us."

Morris and Choinard have been working together for nearly a decade. A coach at Weymouth High for the last nine years, Choinard coached against Morris when he played at Marshfield High. Since then, the pair has conducted smaller camps and Morris has popped in on some of Choinard's Jr. Minutemen practice sessions.

"You would have thought Elvis had just walked in the way the kids react when they see Sean," said Choinard, who's also a resident of Weymouth and firefighter there. "Sean's not that big a guy so for the kids to see that someone doesn't have to be a six feet tall to be a professional athlete, so long as he's willing to do the proper work."

In addition to Morris and Choinard, campers can expect to benefit from the expertise of fell UMass players Jack Reid, an All-American defenseman, Chris Fiore, Brett Moyer, and Billy Day. Coaches from UMass, Fairfield, Maryland, Stonehill, and Boston University.

A pair of Duxbury High lacrosse alumni who now play Div. 1 college lacrosse will also be on hand. Max Quinzani and Chris Nixon helped guide the Green Dragons to a state title last spring and are gearing up for their first collegiate seasons at Duke and Georgetown.

On the girls' side of the spectrum, Northwestern senior Kristen Kjellman, who won the Tewaaraton Award after guiding her team to its second-straight NCAA title last summer, will be in attendance.

Area high school coaches from Milton, Quincy, Weymouth, Norwell, and Marshfield will also be of service.

Morris and Choinard are currently developing a website and brochures that will offer more specific insight into the camps. The duo said they plan to welcome kids from Grades 4 to High School for the camps that will run daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the two aforementioned locations. They are urging you to act fast because they will limit the amount of registrants. Contact information will be available soon.

COHASSET YOUTH BASKETBALL

Cohasset at Hull - Patriot League

The Grade 7 boys came away with a convincing 41-24 win over Hull this past Sunday, as they continued their solid play in the stretch run.

This game was never really in doubt, as Cohasset controlled the tempo and the score from the outset. They started with an early lead, led by the outstanding play of Christian Allard, who continually shred the Hull defense with his penetration. Allard used his drives through the lane to drop in runners and lay-ups, and he also dished off the ball effectively.

The inside play of Chris Murphy, Robbie Mahoney and Jay Salerno was impressive, as they controlled the paint. Mahoney was aggressively looking for his shot, and scored off rebounds, hit short jump shots, or drove the lane himself.

Cohasset was able to maintain a solid lead midway through the first half, when they turned on the jets. Jamie Faber was spectacular on both ends of the floor. Faber and Murphy found each other several times, first with Faber hitting Murphy with two beautiful passes for inside baskets, and then Murphy dropping off to Faber on a spectacular give-and-go for a drive to the basket and lay-in.

Kyrel Jaundoo continued his strong play inside, as he used his athleticism down low to defend, rebound, and block two shots. He also made a great offensive move inside, changing his shot in midair, scoring the basket, and getting to the foul line.

The boys continued their solid play in the second half. Hull mounted a charge cutting a 16-point lead to 10 points, but Cohasset substituted effectively to regain control. Pat Kearney played his typically solid game, both at guard and forward, as he disrupted the Hull offense with his quick feet and good positioning.

Patrick MacCormack played solid defense and hit a pretty jump shot off the glass. Chris Lunde continued to play well at both guard positions. The front line of Mahoney, Murphy, Jaundoo, and Salerno - who had a block and absorbed a charge on defense – maintained control inside, and Allard continued to be the catalyst as the final horn sounded.

Coach Mike Kearney explained, "Our squad matched up equally with the talented Hull team. Each and every player demonstrated a great level of intensity on the floor, and that was what gave us our margin of victory. I am very proud of our boys."

Abington Stars League - Weymouth Air Station

The Grade 5A boys played a strong Abington team this past Saturday, and were defeated. For much of the game Cohasset played even up with Abington, but for an eight minute stretch in the first half, Abington simply played spectacular ball – shooting lights-out from the outside – and led by outstanding play at the point guard position. In that span, Abington turned an 11-10 lead into a 32-12 halftime advantage.

Early on, Cohasset took the play to Abington. The big men inside - Mark Brown and Joe Buckley - set the tone with solid zone defense, good rebounding and active offensive moves. Guards Brendan O'Connell and Mark McKenna moved the ball efficiently to get the ball inside. McKenna and Chris Haggerty both hit key jump shots to keep the Abington defense honest.

Steven Maher, Matthew MacCormack and Liam Burke kept up the pressure on Abington with a solid defensive presence and some good looks at the basket on the offensive end. Once Abington went on their run, however, no Cohasset combination on the floor could stem that tide.

In the second half, the boys put together a solid performance, outscoring Abington throughout. They cut the lead to 14-16 points, with Maher and O'Connell scoring. Dakota Achin, Conner Green and Burke played aggressive defense and dove on the floor for loose balls and tie-ups.

With the score more manageable, Cohasset was able to use its increasingly effective press to force Abington turnovers. They turned their defense into instant offense on several occasions, with Brown, Green and Buckley all contributing.

Coach Liam O'Connell said, "In spite of the score, we played well for a good part of the game. Sometimes a team just plays very well like Abington, and there's not much you can do to stop them. Still, we did not give up in the second half."

5th Grade Travel B

The 5th Grade Travel B team met its match Saturday night at the Weymouth Air Base against a stout Abington team. Abington set the tone 10 seconds into the game and kept a shutout rolling for the first 13 minutes of the match before Ryan McKeon drained Cohasset's first points of the game from a stealth steal by Doug Fitzgerald to put a scratch in the 12-2 Abington lead.

Fitzgerald turned in a great performance with an even hand and good aggressive play all night. Clark Indek played big in the center position to bring his team within the closest margin of the night with a three-point play to narrow the lead to seven before the game started to drift away.

Cohasset fought hard to stay close but their aggressive play only gained notches in the "fouls" column on the scorecard. Unlike recent contests, the team saw their foul count skyrocket and their scoring and rebounding numbers plummet. Abington's steady play throughout the half left them ahead by ten 17-7 at the midpoint.

The second half was much of the same but the boys never gave up and battled with a host of close shots that danced with the rim on many occasions. Jack Leffel hustled on both ends of the court to disrupt the passing lanes and picked up many loose balls. Jacob Osmanski had some nice chances that were foiled by Abington's strong defense. Timmy Cavanaro continued to hold his own on the boards to keep his rebounding average near double digits.

McKeon did his best to make Abington score the old-fashioned way; they earned it! As a result, Ryan wasn't on the court when the final buzzer sounded, which made the Abington bench happy.

However, Zach Coggins was on the court as time ran out and we believe his final play was a precursor for better things to come. As the final seconds ran off the clock, Zach fiddled and diddled to the corner past a wave of defenders before he dipped and shot to see the laces wave goodbye to a game to forget.

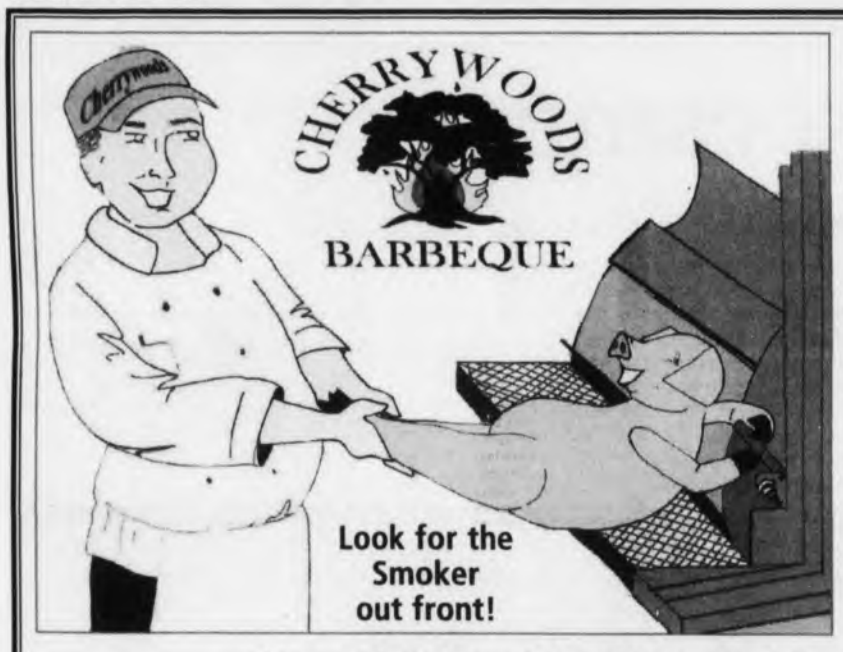
Community MVP Awards

The New England Patriots are currently accepting nominations for the 2007 Community MVP Awards program. The Community MVP Awards honor individuals who exemplify leadership, dedication and a commitment to improving the communities in which they live through volunteerism.

Through the program, nonprofit organizations throughout New England have the opportunity to reward their hard-working volunteers for the invaluable time and support they provide to their communities. There will be 21 winners chosen and grants ranging between $1,500 and $10,000 will be awarded to the nonprofit organization for which each honoree volunteers.

Mid Coast Health Net, a free health and dental clinic in Rockport, Maine, received $10,000 in the name of Dr. Paul Klainer, the 2006 overall winner. New England residents who are 13 years of age or older who provide volunteer services for nonprofit 501(c)(3) or 509 organizations are eligible for nomination.

Only one nominee may be considered from each organization. The strongest applicants will be hands-on volunteers and may not receive any compensation, monetary or otherwise, for their efforts. Nonprofit organizations may nominate volunteers by completing the application found at www.patriots.com/community.



Forms must be received by March 16.

Pan-Mass Challenge

Registration to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge can be done through the PMC Web site, pmc.org. Open to just 4,500 cyclists, the PMC will be held Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5. The ride is the nation's original fundraising bike-a-thon and today raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country. This year's goal is to raise $27 million for the Jimmy Fund, which supports cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. To date, the PMC has raised more than $171 million for the world-renowned cancer research center.

Cyclists can choose from nine routes that pass through 46 Massachusetts cities and towns, over one or two days. Two-day cyclists can ride the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route, the180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route, the 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route, or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route. One-day cyclists can ride the 111-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, the 72-mile Sturbridge-Wellesley route, the 68-mile Bourne to Wellesley route, or, new this year, the 50-mile Wellesley to Wellesley route. Minimum fundraising requirements range from $1,200 to $3,600, depending upon the route chosen. The most popular routes typically fill up within weeks.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts from around the world, year after year, committed to a common goal: a world without cancer. More than 200 PMC cyclists and volunteers are cancer survivors. Registration is $160, which funds support services, meals, and overnight accommodations, riding jerseys and more. For more information, or to register, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Websense. This Internet watchdog prevents the student body of CHS from visiting certain websites and playing games on-line, among other things. However, when the word "game" is part of any word you put into the search, Websense blocks the results. Thus, any research on King Agamemnon must be done at home, or at the library if you don't have Internet access. This convenient inconvenience may be operating with the best intentions, but a blanket solution is hardly ever a decent solution, unless of course you're under the covers trying to stay warm.

Moving on to something that actually makes sense, here is this week's news.

• Tomorrow at 2 p.m. at Norwell High School, the curtains go up for the CHS Drama Club's performance of Jean Paul Sartre's "No Exit." The stars of the play are Austin Breslow, Molly Gallagher, Sally Meehan and Charles Miller. This year's entry in the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild Festival is definitely worth seeing. Last year the Cohasset Cast and Crew were State Semi-finalists. Tickets are $10 at the door — but get there early because it will probably sell out. The action (and acting) starts at 9 a.m. if you'd like to see some of the other schools perform. So if you dig theatre, or just want to support CHS Arts in general, come to the Festival!

• Monday after school the NEASC Follow-Up Committee met.

• Wednesday the SDFS Coordinated Review Meeting took place.

• The School Committee met Wednesday night.

• Thursday morning the PSO President's Council met.

• After school Thursday the Professional Development Committee met.

• Thursday afternoon the Middle School Team Leaders met.

Who will be the next Mr. Skipper? Find out next Friday night, March 9th! See young men in formal wear and signature wear, and listen to their responses to philosophical questions — with their talents (or comedic lack thereof) as the grand finale. Tickets are $10, and the show will probably sell out so get your tickets STAT. I know, 300 comes out the 9th, but Mr. Skipper only comes once a year. Go see a late showing after CHS' annual Male Beauty Pageant. That's what I plan on doing.

I've been watching a lot of Discovery Channel, History Channel, and National Geographic lately. Something has to replace HBO's Rome, because the series will end after the second season. I stumbled across a show called Man vs. Wild on Discovery, and it's incredible. An ex-British Special Ops named Bear is put into the middle of nowhere, and he must survive with only a few items he is given at the start of each show. Definitely worth watching.

Get those Mr. Skipper tickets, and I'll see you at the show!

PAC meeting March 6

Join the Cohasset Parents Advisory Council on March 6.

This is an opportunity for parents to discuss with the PAC Board any issues, concerns and positive information that they would like to share regarding the school district. The PAC Board would like as much feedback regarding what your needs are in order to take steps in planning for next year. The meeting starts promptly at 7:30 p.m. at the Osgood School, 210 Sohier St.

All workshops and presentations are Free - Sponsored by the PSO/PAC

SOUTH SHORE PAC Network – Cohasset has joined with local PAC members in the south shore area to promote communication, combine workshops and establish a broader network. The South Shore PAC Network hopes to meets informally throughout the year. If you would like to to be added to our e-mail network for updates please forward your contact information to: southshorepac@comcast.net

Informal screenings for children slated

The Osgood Preschool staff in conjunction with the school nurse will hold informal screenings for children on the third Friday of every month from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. The remaining dates are March 16, April 27, and May 18.

These screenings will consist of a play group activity as well as opportunities for vision, hearing and posture screening. These screenings are to assist in identifying those students who should be referred for an evaluation to determine eligibility for special education.

If you are interested in having your child participate, contact one of the preschool staff at 781-383-6117 no later than the Wednesday prior to one of the scheduled screenings.

Middle-schoolers can join Buttonwood book group

Buttonwood Middle School Book Group will meet Thursday, March 8, at 7 p.m., at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. The selected book is "The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" by Arthur Conan Doyle. Fifth-graders are invited to attend. No reservations are necessary. All are welcome.

Call Buttonwood at 1-781-383-2665 for more information.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Deciding on Camp and Then Preparing to Go!
By Bette S. Bussel · Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England
Here at the American Camp Association, New England, we believe that there is no greater experience a child can have than a summer spent at camp. New friends; new and unique experiences; a chance to grow and develop and a chance to just kick back and have fun – nothing comes close! Once you decide on camp for your child, then it's time to get ready for the camp experience. Here are some tips!

Decide on CAMP
Involve your child as much as possible in the decision making process so that he or she will look forward to camp. (Research proves that campers who have some control over choosing their camps deal have an easier time with homesickness.
Review camp materials and compare camps. Tour the camp when it is in session or attend an open house or camp informational event. Speak with camp directors or camp representatives. Devise questions to ask them based on your child's particular needs and interests.
Request parent references from camps and check them. Go with your gut! There is no such thing as the best camp, only the best camp for your child. You will have to make the final decision since you are the expert on your child. Select a camp and send in your registration materials early to avoid being wait-listed.

Preparing for camp together helps ensure that you and your camper have a successful experience.
• Families should create progressive opportunities to prepare children for camp, especially the first-time camper. Practice being away from home by spending overnights or weekends with friends or family.
• Encourage children to practice caring for their belongings and for their bodies independently.
• Discuss strategies for coping with homesickness. Write down a plan for your child to follow if homesickness hits www.acane-camps.org/camp/guide/homesickness.pdf
• Pack only what is on the packing list sent by the camp. The camp knows what your child will use and need. Over packing can lead to lost or damaged items.
• Find out the recommended method of communicating with your child while they are camp. Send a letter or postcard a week ahead of time so that it is there for the first mail delivery.

Cookie Challenge winner is announced

Congratulations to Maggie Ernst of Cohasset for winning the Chocolate Chip Cookie Challenge held at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Feb. 14. Maggie's winning batch of chocolate chip cookies was chosen among five entries. The public was invited to sample each entry and vote for their favorite. Comments on Maggie's tasty cookies included "buttery!" "Just like my mother's recipe!" and "Delicious!"

The Cookie Challenge was offered as a fun family event for the library's first town-wide reading program, One Book One Cohasset. The library selected David McGillivray's book "The Last Pick" for its residents to read. In the book, the author and subject of the book, Dave, confesses to be a big chocolate chip cookie fan.

Library events complimenting the theme of the book: Dream Big and Never Underestimate Your Abilities, are being offered through Sunday, April 1

All entrants received a One Book One Cohasset t-shirt. Maggie, the winner of the contest, was invited to bake another batch of her special cookies for author, Dave McGillivray, when he visits the library on Tuesday, March 13.

To make a batch of Maggie's awesome cookies follow her recipe titled, "Maggie's Chocolate Chip Cookies." It goes as follows: a half pound of unsalted butter, softened; eight ounces of brown sugar; five and a half ounces of white sugar; two eggs at room temperature; one teaspoon of vanilla extract; twelve and three quarter ounces of all-purpose flour; three quarters of a teaspoon of baking soda and 10 ounces of semisweet chocolate chips.

Cream butter and sugars together until light and fluffy. Add eggs and vanilla. Beat well. Sift flour, soda and salt and blend in to batter. Do not over beat. Stir in chocolate chips. Chill dough for one hour or more. When ready to bake, preheat convection oven to 325 degrees. Drop dough onto foil-lined cookie sheets using a one inch cookie scoop. Bake one sheet at a time for 9 to 11 minutes. Makes five dozen unless you taste too much of the dough!

Couple shares a 'Vision'

Dancers are partners on stage, in life

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Melanie Atkins and Szabolcs (Sabi) Varga may be soloists with Boston Ballet, but the dancers are very much a couple. Their offstage partnership has led to many onstage pairings as it will again this week when "New Visions," a Boston Ballet triple bill of contemporary works, opens at Boston's Citi Wang Theatre.

"There are 12 dancers featured In 'Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion,' but several times it is just the two of us dancing onstage," explained Atkins by telephone during a rehearsal break with Varga last week. "With 'New Visions,' there is no story. It is just purely movement and music, so as dancers we have the chance to make it whatever it becomes."

For Atkins and Varga, their work together has become something that has evolved alongside their personal relationship, which began on a first date in 2002 and now includes marriage and a home in Braintree. One of four married couples now with Boston Ballet, Atkins and Varga celebrated their first wedding anniversary on Jan. 6. They may work in the city, but when the curtain falls, the pair is happy to head home to the suburbs.

Our relationship is sometimes even used as an example by the other couples in the Ballet."

"When we were looking for a place to live, Sabi and I realized that we didn't want a condominium in Boston. We come home from work late. We didn't want to be attached to anyone else. We wanted a house. We chose Braintree because we wanted to live in a neighborhood. Braintree is a very typical New England town and we like that very much," says Atkins, who lived in Acton and Natick after her family moved to the United States from Reading, England. We bought our house in Braintree in 2004 and although we never really think about it, things have gone very well for us. Our relationship is sometimes even used as an example by the other couples in the Ballet."

After spending his childhood in Budapest, Varga appreciates the relative quiet of life on the South Shore.

"I saw very little ocean when I was growing up. Now, I love to sit in the car and photograph the ocean. I also love the four seasons here. I do the shoveling in the winter, and in the good weather Melanie does the gardening and I do the yard work."

Atkins and Varga both acknowledge that their on-stage roles required a bit of settling in once they became a couple.

"It can be difficult to put two people together on stage who are emotionally involved, because you want your life partner to be perfect. When we first danced together, we were both too concerned about how the other looked to do our own best work. We worked that out over time," says Atkins, who trained at Natick's Walnut Hill School of the Arts and later danced with the Fort Worth Dallas and Miami Ballet Companies.

Varga, who trained at the Hungarian Dance Academy in Budapest and 10 years ago was named "Best Young Dancer" at the International Rudolf Nureyev Competition, could not agree more with Atkins, whom he met when both were with the Alberta Ballet under the direction of Mikko Nissinen. It was Nissinen who invited both Atkins and Sarba to join him at the Boston Ballet after he became Artistic Director of the internationally renowned company in 2002.

"We know how lucky we both are to have found the person who was meant for each of us. We nurture our relationship. The way our personal and professional lives intersect, we could spend 24 hours a day, seven days a week together. We make sure, however, to carve out time away from dance. We also give each other space as needed. That said, it is easier when we dance together. We don't have to act. Our relationship definitely comes through. My favorite ballet is George Balanchine's 'Duo Concertant.' Before I met Melanie, I did that ballet with another partner, and I loved it. I loved it even more, though, when I danced it with Melanie."

Varga also loves to dance world premieres. This week's Boston Ballet program will give him his fifth opportunity to do just that.

"It is a fantastic feeling when you are dancing something that is having its world premiere. There is nothing else like it. With 'Brake the Eyes,' our resident choreographer Jorma Elo is mixing six movements from five works by Mozart in a way that is kind of like snapshots."

And very different from traditional ballet.

"'New Visions' is very athletic, very raw. There is no pink and no flowers on the stage," says Atkins. "There are also no tutus. The costumes are minimal so that the audience will be able to see visible tone and definition in our bodies."

And people down front may see even more, according to Varga.

"They are really going to see how this is done. People are going to see us sweat."

(The Boston Ballet will present "New Visions" at the Citi Wang Theatre, 270 Tremont Street, Boston, March 1-4. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit bostonballet.org)

The Lives of Others (A-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

If you can imagine George Orwell's classic "Nineteen Eighty-Four" as an East German soap opera, you have an idea of the virtues and admittedly minor vices of "The Lives of Others."

Set in 1984 in Communist East Berlin, this award-winning film by Florian Henckel von Donnersmarck (in German with subtitles) focuses on the lives of theater actors and directors and the government flunkies and ministers who keep them under surveillance and secretly envy and lust after them. At the time, Stasi, the East German state police, employed 100,000 workers and 200,000 informers.

George (Sebastian Koch) and Christa-Maria (Martina Gedeck) find time for a moment of passion in the midst of paranoia.

Georg Dreyman (Sebastian Koch) appears to have the world on a string. A tall, handsome and successful playwright, he has managed to thrive under strict censorship and lives with his muse, the beautiful leading lady of stage and screen Christa-Maria Sieland (long-limbed Bavarian beauty Martina Gedeck).

When spiteful authorities decide to keep an eye on Georg, they enlist Stasi Captain Gerd Weisler (Ulrich Muhe), a surveillance expert who may remind some of the character Gene Hackman played in Francis Ford Coppola's prophetic 1974 thriller "The Conversation." Weisler sets up in the attic of Georg and Christa's apartment building. Perched at his desk and wearing headphones, he is an evil totalitarian imp, listening in on their most intimate encounters.

Weisler, a middle-aged man with no life of his own, grows increasingly fascinated with his subjects and begins to resemble an electronic Nosferatu, deriving nourishment from the lives of the vibrant, beautiful people upon whom he spies. He's the paparazzo from hell, a vampiric Peeping Tom.

When the Minister of Culture (Thomas Thieme, who's a natural for the title role in a "Goldfinger" remake) becomes enamored with Christa, she sullenly submits and lets him have his way with her. Von Donnersmarck wisely makes these scenes tingle with ambiguity. Christa may be trying to protect herself and Georg, but she also seems to respond to the minister's intense desire. Later, the strain of the affair takes its toll on her relationship with Georg, and she becomes dependent on pills.

Before the fall of the Berlin Wall, the East envied the West its political and economic freedoms in the way that Weisler envies Georg and Christa, and that desire helped bring down the wall. In many ways, von Donnersmarck's film recalls the work of the late, great Polish filmmaker Krzysztof Kieslowski ("The Decalogue"), who also came of artistic age under an oppressive communist regime, although von Donnersmarck arguably lacks Kieslowski's penetrating, moralist vision.

Muhe, who looks like a cross between Kevin Spacey and Joel Grey's "Cabaret" master of ceremonies, gives a compellingly creepy performance as the evil and finally pitiful spy who gets caught in his own trap. Orwell would have approved.

Rated R. "The Lives of Others" contains profanity and sexual situations.

Sgt. John Conte checks out the new mobile computer in his cruiser. The computers will enable officers to write reports from the field and to access databases for information such as the status of a license plate or driver's license.

Cruiser computers for police on patrol

$48K pays for new system

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cruisers at the Cohasset Police Department have gone high-tech.

"This is getting us into the 21st Century," said Police Chief James Hussey about the new Mobile Data Terminals, dubbed MDTs.

The computers, which are mounted in the center console, allow the officer to run checks while they are on patrol. That could include checking a vehicle registration or an operator's driver's license.

Before the computers, the officer had to call the station where the civilian dispatcher would have to run the computer check.

In addition to checking information at the Registry of Motor Vehicles, an officer can also see if an individual has outstanding warrants, for example. The officer can also tap into the information management system at the station to see if police have had any prior dealings with the individual.

Hussey said the new mobile computers are an important tool that will also take pressure off the dispatcher, who may have to field a 9-1-1 call in the middle of receiving a request to run information from an officer in the field.

"What typically happened before is an officer would have to repeat an individual's name and spell the name, his or her social security number or license number – while the dispatcher had to handle other responsibilities," Hussey said.

Rates could climb

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Water Commission is putting forth six articles for Town Meeting voters to scrutinize on March 31, covering varied issues including water rate increases, land acquisition and the sale of water. But the one that could affect Cohasset water users most directly and almost immediately is the increase in water rates. The Selectmen voted to recommend the increase in water rates unanimously.

The Water Commission's new rate configuration, outlined in Article 4, is two-fold. If passed, the water rate per cubic feet will increase (about 15 percent), and will include "stand-by fire service" or hydrant fees. The total increase will be about 27 percent for residences that consume less than 2,000 cubic feet of water each quarter; 70 percent of water users will fall into this category. The increase would translate to about $35 on a quarterly bill. Residences or businesses that consume more than 2,000 cubic feet of water per quarter will be hit with a 40 percent increase. The rates would take effect April 15, 2007.

"We need a rate increase. That's what it's costing the Water Department so we need to get it back," Selectmen Gary Vanderweil said. However, he was concerned that the rate was "sky high"

Town waives land buy

The Selectmen voted 4-0 to waive their Right of First Refusal on the 40 acres of property off Norman Todd Road on Monday night. The Cohasset Land Foundation will move forward with its plan to use the land for conservation and development. Selectman Gary Vanderweil recused himself from the discussion and vote because of his involvement in the Cohasset Land Foundation (CLF).

Last week (Feb. 26) the Selectmen held a public hearing on the right of first refusal, the hearing was continued into this week's meeting. The members of the Cohasset Land Foundation presented their plan and vision for the 40-acre tract of land, currently owned by Osborne "Ozzie" Ingram. The CLF has entered into a purchase and sale agreement with Ingram with a purchase price of $1.25 million.

The discussion on this issue was brief, as much of the issue had been hashed over at the first part of the public hearing last week. Selectman Ted Carr has requested additional time to discuss with both the Vedanta Center (which, according to the Foundation is

Art show in good taste

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Art is going to get a little tastier next Wednesday when the "Eat Your Art" exhibit comes to the high school. The sixth annual event asks kids and adults alike to test their creativity and produce a piece of art solely constructed of edible food.

"In years past we've had over a hundred entries," said Nina Berkowitz, event founder. Berkowitz began this event six years ago after learning about a Maryland teacher who did something similar in her school. Berkowitz took the idea and has made it a Cohasset arts staple. Berkowitz is an art teacher and department chair at the high school.

"Right now, we're trying to hype up the event and get the students excited about it. I've shown slides of past examples to illustrate how you can create something out of food," she says.

The "Eat Your Art" has been the platform for such creations as a Picasso reproduction made of marzipan, "bronze" statues sculpted of chocolate as well as once-in-a-lifetime creations because as soon as all entries have been judged, the art becomes "property of the party" and will be consumed by all present.

The kids and adults use a variety of ingredients that may or may not be tasty when combined. "We've had some weird creations in past years," says Berkowitz. But that's all part of the fun and creativity, she says.

Rice Krispies treats, due to their pliability, are a popular medium. While

POLICE/FIRE BEAT

Door-to-door solicitors need to register

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Last week, a resident contacted police about door-to-door solicitors in the neighborhood. A cruiser was dispatched and spoke with the solicitor, who worked for Green and Assoc. in Rhode Island, police said. The officer told the individual that he needed to apply for a permit at the police station.

Chief James Hussey said police encourage residents to call if they see door-to-door solicitors. Police will know "right then and there" if the individual has registered. Police will also go out to the reported location, explain the town bylaw, and tell the person to stop soliciting until he or she registers.

Under the new town bylaw, door-to-door solicitors are required to register at the police station where they can apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear a badge issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. The badge should be worn and be clearly visible.

Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Hussey said some companies will bring a van full of individuals to town and drop them off in different neighborhoods. He explained reputable companies will come into the police station first and explain their plans.

Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

Town officials have said the bylaw, which voters approved at the 2006 annual Town Meeting, is not a panacea for unwanted solicitation. It is narrowly defined to meet court challenges particularly with respect to the First Amendment to the Constitution. Cohasset's bylaw was modeled after a similar one in Duxbury.

A detailed description of the bylaw is available at the Town Clerk's office. Violators of any provision of the bylaw could be subject to loss of solicitation license and fines.

Gas spill

At just past 8 a.m., Wednesday (Feb. 28), the fire department responded to a report of a gasoline spill at the concrete containment vault that houses the town's gasoline/diesel tanks. Chief Robert Silvia said the operator made an error and overfilled the tank spilling about 25 gallons of gasoline on the outside of the tank and onto the ground. The fire department worked to contain the spill and to ensure there was no fire danger. The company responsible for the error hired Fleet Environmental for the cleanup, Silvia said. DEP was also notified because more than 10 gallons were spilled. The aboveground tanks are used to fill town-owned vehicles.

Chain reaction

Last Thursday (Feb. 28) there was a three-car accident at 3A and Rose Hill (near 3A & lower King Street). The incident occurred at 2:16 p.m. Chief Hussey explained that the operator of a 2006 Nissan Frontier that was heading southbound on 3A came to a stop because traffic was stopped in front of her. A 1996 Toyota Camry, which was behind the Nissan, then rear-ended the Nissan, and a 2001 Ford Explorer, which was third in line, rear-ended the Toyota. The Nissan had safely stopped, left the proper amount of space, and was not pushed into another vehicle, Hussey said. However, the Camry and Ford Explorer were traveling too closely and were unable to stop safely. Both those operators received written warnings for following too closely to the vehicle in front. Both those cars were damaged enough that they had to be towed.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the fire department evaluated the people involved and no one wanted to be transported. No one was complaining of any problems, he said.

Ran light

Police say a 2004 Nissan Murano ran the light at Beechwood Street and 3A causing an accident. Chief Hussey said the Nissan was traveling eastbound on Beechwood Street when the incident occurred at 1:37 p.m., Monday (Feb. 26). Traffic on 3A had the green light, he said.

The Nissan hit a 2002 white Ford van that was traveling southbound through the intersection on 3A.

Hussey said paramedics responded to the scene but no one was transported. He said witness testimony confirmed that the Nissan went through the red light. The operator was cited for failure to stop for a red light, Hussey said.

'Taggers' summonsed

Police say they have two suspects in the recent incidents of "tagging" in town. Both are being summonsed to court on vandalism charges.

Last week, police identified one of the suspects following tagging on traffic signs on Forest Avenue and on the Deer Hill School roof. Further investigation has resulted in police finding another individual who, police believe, is also responsible. One of the suspects is from Hull and the other is from Cohasset.

Recent tagging incidents in town include graffiti on Forest Avenue signs; under the Rocky Lane bridge; on a Greenbush engineering hut; and at Deer Hill School.

"Tagging" is a form of graffiti in which the vandal leaves his or her unique "signature."

Shoplifting

Police were called to Stop & Shop on Friday (March 2) at about 2:39 p.m. where loss personnel met them. Loss prevention told police an individual had gone through the checkout but had left the store with items that she had not paid for. Police stood by while loss prevention talked to the person in the parking lot. The individual, who was cooperative, had receipts for all the items, police said.

In another incident, also at Stop & Shop, which occurred at about 10:30 a.m., Saturday (March 2), the store provided a plate number of a white female, who had purchased 28 cans of whipped cream, but had allegedly taken a total of 40 cans. Therefore, she had not paid for 12 cans.

Although most of the cans were put through the scanner, a cashier realized others were not.

Police contacted the owner of the vehicle. She drove to the store with her daughter. Further investigation determined that police believe the daughter did in fact take 12 cans of whipped cream. Police will bring shoplifting charges against her, Chief Hussey said.

Suspicious letter

Police turned over a suspicious fax that was received by the DPW on Cedar Street to the Secret Service. The letter was an apparent scam and was trying to entice the recipient to send money. Chief Hussey said while no crime had yet been committed, police sent the letter to the Secret Service so that agency could track this type of scam and see how widespread it is.

On a roll

Police were not immediately able to locate the owner of a vehicle that was in park but had rolled out of a parking spot at Starbucks and was blocking emergency access to the coffee shop last Saturday (March 3) at about 5:45 p.m. Police could not get in touch with the owner of the car, which apparently had malfunctioned. For safety reasons, police had the vehicle towed.

BRIEFLY

Capital budget priorities presented

Members of the School Committee and Superintendent Denise Walsh attended the Capital Budget Committee on Feb. 26 to bring forth their top three priorities for school capital improvement.

The first request was the purchase of a Special Education van. The current town-owned van is a 1995 Ford Econoline and it has racked up over 152,902 miles. If the van were to break down, the town would have to use a contracted service, which would get very costly over time.

The track at the Middle/High School needs to be resurfaced. It was installed in 1997 and the dealer recommended re-surfacing (which involves adding two layers of track surfacing) every five years. The track is now 10 years old and the schools have not had the funds to keep up with regular maintenance. The Capital Budget Committee requested more information on what needs to be done to get the track up to snuff. The ultimate goal is to outline and allocate funds for a long-range maintenance plan.

The last priority, and perhaps the most urgent, is the Middle/High School has a leak in the library possibly due to improper installation of flashing behind the windows. The repair is estimated to cost $54,000. A report has been sent to the original contractor for examination.

Reading Club

One of the ongoing goals of Cohasset schools is to increase assessment as it enables the schools and teachers to target specific areas a student may excel or require a little extra help. One of the initiatives that came out of the additional Chapter 70 funds allocated to the schools at the Special Town Meeting last fall was a "Reading Club" at Osgood School. The program is meant as an early intervention for students who may be struggling with reading. The six-week program meets in small groups before school for one hour with teachers. Currently, 11 to 12 students are involved.

"I think it's a testament to the new reading curriculum that so few students are involved," said Vice Chairman Al Slanetz.

Land foundation to move ahead with 40-acre purchase interested in purchasing 6.25 acres that borders their current property) and Ingram. Carr visited the Vedanta Center and said he was impressed at how "tranquility and peaceful" he found the property.

"I think they could really benefit from the land," Carr said. The Vedanta Center has been in Cohasset since 1929 and is a spiritual center for all religious beliefs. According to Rick Swanborg, Chairman of the CLF, the Vedanta Center plans to leave the land undeveloped and extend its current open space property.

Carr also reached out to Ingram to get his feeling of the sale of the land and the Foundation.

"He conveyed to me that he was in favor of the land foundation and has worked closely with them for many months," he said and concluded his statement lending support to CLF, "I think the Land Foundation is a great partner for the Town to have."

Selectman Rob Spofford, who last week expressed a desire to put this decision before the voters at Town Meeting, warmed up to the idea after learning of Ingram's support of the project.

"I have the utmost respect for [Ingram] and in a normal business, you can sell the land to whoever you want, instead he chose to sell the land to a organization like the Land Foundation," Spofford said.

"I hope [the Foundation] is able to deliver on what they have said and what they have laid out to us and continue to work in conjunction with the goals and objectives of the community," which he indicated included the development of affordable housing. The current development plans on the 40 acres will include three single-family homes on approximately two acres each; there are no present plans for the Foundation to develop affordable housing.

Once the vote was taken to waive the Town's right of first refusal, Chairman Ralph Dormitzer commented, "I know it's a challenge for you now."

The agreement between Ingram and CLF stipulates that at least 50 percent of the land remains undeveloped and put under conservation restrictions. A closing cost of $100,000 will be due by July 31, 2007. The balance plus 5 percent interest would be due within five years.

According to current plans laid out for the Selectmen last week, the land will be split between the Vedanta Center (6.25 acres), the three building lots (6 acres) and the remainder, roughly 25 acres will be open space and/or conservation land. A portion, if not all, of that acreage will be a park named in Ingram's father's honor. There is a possibility of a small parking area off Beechwood Street for the park (see related story). Eventually, Swanborg, foresees the land being handed over the Cohasset Conservation Trust.

"We wanted to wait until the Selectmen made their decision before moving ahead with plans," Swanborg said when reached on Wednesday. He indicated that much of the work up until this point was making sure the deal was viable and working with Ingram to reach an agreement. "It's going to be a lot of work."

Swanborg hopes to map out the CLF's next steps in regards to the land in a meeting this weekend.

Town-owned parking lot a possibility

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Land Foundation went before the Community Preservation Committee last week to float the potential for a small, town-owned parking lot at the entrance to the proposed Ingram Park off Beechwood Street.

Wayne Sawchuk and Rick Swanborg of the CLF explained the one-half to one-acre lot would allow for about eight cars so the 30-acre Ingram Park would be accessible.

CLF seeks to buy the entire 37.5-acre property and turn 25 acres over to the Cohasset Land Conservation Trust for wildlife habitat and a nature walk. Plans for the remainder of the property include three house lots of two acres each and selling about six acres to the Vendanta Centre, a spiritual retreat that abuts the site.

Swanborg said estimates the cost of the land for the parking lot would be $25,000 and construction and other costs would be $15,000 for a total of $40,000. The town would have to maintain the parking lot, he said.

"It would be nice for people to have the opportunity to come in and walk the property," he said.

Swanborg said the CLF wanted to get some feedback on the proposal from the Community Preservation Committee and was acting on the assumption that the Selectmen would decide not to purchase the property. (See related story).

The proposed, gravel parking lot would not be unlike the entrance to Turkey Hill off Route 3A.

"I think it is a great idea," said CPC member Susan Sardina. "I don't like parks that can't be accessed."

The CPC approved recommending expending the $40,000 with two contingencies: that the town waives its right of first refusal to buy the Ingram acreage [which Selectmen did Monday night] and the land could be used for a parking lot. The proposed parking lot would have to pass muster with the Conservation Commission and not encroach on wetlands, the CPC said.

From the Archives of the Cohasset Historical Society

To celebrate Women's History month, the Cohasset Historical Society plans to devote our From the Archives column to notable women from Cohasset for the month of March. Our first submission is from the diary of Drusilla Snow Percival, a Cohasset woman who accompanied her husband, Captain John Percival, on a merchant voyage to the Mediterranean. Punctuation, spelling and capitalization are as they appear in the original diary. For those who are interested in reading more, the diary is available in installments in Historical Highlights, the Society's membership newsletter.

Wednesday, October 7th, 1857
Left home my husband, myself and 2 children for Boston went on board Bark Vesta bound for Constantinople, a number of our friends came down to see us before we left The wind which was fair when we left home came round east and prevented our sailing that day The first and second mate went home that night we remained on board Nancy staid on board with us in the evening Eben Waterman from Hanover came down and spent an hour or two and Mr. & Mrs. Pratt of Boston The children went to bed happy and contented much pleased with their accommodations.

Friday, October 9th, 1857
Pleasant this morning it continued pleasant through the night but a rough sea The children and myself attempted to get up but could not we could not sit up at all Mary however dressed and went on deck and tried to drive it away but she was obliged soon to come down and give up I got out in the cabin on the sofa but was obliged to return to my stateroom and get into my berth Lilla did not leave her berth during the day we were all pretty sick till night it continued pleasant but a rough sea Mary did not loose her appetite but Lilla and myself did not eat for several days.

Thursday, December 3rd, 1857
I saw the sun go down behind the hills of Africa, last night and this morning it rose as it seemed out of the ocean, it rose bright and clean and went into a cloud, last night was very pleasant, the wind was ahead but very light we tacked ship during the night several times, as we were between Cape Zibert and Slinski Reef, this morning the Isle of Zembra and Cape Bon were in sight.

Visual journey to the Renaissance

The Cohasset Historical Society will offer the second installment of its Spring Lecture Series on Wednesday evening, March 21st. Harvard University professor, Dr. Ubaldo DiBenedetto, will take us on a visual journey to the Renaissance and talk about "Why Renaissance painting is what it is."

Through slide and lecture, Dr. DiBenedetto will guide us through the history of the demonstrable, visible and progressive technical innovations that created a form of art that became unique and was copied by hundreds of artists throughout the world. Born in Italy, Dr. DiBenedetto holds two masters degrees and a Ph.D. He specializes in Comparative Renaissance Studies and is the author of both scholarly works and a novel. Dr. DeBenedetto was awarded the "Harvard University Rocker" for his long and distinguished academic career.

The presentation will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the Pratt Building, 106 South Main St. The Society cordially invites all members, guests and the community to attend this most interesting of programs. There is no charge for the evening and light refreshment will be served.

PAJAMA GAME!

Hey Cohasset, here is a great show that you will all want to see and enjoy while wearing your favorite pair of jammies. The following Cohasset residents want you to come on by and see this wonderful show. Barbara Baumgarten, Laura Coletta, Thomson Jaffe, Sarah Malone and Lisa Pratt along with other area actors and actresses are involved. You'll be sleeping right when you sleep in Sleep-Tite Pajamas as the Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "The Pajama Game" March 16, 17, 23, 24, 30 and 31 at 8 p.m.; March 25 and April 1 at 2 p.m. March 16 at Cohasset Town Hall.

Filled with such recognizable songs as "Steam Heat" and "Hernando's Hideaway", "The Pajama Game" tells the tale of the workers at the Sleep-Tite Pajama Factory as they battle the company president for a seven-and-a-half cent raise. When the new factory superintendent falls for the head of the union's grievance committee, romance and flannel are in the air. In recognition of the show's labor verses management theme the Cohasset Dramatic Club is offering all $2 off the adult ticket price when the purchaser shows a union membership card. Management and non-union workers can save as well by donning PJs for the Saturday March 17, March 24 or March 31 shows. All audience members who attend the show Saturday night in PJs will receive $2 off the ticket price. Tickets are $14, $12 for seniors, students and groups of 8 or more and may be purchased in advance at Buttonwood Books in Cohasset, Front Street Books in Scituate or by phone at 617-697-2115.

Cohasset Education Foundation dedicates Osgood Computer Lab

By Catherine O'Callaghan
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"When the students are in the new lab, you can hear a pin drop. They give their undivided attention."
— Janet Sheehan, Osgood principal

The Cohasset Education Foundation dedicated the new Osgood Computer Lab on March 1st. Parents, School Committee members, CEF board members, teachers and administrators attended this informative and interactive event. Community members and parents visited and learned more about the new technology equipment at the Osgood School, which was funded by the CEF. A group of current third grade students demonstrated the new computer programs that they are using in their school. Derry Schwanter, Technology Instructor and Janet Sheehan, Principal of the Osgood School discussed the computer programs now available to students and faculty for kindergarten, first and second grades and the effects and improvements that the new technology offers.

Nearly 400 students currently enrolled in grades K - 2 will benefit from the Osgood Computer Lab, which also increases computer education and training opportunities for faculty to improve technology integration in the classroom. The new computer lab provides up to date technology to meet the needs of the entire school. The equipment supports and extends valuable learning and improves the educational opportunities for Osgood students. Osgood is now able to provide improved computer education and offer advanced training opportunities for its faculty. Janet Sheehan, Principal of Osgood notes that the new computer lab has provided the ability to instruct a class of students all at the same time. Before the new computers and software were installed, students were forced to share computer terminals and earphones. She recalls that some of the old computers took half a day to warm up and many required repairs. Sheehan has observed the student's enthusiasm and interest in the new computer lab. "When the students are in the new lab, you can hear a pin drop. They give their undivided attention."

Olivia Wilson, 8, a second-grader at Osgood searched for the computer version of the story, "Black Cat," during the dedication ceremony last Thursday (March 1).

Faculty members are utilizing the new computers to plan lessons. A reading consultant is scheduled as part of Osgood's professional development to use the computers to support the new reading curriculum program. In addition, the new computers are now being used for a before school reading fluency program as well as a tutoring support group. Dr. Walsh, Superintendent of Cohasset Schools commented, "The new computer lab puts all of the other schools on notice." Students from Osgood will now have a greater exposure and more computer experience than ever before. The Deer Hill School and the Cohasset Middle High School will need to meet the needs of these students with their advanced knowledge and interest in computers as they matriculate through the school system. Mary McGoldrick, Chair of the CEF Grants Committee acknowledges the importance of engineering and technology in all the Cohasset public schools. The CEF recently awarded grants for Promethean white boards at Deer Hill and the Middle High School. "We are looking forward to hearing from the teachers and administrators from all the schools in regards to their needs for programs or projects with an enduring value that enhance, enrich, and maintain excellence in our schools."

The CEF used the funds that they received from the original Cohasset Education Foundation in November 2006 to fund the Osgood School Computer Lab. The grant of $25,000 purchased 24 new desktop computers, flat panel display screens and Microsoft Office Professional Edition 2003 software. Rick Flynn, School Committee Member pointed out that the first project that the former CEF funded in 1992 was to purchase computers for Osgood, which at that time was in the old elementary school building. The new CEF received the support of the former CEF board members to purchase new computers for Osgood with their raised funds. Midge Stone, former and current CEF board member responds to the gift, "It is a pleasure to fund the computer project at the Osgood School with the funds raised by the former CEF. I am pleased that our groups came together and looking forward to working with this new energetic group of parents to raise money to fund needed projects in the schools."

Chris Oddleifson, President of the CEF reported that the CEF has raised over $250,000 in cash and pledges. To date the CEF has disbursed approximately $40,000 in grants, $25,000 for the Osgood Computer Lab, $7000 for a video server and library available to all the Cohasset public schools, and $7000 for two Promethean interactive white boards for Deer Hill and the Cohasset Middle High School. The CEF has raised over $100,000 for its endowment fund, which will use only its interest to provide long-term support for the schools.

He said the new computers allow the officer to do work on his or her own and not tie up the dispatcher who has other duties to attend to.

"It also gives us the ability to get information in real time," he said, explaining that during a motor vehicle stop an officer can conduct the license and registration checks immediately.

Hussey explained, however, the officers must have probable cause to run plates. In other words, there has to be a valid reason for them to do so.

The chief said 10 officers have been trained on the new computers. Those officers will train the other officers. There are 18 officers in the department.

Another benefit to the new computers is that officers can write reports from the field, eliminating the need for them to return to the station to do so. Hussey said it is advisable for police to write reports on incidents soon after they occur so the details are still fresh in their minds.

"I look at this as an investment in the long term."
— Police Chief James Hussey

The department bought four mobile computers, which have quick disconnect features so they can be moved from vehicle to vehicle, or be operated outside the vehicle. Three of the MDTs are in marked vehicles and one is in the detective's car, Hussey said. Touch screen commands make easy use of all computer functions. The 12 inch-by-9 inch computers weight about six pounds.

The fall special Town Meeting approved the $48,000 for the computers that includes training costs, Hussey said. He explained the new technology should help reduce personnel costs. Maintaining the computers will cost about $3000 a year.

"I look at this as an investment in the long term," he said. "In a small town like ours, the dispatcher serves both police and fire — anything that we can do to reduce that workload is good and could eliminate the need for a second person during a peak time."

The MDTs were purchased from DuraTab, which is looking into a better mount for the computers. Currently the mount makes it difficult to have a passenger in the front seat of the cruiser, Hussey said.

Selectmen recommend water rate increase 5-0

compared to area towns and wondered if this increase was going to cover the capital and debt repayment over the next few years.

The Water Commissioners indicated that they hoped to be selling wholesale water by 2011 to ease the Water Department's budget crunch and the burden on water rate payers.

"In 2011 there will be another water rate increase, if we aren't able to sell water wholesale," said Water Commission Nathaniel Palmer. The Water Commission is seeking Town Meeting approval to sell water to local cities, towns or other water companies (see related story).

Taxpayers have previously paid for stand-by fire service through their property taxes every year. This fee is a combination of hydrant fees, the maintenance of hydrant pipes and the cost to keep 400,000 gallons reserved in case of emergency every day. The recent fire in the Village last month was doused using 175,000 gallons of this emergency water.

According to Chairman Glenn Pratt, due to town budgetary restraints, the Water Commission has not received the entire $150,000 to cover this cost. The $150,000 is built into their Water Commission's budget as expected revenue but they have not received that sum in years, he says. "Then we're scrambling to make up the difference."

The Town's fiscal 2008 budget, to be voted on at Town Meeting (Article 3), does not include a line item for hydrant fees. The additional cost for typical residences will be $15 per quarter, with 1 inch or larger meters being $40 per quarter. This cost will only affect homes and businesses serviced by Cohasset water.

The rate increase is necessary to fund water system improvements outlined in their long-range capital program. These improvements include upgrades to the aging Lily Pond Water Treatment plant, replacement of undersized water mains in the Little Harbor area and a retrofit of the treatment plant to install the MIEX pretreatment system.

Pratt indicated that 2008 and 2009 would be "big years" for debt service. In fiscal 2008, 58.6 percent of the Water Department's budget is devoted to debt service. Currently, the Water Department has $30.5 million in debt, dating back to the building of the Lily Pond Treatment Plant in 1978. The debt is a combination of loans taken out for the system improvements, like upgrading water mains and street work; constituted 78 percent of the debt, or 24 million. Most of these upgrades took place after the 1994 water crisis. Land acquisition and treatment plant loans constitute the remaining 22 percent.

In addition, more capital projects, like the MIEX pretreatment system (a $5 million undertaking), will need to be completed in the next two years in order to meet the increasing federal water regulations. The MIEX system will improve drinking water quality and allow the department to meet the stringent federal drinking water regulatory requirements.

Each project will incur more cost, but the changes need to be made now, Pratt said.

Telethon to raise funds for Cohasset schools

Preparations are underway for the fourth annual Cohasset PSO Telethon, the flagship fundraiser for the Cohasset Parent School Organization, which will be held Thursday, March 22, from 7 to 9 p.m., on local Comcast TV channel 22. The Cohasset PSO Telethon is a live event which runs for more than two hours with a star-studded talent show that simultaneously entertains, informs and raises the much needed funding to enrich the public school curriculum.

Phone in with a tax deductible MC or VISA credit card pledge for $25, $50, $75, $100 or more to 800-505-5241 and AnswerQuick will securely process pledges for the fourth year in a row. Remember, the more that is pledged, the more chances there are to win raffle items.

The PSO has funded curriculum enrichment, guest speakers, teacher grants, the Osgood retractable stage, playground equipment, library books, a portion of the Connect Ed Service, physical education supplies, $5,000 in updates to the Middle High School auditorium, $20,000 to the new technology lab at the Middle High School and much more for the children of the Cohasset Public Schools.

This year's emcees, Rich Ofsthun and Lucia Flibotte, will return for a fourth year to keep the show running smoothly. Local families and business have been generous with donations to support the telethon raffles and the on-line silent auction. Business sponsors include Coldwell Banker Real Estate Brokerage, Pilgrim Bank, Coastal Nissan Auto Center, Graham Storage Services, Coastal Countryside Properties, Adrian Morris Salon and Jim Armstrong, guitar and music instructor.

For those of you who love auctions, don't forget the silent auction, which has been added to help support the telethon proceeds. Lisa Dooley is managing the on-line auction at http://psotelethon.cmarket.com. The auction features items valued at more than $150. The auction will start Friday, March 16, at 9 a.m., and will run until March 23 at 9 p.m. More items are being added daily, so check the web site often to plan your bids.

The higher the donation the more chances there will be to win exciting raffle prizes. A donation of $100 or more secures a chance in all of the raffle levels that will be offered. To send a tax deductible check, made payable to the Cohasset PSO, have it postmarked by Tuesday, March 20, and include your name, phone, and mailing address, so you can be contacted if you win a raffle item. The mailing address is Cohasset PSO, P.O. Box 30, Cohasset, MA. 02025.

Cohasset water sale needs a checkpoint

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Selectmen voted 4-1 to not recommend to Town Meeting that the Water Commission be given the authority to sell water to other municipal entities. Selectman Fred Koed did not agree with the majority of the Selectmen.

Town Meeting articles, 17 and 18 (both receiving the same vote), request the authority for the Water Commission to sell water to other cities, towns, commissions, districts or water companies, either due to emergency circumstance or by contract (up to 20 years in length).

The Cohasset water system is provided with 4.2 million gallons of water per day, an EPA certified number compiled from 40 years of rain data. Currently, the Town consumes approximately 750,000 gallons.

"We are letting opportunity go out to the ocean everyday," said Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt. Three million gallons of water is returned to the sea everyday, according to Pratt.

The Water Commission is proposing a special amendment (Article 17) and an amendment to the bylaw (Article 18) to allow it to sell up to 2 million gallons of water per day or 50 percent of their daily yield. Right now, the legislation enables the Commission to sell water only to private parties, not other municipalities without going to Town Meeting. The Water Department has a 20-year contract to provide water to the Linden Ponds development in South Hingham. At full buildout the Commission will provide approximately 306,000 gallons to the complex.

"We are letting opportunity go out to the ocean everyday"
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission Chairman

The sale of approximately a million gallons of water per day will contribute to the Water Commission's ongoing improvement projects in Cohasset.

"No matter what collection of contracts we are able to get, we wouldn't be able to sell half of our daily water," said Pratt. The Water Commissioners felt that restriction was fair to the Town water payers and would give the Commission the flexibility to aggressively find customers for the water.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil felt there needed to be a checkpoint with the town, "rather than give the Water Commission blanket authority to pursue contracts. Water is our only natural resource."

Chairman Ralph Dormitzer proposed a compromise where the Water Commission would have to come before the Selectmen for approval of a contract. It would be less onerous than having to go before Town Meeting, which only occurs ever six months, because the Selectmen meet roughly every two weeks, he said. Dormitzer felt the Selectmen represent a broader interest of the Town and could possibly use "our only natural resource" to broker a deal for money and/or services with surrounding Towns.

Selectman Fred Koed, a former Water Commission, advised that it would be unfair to have the Cohasset water payers, which only represents part of the town, be used as leverage.

"Every dollar that comes in subsidies the cost of water and the water rate can be reduced," said Water Commission Vice-Chairman Nathaniel Palmer, "The more we can sell, the less expensive the water could be for Cohasset residents."

The vote at the end of the discussion showed the Selectmen's majority agreement that there should be another set of eyes reviewing the contracts for the sale of water.

"Water is our one resource and there's reasons there are checks and balances in place," said Selectmen Ted Carr.

• Article 5 – Term of Contract: The Water Commission seeks the authority to award or renew the contract for the operation, management and maintenance of the Water Department. Water Department employees are not Town employees, rather contracted employees of the Water Commission. The Article is requesting authorization to renew or enter into contracts with terms longer than three years. Recommended 4-1.

• Article 19 – Land Acquisition: The Water Commission seeks authorization from Town Meeting to purchase a parcel of land in the Lily Pond watershed in Article 19. No additional funds need to be appropriated by Town Meeting. The lots, identified on the assessors plan number 56-58, abuts land recently acquired by the Water Commission. Recommended 4-0.

• Article 16 – Zoning Bylaw: This Article addresses language contained in the Town Water Resource District Zoning Bylaw. The Article revises the language including the most current regulatory language required by the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). The revision will include two new standards that will enable the Water Commission to protect the Town water supply from the improper storage of deicing chemicals (salt etc.) and animal manure. These conditions are called for as a condition of the Water Department's water management permit granted by the DEP. The article is still under review by Town Counsel, Paul DeRensis. Recommendation of indefinite postponement, 5-0.

Selectmen vote to indefinitely postpone Stormwater article

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Selectmen voted 3-2 to indefinitely postpone the Stormwater Management Bylaw put forth by the Stormwater Commission on Monday night. The Commission will still have the opportunity to argue the article's merits at Town Meeting.

The purpose of the Article is to establish a program, organization and procedures to deal with stormwater and flooding issues within the Town.

"One of the unique things that will come out of setting up the Stormwater Committee is that residents will have someone to go to with flooding issue," said Stormwater Chairman Martin Nee. Currently, there is an issue of accountability because no one group has jurisdiction over the issue, said Nee.

The lengthy article establishes a new town entity as well as defines its scope. A permit program would be implemented, requiring new structures on raw, undeveloped land and any activity that will disturb current runoff pattern of more that one acre of land to obtain a stormwater permit.

"I'm reluctant to add another committee to the by-laws."
— Selectman Gary Vanderweil

"The permit process is to prevent new development from creating additional runoff than what exists now," explained the Committee's technical consultant, Mark Bartlett, "Cohasset has poor soil and bedrock to begin with. We just don't want more runoff."

Except in cases where no other town building permit is necessary, the Stormwater Committee will act in an advisory role and the majority of stormwater permits will be handled by established boards (Planning Board, Board of Health).

The article also includes a stormwater capital improvement program for the purpose of reducing existing and future stormwater flooding and pollution. Several areas in town, such as an area on Atlantic Ave and surrounding James Brook, continually see significant flooding and multiple homes are affected.

"I like that the Commission would be feeding up through other boards," said Chairman Dormitzer. However, the majority feeling was the article was not ready to go before Town Meeting. Selectman Gary Vanderweil argued for the separation of flood control and EPA regulation on runoff and storm drains.

"I'm reluctant to add another committee to the by-laws," Vanderweil said.

The Stormwater Committee has made dozens of changes in the past month to the article in an effort to incorporate public comment.

"This article charges a body in Town with the responsibility and accountability [of stormwater issues]. It's something pushing and moving this issue forward," said Stephen Bobo, member of the stormwater committee and Board of Health.

"I think we are ready for Town Meeting and hearing what the Town has to say," said Committee member Sarah Charron.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Loving the Loring

Cohasset Mariner readers from time to time have asked us for updates about the Shipyard project next door in Hingham.

(At Community Newspaper Company, the editors have "jurisdiction" over more than one newspaper. The Cohasset Mariner and the Hingham Journal have been a "team" since the fall of 1993.)

Last Sunday we sent out a request via email to our Hingham Journal Readers Advisory Network and we received an overwhelming response about the proposal for a six-screen movie theater at the Hingham Shipyard, which will also include stores, restaurants and residential communities.

Opinions were quite literally all over the map: some thought a six-screen multiplex theatre at the Shipyard would be great for the area; others thought it should be scaled back; and still others said another movie theatre of any size would be bad for Hingham.

But one theme came through loud and clear: Hingham loves Loring Hall. Here at the Mariner, we also know from experience that Cohasset residents also love the Loring.

So great is the affection for the building, which dates back to 1852, that one gets the feeling the quality of life in the area would be adversely affected if it were not to continue in operation.

Here in Cohasset, we enthusiastically join the chorus of Hinghamites who think Loring Hall is unique. In fact attending a movie there can be a special experience. Where else can you grab a cup of coffee at Brewed Awakenings or Brigham's – or have dinner before the show at the Square Café, which is just around the corner? After the "early show" there is still time for a bite at Star's, Muang Thai, Liberty Grille, the Snug or other local spot. The great thing is you do not have to get back into your car! Once at the Square, everything is within walking distance.

The Loring itself provides an ambiance that is not available at other theatres. Maybe it's the wood floor, the balcony, the antiquated restrooms, tiny snack bar, or old-fashioned ticket booth. The Loring is right out of "central casting" when it comes to old-time theatres. And we love it!

Like so much in this area, the Loring is steeped in history. Way before movies, Hinghamites paid 12-1/2 cents a piece to hear Ralph Waldo Emerson speak "in a quiet and unostentatious way" in March 1853, according to a Journal report.

Over the ensuing years, the Loring was home to dance classes; violin concerts; and to those espousing political causes. In the late 1800s during a temperance movement, a "law and order" meeting was held there urging the town selectmen move against the illegal sale of "intoxicating liquors."

The Rev. Anna Howard Shaw argued for women's suffrage during an appearance at the Loring in 1884 that drew 200 people and the support of Gov. John D. Long of Hingham.

In 1887, black soldiers of the 54th and 55th Massachusetts Regiments came to Hingham by steamboat to visit the grave of Civil War Governor John Andrew. They were entertained at the Loring by Peter Sprague, a former officer of the 55th.

By 1912, Loring Hall started showing silent films with piano accompaniment provided by Howie Horton. By the 1920s, 50 cents would buy an evening of movies and vaudeville.

The building was renovated in the 1930s that included installing an up-to-date projection room, two bathrooms, a ticket booth, concession counter and staircases.

During WWII, the Loring was flanked by "cages" for collecting pots and pans for the war effort.

The Loring was built in 1852 for the "meetings and lawful amusements" of residents. The structure cost $4,000 that was donated by Col. Benjamin Loring, a Hinghamite born before the Revolutionary War.

The "ladies of Hingham" had organized a fair, concert, and other social gatherings to raise the $700 needed to buy the site and install the foundation.

This week our Journal readers said: "The Loring is a gem;" "Loring Hall is historic;" "historic and quaint;" "one of the most special things about Hingham;" "should be preserved at all costs."

We all know that time marches on. The Hingham Shipyard is going to be transformed into a waterfront retail and housing area that should be of huge benefit to the region.

But when all is said and done – it is gratifying that we still appreciate the small things that mean a lot.

Loring Hall has earned its place in our history. Let's continue to support it.

War protest off mark

TO THE EDITOR:

I was impressed Saturday morning, March 3, by the people displaying the anti-war signs – "Get out of Iraq" – "Stop the War," etc., at the POW-MIA Square.

I wanted to stop and ask, (but I just got back in town and didn't have time), if we did that could we stop taking off our shoes in airports?

Cohasset Hardware

TO THE EDITOR:

Words always fall short when saying goodbye to old friends. When it comes to saying goodbye to Cohasset Hardware: Tina, Ben and their staff, thank you comes quickly to mind. Thank you for the years of quality service and stability in an ever changing downtown. Thank you for thousands of nails, tools, paintbrushes, Cohasset trash bags, tape, glue, light bulbs, grass seed, plungers, beautiful windows, cheerfully posting all of our event fliers, boat parts, (with expert advice), candles and flashlights before storms, consults on paint colors, a neutral meeting place and always a genuine interest and investment in our town. Next time I'm in Home Depot I will be lonesome for the hardware store where "everyone knows my name."

Keep Veterans Services at cabinet level

TO THE EDITOR:

The following letter to Gov. Patrick was sent to the Mariner for publication:

Dear Governor Patrick,

As Commander of the Lt. Ralph Talbot (USMC-CMOH) DAV Chapter 65 that supports 10 towns on the South Shore, I implore you to reconsider downgrading the Honorable Thomas Kelley's Department of Veterans' Services from cabinet level status.

Simply stated, most veterans come from lower and lower-middle income families. Believe me, State and Federal level bureaucracy make it extremely difficult for these veterans to resolve problems and communicate concerns. Tom Kelly's staff has been a crucial asset in assisting veterans.

Further, his Department works with your Executive Department and the General Court(specifically, the Joint Committee on Veterans & Federal Affairs) to oppose frivolous proposals, consolidate House and Senate veterans' legislation, and provide oversight of veterans' services offices in the three hundred and fifty plus municipalities.

The National Headquarters of the DAV, the Department of Massachusetts DAV and its eighty chapter (of which we are one) contribute tens of thousands of dollars and volunteer hours, but we cannot succeed without your support.

The current furor over care at Walter Reed Army Hospital is the tip of the iceberg. Our country's veteran heroes are also the State of Massachusetts veteran heroes and you must be kept well informed to avoid them "falling through the cracks" as they did after Vietnam. Our veterans are proud citizens of the United States, but they are also citizens of Massachusetts and it is to our State (yours, mine and theirs) to which they return and live with the physical and psychological wounds of war.

Paul A. Salvas, Commander – DAV Chapter 65
Joseph R. McElroy-Adjutant-DAV Chapter 65

CEF off to a great start

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the Cohasset Education Foundation Board of Directors, I would like to thank everyone in this community who has supported our recent Annual Appeal. Your generous response has enabled us to exceed our initial goal of $250,000 in pledges and cash contributions by January 31, 2007.

Contributions to the Project Fund has already made three grant awards possible; $25,000 for the Osgood Computer Lab (k–2), $7,000 for the Safari Montage Video System (k–12) and $7,000 for a Promethean White Board, Deer Hill (3 – 5). These grants help ensure that Cohasset students, teachers and administrators are provided with the programs, materials and up-to-date equipment necessary to make a difference in today's competitive environment. Your contributions to CEF's Extra Credit Program have provided valuable funding towards professional development available to all the teachers and administrators of our public schools.

Our work is just beginning. Currently, the Endowment Fund balance is $100,000 and with your continued support will grow to provide for the long-term health of the schools and the Town. The Project Fund has a current balance (after funding our recent grants) of approximately $40,000 which we anticipate granting over the next several months. The Extra Credit program has also received a great response and monies raised will continue to be dedicated to professional development. None of this initial success would be possible without your support. For more information about the Foundation and how you can become involved please visit our website at www.cohasseteducation.org.

Harbor wall project challenges

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Pond/Spring intersection — In last week's Mariner we mentioned that the Pond Street crossing is at a standstill waiting for the reopening of the asphalt plants. (Ah - when the asphalt plants reopen, can spring be far behind?) Since, it is tough for most of us to really see what's happening at the Pond St./Spring St. intersection, we thought we'd show you what it currently looks like. This photo shows that this intersection is really not ready for prime time. But, it's not as bad as it looks. The rough grades have all been established. All drainage is in place. New water lines have all been installed. There is still some electrical utility work to be completed along with road curbs, sidewalk, paving and landscaping. We would estimate this to be another month's work once it restarts.

Pond/Spring crossing — There is strong incentive for CBB to restart work at this crossing as soon as they can, since Pond Street must be opened before the other leg of Spring Street can be closed. And, the MBTA must close the temporary crossing on the other leg of Spring Street to complete the work there. We have told both CBB and the MBTA that we will not permit the Pond St./Spring St. crossing to open until it is absolutely complete. We don't want any more partially completed crossings like Sohier or Lower King streets.

Harbor wall rebuild project — If topics with a technical bent are not your cup of tea, you may want to skip this portion of our article. But for those of you who like to understand the story behind the story there is a very interesting bit of technology that will be utilized about mid March during the harbor wall replacement project.

When seawalls are to be rebuilt there are several ways the contractor can choose to work. One way is to conduct operations only at low tide when the wall is entirely accessible. This makes sense. But, the disadvantages are many. First of all, low tide does not always coincide with reasonable daylight working hours. Second, when the tide changes and comes back in (And, as sure as death and taxes, it will), the entire work site must be secured so that it is stable and will not shift with the incoming tide. Further, the preparation and stabilization efforts that must be done in preparation for tide changes detract from the time actually available to work on the wall and seriously increase the cost of the project.

So, if this is such an expensive approach, why would we speak about it? Well, the contractor, T. Ford of Georgetown, Mass. had a bright idea. They are going to employ a proprietary device called Portadam. (See www.portadam.com/PortadamNetscape.htm).

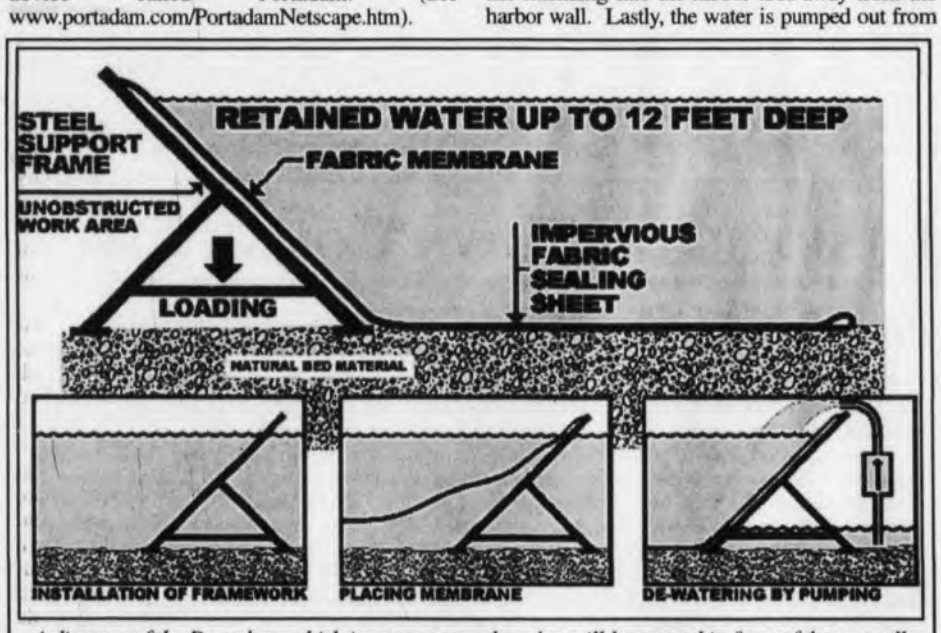
The Pond St./Spring St. intersection, as shown here, is really not ready for prime time.

The accompanying diagram shows what this device is and how it is used. The Portadam is a temporary dam that will be erected in front of the sea wall. After it is erected, the area immediately in front of the harbor wall will be dry and can be worked on at will by the contractor.

Let's look at what the Portadam is and how it is set up. In the diagram, there is a supporting structure shown in the top illustration, to the left. The seaward side the framework is covered by a robust fabric waterproof membrane. The weight of the water causes a downward force (see "LOADING" above). The downward force causes the supporting structure to anchor itself firmly to the sea floor and presses the fabric membrane tightly against the frame and the sea floor, creating a dam. Any water that does leak around the Portadam will be pumped out, rendering the area between the Portadam and the harbor wall reasonably dry for the construction necessary to rebuild the wall.

The lower three sketches show how the Portadam is actually installed. First, the support frame is positioned on the harbor floor. Then the membrane is placed against the framework, with a rather long tail extending into the harbor area away from the harbor wall. Lastly, the water is pumped out from behind the Portadam, leaving the area behind the Portadam dry.

Current plans are for the Portadam to be installed about mid-March. Then, T. Ford workers will be able to work during daylight hours, regardless of tide position. ...Clever these Georgetown folks.



While we are talking about the harbor wall rebuild project, we might mention that the Town, with cooperation of the Cohasset Sailing Club has allowed the contractor to utilize a specific portion of the driveway in front of the sailing club on Government Island, which is Town property, as a staging area for equipment and materials. We have agreed to keep a portion of the drive open for the Sailing Club to have direct access to their buildings and the space between the two buildings for the activities that need to take place as they begin their start-up activities late this spring.

We do recognize that some of this staging area is visible from the Lightkeepers building. We have responded to the requests from the Lightkeepers Board to be as sensitive as we can in the placement of the equipment and material in this area. On Tuesday, March 6 at 7:30 a.m., we met with the contractor and were able to do some rearrangement to improve the view from the Lightkeepers. But, we do need a place to store material and equipment so we can't make it totally disappear. Initially, we did consider using the back Lightkeepers' parking lot as a staging area, but felt that trucks dragging material up the Lightkeepers' driveway past the building would cause much dirt and wear and tear to the driveway. It would also reduce parking for events. These factors would have a definite direct negative impact on the ambiance and desirability of the Lightkeepers' facility. We thought this to be much worse than the present solution.

Staging areas for Town projects is always a difficult part of these necessary projects. The further the staging area is from the construction site, the more expensive it is for the Town, and the longer it takes to complete the project. We felt this location to be a good compromise, but clearly, not a perfect solution. Fortunately, this harbor wall repair will be a relatively quick project and will soon be complete.

Getting ready to spring forward

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Get ready for some first class grumbling next weekend.

That's the day, Sunday, March 11, when we all get up at 2 a.m. and set our clocks ahead to 3 a.m. so that we can lose an hour's sleep. We'll feel it all day Sunday, and again on Monday, March 12, when we're expected to arrive at the office or shop bright-eyed and bushy-tailed.

And for that you can blame our own Congressman Ed Markey, who shepherded the new time through Congress.

It's called Daylight Saving Time and it happens every year only this time it's three weeks early so what used to be daybreak will be the middle of the night for what used to be called the day shift at offices, factories and schools.

And for that you can blame our own Congressman Ed Markey, who shepherded the new time through Congress. Better he should have stuck with the war in Iraq or the television industry or some other less controversial subject.

"Daylight Saving Time just brings a smile to everybody's faces," he said. "When it's daylight and people are going home at night, they feel better, and as the ad says, that's priceless; it's impossible to put a value of it."

Didn't they say something like that about Prohibition?

No one has touched a clock to reset the hands yet and already the griping and moaning has started from the highest airline executive to the guy who jogs before breakfast to the kid who'll grope his way to school though darkened streets.

The airlines faced a conundrum in that the 8 a.m. flight to London, say, has clearance to land seven hours later only to find that another airline is landing on that runway because the Americans are an hour early due to the time change.

Joggers who look forward to rising at 6 a.m. and exercising as dawn is breaking will be faced with rising at what used to be 5 a.m. and running in slippery streets in the dark with a flashlight to avoid potholes and other threats to life and limb.

The National Parent Teacher Association has already pointed out the safety issues of school kids walking to school, or even to catch a school bus, in the dark when who knows who may be aboard.

Markey says the early shift to Daylight Savings Time would save energy since lights would not have to be turned on for the extra hour in the evening and reduce crime since most are committed in the evening darkness.

The Globe discovered Michael Downing, professor of English at Tufts and author of "Spring Forward: The Annual Madness of Daylight Savings Time," who thinks Markey's theories are all wet.

"All of this is at best hypothetical," he is quoted as saying. "People have attributed to it all the evils of the world and all the healing properties of snake oil."

Me? I'll probably sleep 'til 9 a.m. on Monday, or 8 o'clock or 10 o'clock, whatever. It's one of the priceless values you can out on retirement.

Rainy season and other LA mayhem

L.A. Story (Part 2)

Southern Star Productions made Saturday morning cartoons — aggressively mediocre cartoons even by the standards of that time slot, during which children will watch an electrocardiogram if it's shrill enough. Had my job in any way involved the production of dreck like Teen Wolf or The Berenstain Bears I would have been thrilled, believe me. But since I was fresh out of university with a degree in mechanical engineering my job was to make sure the office didn't run out of apple juice.

I couldn't have been more incompetent. The office was always out of everything I was supposed to be supplying it with. It was like the clichéd sitcom plot where a really brilliant person is unable to do some menial job because he's too busy writing a successful screenplay, only without the screenplay. In my case I was too busy trying to find a real job during the longest writers strike in Hollywood history. It took all of my energies, frankly, and if I was willing to give up apple juice, soap, toilet paper and other office luxuries in order to further my career, well, I expected my coworkers to make similar sacrifices.

One day about four months into the strike I got a craving for a nice cool bottle of apple juice and remembered to do my job. As a thank you my long-suffering boss gave me two tickets to a movie premiere. These are generally swank affairs attended by well-dressed people, so my first order of business was to find some decent clothes. Luckily I had a gay roommate who worked for a famous clothing designer with quality control problems, so I was the grateful recipient of an irregular but incredibly hip gray polyester suit with big padded shoulders, big buttons, big everything. I looked like David Byrne in a tent, but my roommate assured me that was the style at the time and I've always felt it was dangerous to argue with fashion.

I'm pretty sure it was Los Angeleans who first decided it was a good idea to put French tap water into bottles...

The premiere was for The Dead, the last film from John Huston, one of our greatest directors, adapting a book by a great author, James Joyce, and starring Academy-award winning actress Angelica Huston. It was a crushing bore, but the evening was salvaged when I pointed out to my girlfriend none other than Andy Warhol walking among the guests at the post-premiere party. When she pointed out that Andy Warhol was several months dead I pointed out that everyone was wearing such huge suits that it was very easy to make such errors.

While we were scanning the room for alive celebrities and eating our quiche puffs we heard the unmistakable sound of a four-car crash outside the theater. Multi-car pileups are just background noise during the rainy season in Los Angeles, which is the week of Feb. 20th. For 11 months the roads are thoroughly coated with oil dripping from a million engine blocks, with no rain to rinse it into the storm drains. Then rain falls for 10 minutes, forms a thin layer between the pavement and the oil, and automobiles become three-ton air hockey pucks. Picture black ice suddenly crystallizing on every inch of every road in Norfolk County and you can imagine the mayhem. Meanwhile houses are sliding down hills, acres of prime cliffside real estate are washing out to sea, and the phones at FEMA are ringing off the hook. Rain is a curse in L.A.

Living in a desert is bound to give you a weird attitude toward water in general. Since it comes from pipes and almost never from the sky you tend to think of it as a man-made product. Not for drinking, but for washing your driveway and the roof of your house, a decorative item that can get filthy unless you give it a good rinsing every couple of weeks. Drinking water comes exclusively from bottles, usually from overseas. I'm pretty sure it was Los Angeleans who first decided it was a good idea to put French tap water into bottles, load it onto freighters and ship it 8.000 miles to sit next to Orangina in the 7-Eleven. Now we're all convinced that water should cost $1.50 a quart. When Californians start trucking in air from out of state I'm telling you we can all kiss our IRAs goodbye.

The writers strike finally broke in late 1988, and I found a new job at a special effects company. My first task was to help build a giant model of Freddy Krueger's throat, in which 15 slimy half-naked extras moaned and writhed while the camera spun downward as if falling into Freddy's gullet. Between takes we made smoke and kept everyone properly slimed up. It was chaotic and slippery and a guy was calling "Action!" and "Cut!" with fans blowing and smoke billowing and cameras whirring, just like in the movies.

The 18 months that followed found me on the set of many grade-Z productions with no artistic aspirations, but I approached every shoot as if I were working for the great John Huston. Since he was dead I did a fair amount of goofing off.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset, spending most of his time trying to de-slime his children. In Part 3 of "L.A. Story" careers are made, innocence is lost, and names are dropped at an increasingly ferocious pace.

BRIEFLY

Top grad rate

Cohasset achieved a 98 percent graduation rate for the Class of 2006, ranking it the third public school system in the state behind Weston (98.7 percent) and Norwell (98.5 percent). The data was released on all Massachusetts schools (including charter schools) in February. The percentages are based on the number of students enrolled in the Class of 2006 and of those who received their diplomas within four years. The statistics were compiled to adhere to the new federal No Child Left Behind Act, which requires the state to show graduation success for a particular class.

DOE Grant

A grant of $30,000 was awarded for the full-day kindergarten program at Osgood School from the Department of Education. The funds allocated for this year are required to be used during the current fiscal year. The grant will fund the purchase of instructional materials and technology for the full-day kindergarten. Professional development for the teachers is also a possibility. Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan hopes that this grant (which Cohasset will be eligible for every year) will support a combination of paraprofessional staff and materials in the future.

'The Saudi Arabia of wind'

COMMENTARY

ALLAN MACDONALD

It's both challenging and revivifying to try to keep up with the latest developments in peak oil/climate change. As I write, the news is that Shell and BP are opting for wind turbine development. "All the stars are aligning in a way that supports alternative energy," says Robert Lukefahr, president of BP Alternative Energy North America, as reported in the March 2 Boston Globe. "Energy security issues will cause many communities to seek indigenous supplies of energy."

A source that has appeared to serve like a lodestar and goldmine in the above regard is a book published just several weeks ago, the latest environmental arrival at Paul Pratt Library, "The Citizen-Powered Energy Handbook: Community Solutions to a Global Crisis," by Greg Pahl, whose title promises investigation of Lukefahr's comments. And it does that, in most interesting fashion.

Energies do indeed appear to be aligning. On Saturday morning, Feb. 24, about a hundred people gathered at Hull High School auditorium for an update on Hull Wind III, the turbine project at Harding's Ledge. Hull is referenced repeatedly in Pahl's new book. We haven't realized it, but Hull leads the nation in harnessing energy from the wind. It's an international inspiration. Hull has done things the right way. Carol Wasserman, director of regulatory strategies for ESS Group, a consulting and engineering firm in Wellesley, referred to the Hull shoreline as "the Saudi Arabia of wind."

A quaint incident occurred near the conclusion of the Saturday program. A member of the audience rose and gave his name. "I'm from Hull," he said. Then, "Oh, I'm sorry, I mean Hingham." A ripple of good-hearted chuckling went through the auditorium as especially those of us not from Hull could feel the well-deserved pride emanating from the Hull residents.

Pahl says that the present choice for NIMBYs is either a turbine in your line of sight or doing without electricity. He reminds us that we Americans feel that electricity is our God-given right. We learn in the book that turbines range from those with a 20-inch blade (used, say, to power electric fences) to those over 500 feet high with blades the length of a Boeing 747's wingspan. We are told that future alternative energy sources will vary from community to community, depending on siting, depending on what is reasonably available. Perhaps tidal energy would be Cohasset's choice.

"Communities," Pahl says, "are our own best security. Especially if we are united as a community in our determination to face the future. I firmly believe that a community's commitment to its own future energy security will ultimately prove to be one of the best long-term investments it can possibly make. I hope your community is among the growing number of cities and towns around the world to follow this sensible strategy."

HEALTH NOTES

Fructose, glucose and your weight

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Some time ago, this column waxed eloquent about sugar — said it was evil. More recently, we talked about the motivators for destructive behavior, such as overeating. Today, we'll talk about the philosophical factors behind our present system of food distribution and how market forces may be translated into subtle drivers for unhealthy habits.

This from a recent newspaper article "Pick up a processed food item these days — from bread and cereal to salad dressings, soft drinks and soups — and you're likely to find a common ingredient: high-fructose corn syrup." The writer implies that 'foodmakers' use it because they don't need to say how much is used on the label.

Others have distinguished the differences between the two types of sugar, fructose and glucose and their respective effects on diet. "Why is high-fructose corn syrup showing up in my food?" The reason is that it's not necessarily sweeter but cheaper than table sugar, a fact viewed with distrust by some consumers.

Since the introduction of high-fructose corn syrup in 1966, U.S. consumption has reached about 60 pounds per person per year. That rise has closely paralleled the obesity epidemic — accordingly, some scientists suggest that there might be a link between the two. However, the jury's out on the issue. Fact is that both ingredients contribute plenty of added sugar and calories.

Made from corn starch, high-fructose corn syrup is a thick liquid that contains about equal parts of fructose and glucose — in roughly equal amounts. Sucrose, known as table sugar, is a larger molecule that breaks down into glucose and fructose in the intestine during metabolism to start a cascade of biochemical reactions. Thus high fructose cornstarch has more fructose than glucose. Glucose increases production of insulin by the pancreas, which enables sugar in the blood to be transported into cells where it can be used for energy. Also boosted: leptin, a hormone that helps regulate appetite and fat storage. Glucose halts production of ghrelin, the so-called appetite hormone. When ghrelin levels drop, hunger declines.

Fructose, on the other hand, doesn't stimulate either insulin or leptin production and doesn't suppress ghrelin. It may also promote fat synthesis.

Accordingly, some scientists suggest that eating too much fructose could contribute to weight gain. But others note that studies have examined only pure fructose — not the combination of sugars found in high-fructose corn syrup. New studies show no differences in blood sugar, appetite hormones or hunger and, because of market pressures, there are sure to be more studies.

The present consensus: all added sugar is bad for you and high-fructose corn syrup may not be much worse than any other kind.

Observing the two sides of the ongoing argument about sweeteners, the reactions of both sides are rational. The soft drink maker will use the safe ingredient that fits his production requirements; those who are paid to talk about the product will single out those characteristics which sell it best. Scientists looking for the reasons for the growth in obesity identify high fructose as a possible cause. Marketing forces commission studies to counter any negative scientific findings and we, the consumers, have far too many facts, supported, conflicting and otherwise.

It always seems to come back to the point that staying healthy has to be one of the things in your life that will take its place in the order of priorities when it needs to. If your leg hurts, if you're too fat, if you need a new roof. You have to devise a way to fit them all in; maybe not today, but sometime.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN COMMITTEE

Gov. Patrick's budget, expectations, goals

For background on this topic, read the newspaper and check out the budget when it is posted on line. For information go to www.cohassetdems.org, or call Agnes McCann at 781-383-0222

Peace rally — Low temperatures and biting winds could not keep a dedicated group of Cohasset citizens from meeting once again on the Commons this past Saturday morning to rally for peace. Organized more than two months ago, an enthusiastic group meets every Saturday on the Commons from 9:30 to 10 a.m., to rally for Peace and add their voices to the call for the withdrawal of our troops from Iraq. Question of the Week

Regarding the Budget, the town is split between two distinct camps – the town side and the school side. What could you do to encourage better communications and decrease the appearance of distrust and skepticism between the two sides?

SELECTMAN/ Paul Carlson

We do not send our tax dollars to either the "town side" or the "school side". We pay our taxes to the Town of Cohasset. We expect our boards to meet our needs efficiently and effectively so that Cohasset will remain a very desirable and affordable place to live. This year we have a Proposition 2-1/2 compliant budget based on cooperation between our boards without rancor and divisiveness — a major improvement over recent history. I commend both the Board of Selectmen and the School Committee for creating this positive outcome. If I am elected to serve as a selectman, I will work to build on this success.

Our boards have management responsibility for balancing competing interests for the benefit of the town as a whole. While disappointments are inevitable, people will accept adverse decisions when they believe the process is fair, transparent and open. I will seek more communication and information sharing between the various boards and with the public before, during and after budget season. We must all take the time to understand Cohasset's needs, priorities and constraints. We must all also spend more time listening to all issues, not just our own specific issues.

I also believe in the importance of person-to-person discussions as an aid to understanding problems and finding solutions. As a candidate I have been meeting with town officials on all "sides" to listen and learn about their issues. I plan to continue these meetings if I am elected selectman.

Most importantly, we must banish the artificial and divisive "town side" and "school side" terminology. All voters choose all the elected boards. We do not have a system where some voters elect members of one board and other voters elect members of other boards. We are one town, the Town of Cohasset.

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

The Selectmen and the School Committee will report at Town Meeting on March 31 that we are in agreement on the funding of the Cohasset School System for fiscal '08 without an override. The genesis of this agreement is an acknowledgement on the part of the two committees and many townspeople that we share common goals — that the school system be rated among the top 10 in the State and that the town be managed in an efficient and effective manner. The schools have backed up their goal with measurable objectives and a time line for achieving them. The town on its part has established financial goals and objectives with time lines for achieving them.

Is all tension between town and school banished? The answer is no. There is an inherent tension between the limited financial resources of the town and its citizens and the more expansive agenda of the schools. Today, as distinct from a year ago, however, the fact that we agree on common goals moves the debate to a higher plane, one less confrontational and more constructive. All of us prefer it this way.

Regarding the Budget, the town is split between two distinct camps – the town side and the school side. What could you do to encourage better communications and decrease the appearance of distrust and skepticism between the two sides?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Peter Richardsson

I see more commonality than division from my nascent point of view. A strong school system is a benefit to all property owners regardless of whether or not they utilize it; housing demand is stimulated by the draw of a great district. Conversely, no one can argue that the selectman, the school committee, and the school's administration have a fiduciary duty to ensure that the town's precious resources are spent in an austere, transparent, and goal-oriented manner. Providing a top-tier education and living within a predictable budget should not be mutually exclusive.

The School Committee has recently brought much more sunlight to the budget and its process. I trust that trend will continue as it is bridging the gap between the two camps. Although credibility has been an issue in the past, I am looking forward. Today, the town needs to come together, accept the realities of its finances, and leverage technology, new revenue opportunities, and best practices to make the most out of the educational resources we have. Re-litigating the issues of the past will only serve to preserve the split.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

As a School Committee member and in my previous positions on the Building Committee and PSO communication is at the forefront of what one is expected to do. As a general rule, as a liaison from the School Committee, I attend in the neighborhood of 4-5 additional meeting a month in addition to two scheduled monthly meeting of the School Committee. I have been committed to making sure the people of Cohasset have access to me, as a public official, and through that access to the school budget. This commitment has been as beneficial to me as, I hope, it has been to those who have taken the time to share their questions and/or comments with me.

For me, I will continue to commit my time to be available to those who seek to better understand our School budget within the scope of the overall town budget.

Within the scope of this commitment, is the commitment to deliver fact-based information about our schools. This commitment isn't to communicate what is "politically" correct at the time; it is to let people know the facts so that, at the end of the day, they have the information they need to make the best decision for the Town of Cohasset. However, it will take a mutual respect between those in leadership roles to end distrust and skepticism. The School Committee has strived to proactively open dialogue between the different boards; this has work well during this budget season. I believe we can continue to bridge the communication gap if all parties are willing to come to the table and engage in an open discussion concerning the fiscal realities of this town.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For selectman candidates: Despite all the concern about affordable housing over the past 10 years – Cohasset's affordable housing stock is still a little more than 2 percent and the town is still vulnerable to 40B projects. How serious is the affordable housing issue and what can be done about it?

For school committee candidates: Has MCAS helped or hurt Cohasset? And is there a concern that student high-stakes testing hamstrings teacher creativity – forcing teachers to "teach to the test?"

Responses should be brief —no more than 300 words — and should be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Correction

A story in last week's Mariner titled "Who's Who in Cohasset land acquisition" should have said Jack Hubbard was one of the three men whose vision was the impetus behind the beginning of the Cohasset Conservation Trust in 1967. John Hartshorne, a longtime member of the Trust, was mistakenly identified as one of the three. The Mariner regrets the error.

Big and bold - that's Texas

Text by Bill Fonda
Photos by Suzi Fonda

It doesn't take long to figure out that Texas is very, very different.

After all, in how many places can you eat at an Italian restaurant on the water — such as the Riverwalk in San Antonio — while being entertained by a mariachi band playing the theme to a British sitcom ("Perhaps, Perhaps, Perhaps" from "Coupling") ... in Spanish?

Yes, when they do something in Texas, they don't do it halfway. The highways are massive, most six lanes minimum, with frontage roads of two or three lanes on either side. Heading west out of Austin toward the two national parks in honor of President Lyndon Baines Johnson (one featuring his boyhood home, the other his ranch) is some of the most wide-open space you'll ever see.

Even the narrator for a film on Texas cities, singer Ray Benson of Asleep at the Wheel, is big, standing 6-feet, 7-inches tall.

The ranch itself is as large as Johnson's personality, so big that it actually comes under the jurisdiction of both the state and federal governments. It's definitely worth the trip and the 90-minute bus tour; you can take pictures of the Texas White House from the bus, but you can't get out, since Lady Bird still visits from time to time.

San Antonio's most-famous landmark, the Alamo.

In Austin, which is home of LBJ's presidential museum and library, the Bob Bullock Texas State History Museum tells the story of Texas in great detail — from the days as a Spanish and Mexican colony right through the discovery of OIL! Even the narrator for a film on Texas cities, singer Ray Benson of Asleep at the Wheel, is big, standing 6-feet, 7-inches tall.

The negatives are even writ large; going to the San Juan, Espada, San José and Concepción missions in San Antonio, you'll encounter some of the worst-looking conditions possible, but don't let that stop you. The missions themselves are beautiful, and they are still working Catholic churches today, to the point of not being able to go into the church at San Jose because a funeral was coming inside.

Speaking of churches, although the Alamo is no longer a church, act like you're in one when you go. Set right in the middle of downtown — you'll miss it if you're not paying attention — it's smaller than you may think, at least on the outside.

As might be expected, any place that lives on such a grand scale is bound to be pretty full of itself. The boat guide on the Riverwalk may have been half-kidding when he complained how San Antonio is second at everything: the Tower of the Americas being the second-tallest in the United States, the second hotel being built by stacking the floors Lego style. But if he was kidding, it was only half.

Our guide at the Texas state capitol in Austin made sure to tell us that although Louisiana's capitol may actually be taller, they made sure when they expanded it to make it the largest in terms of size. And when the only suitable helicopter to reinstall the statue on the building was from Mississippi, they made the two pilots honorary Texans for a day, since non-Texans can't work on the capitol.

Over at the University of Texas' Frank Erwin Center (which we dubbed "The Big Rolo" for its resemblance to the candy), everyone stands up for the national anthem at the basketball game ... and then stays standing for the playing of the alma mater, "The Eyes of Texas." Everyone stands respectfully, keeps their hats off, puts their Hook 'Em Horns in the air and sings to the tune of "I've Been Workin' on the Railroad."

All of this may seem off-putting, but it really isn't. To be in a place that unabashedly brash is actually quite charming.

Diners enjoy the pleasant weather along the Riverwalk.

Strong finish

Sci-Coh swim teams perform at state meets

By Alyssa Rogers
CORRESPONDENT

The Scituate-Cohasset swim teams finished the season on a high note with strong performances at the state sectionals and finals.

At state sectionals held the weekend of Feb. 17 the boys placed seventh overall, while the girls came in 10th place.

Junior Ashley Scott broke team records in the 200- and 500-yard freestyle events. A talented sprinter, Scott has now established herself as a long distance swimmer.

The boys 400-yard relay team of Rob Lilly, Colin Conway, Johnny Drybanski and Brian McGuiness finished third at sectionals (top spot for public schools in the event).

Freshman Betsy Crawford came in third overall in the diving portion of the state sectional meet. Crawford finished only points away from qualifying for state finals.

The following weekend at state finals, 13 Sci-Coh swimmers turned in state qualifying times. The boys placed seventh overall.

McGuiness finished third in the 500-yard freestyle event with a time of 4:57.11.

Senior Colin Conway dislocated his shoulder moments before swimming in the 400-yard freestyle relay. Luckily senior Brent Daly stepped in to round out the team of Lilly, Drybanski and McGuiness. The foursome placed third overall with a time of 3:25.40.

Freshman Megan Little was the only girl to qualify for states in an individual event. Little swam impressively in both the 50- and 100-yard freestyle events with times of 26.36 and 58.99 seconds respectively.

"I'm really proud of our results," coach Jon Fortin said. "Even if the swimmers didn't qualify for states, we set 11 new team records this year. Their hard work has really paid off and I could not be happier for their success."

Many underclassmen were just seconds away from qualifying for state finals.

"I am excited for the success that the team will have in the future," Fortin said. "We are only losing three senior girls this year, so as a whole, our team will be stronger. Swimmers Mimi Mahoney, Torey Hart and Ashley Scott were so close to making states, and I am so glad that I will have more time to work with their abilities."

Kissick leads Weymouth Waves at 12-and-under New England championship

Cohasset's Hope Kissick led the way for the Weymouth Waves at the recent New England 12-and-under swimming championships that were hosted by the University of Rhode Island.

The event brought the curtain down on the 2006-07 season for the Waves, who swim out of the Weymouth Club.

The 12-year-old Kissick, who specializes in the breaststroke, accounted for 48 points for the Waves.

Her top finish was in the 50-yard breaststroke, as she took third place and 16 points. She also finished fourth in the 100 breaststroke for another 15 points. She added 11 points to the team total when she finished eighth in the 200 breaststroke. Her final six points came in the 50 free with an 11th-place finish.

"As a coach, I couldn't be happier with the results of our under-12 team. The success of the our kids is a true testament to their commitment of the team's philosophy."

Other point scorers 10-year-old Samuel Rice (Cohasset) and 10-year-old Michaela Morris (Duxbury). Rice amassed 29 points, while Morris amassed 19 points. A freestyler, Rice finished fourth in the 200 free (15 points) and fifth in the 500 (14 points).

In the meantime, Morris accounted for seven each in the 50 and 100 backstroke with a 10th-place finish. Then, in the 50 breaststroke, she took 16th for one point.

In all, the Waves had nine swimmers qualify for the New England Championships.

The other members included eleven-year-old Katie Eagan (Duxbury) who qualified for two events—the 50 and 100 fly, while 12-year-old Danielle Healy (Cohasset) and 10-year-old Michaela Ryan (Hingham) swam in one event each. Healy will compete in the 200 backstroke, while Ryan will swim in the 100 freestyle.

Healy qualified for the New England's at the previous weekend's New England Regional Meet held in Beverly. Healy wasn't the only one,

5th grade Travel B sets sights on championship

The fifth grade Travel B team upset the No. 1 seed Hanover last Saturday night to earn a trip to the championship game next weekend against a powerful Abington club.

Saturday's match-up was reminiscent of a fast-breaking and very physical Celtics-Lakers game in their heyday. Cohasset was firing on all cylinders as eight out of nine players scored, and every player contributed on both sides of the ball to deny Hanover any chance at leading in this contest.

Jack Stanganelli started the fireworks by ripping off four points in the opening minutes to put Cohasset ahead early. Stanganelli turned in a stellar night with a ferocious game on the boards to post key rebounds for important possessions all game.

Mark Rattenbury was a force down low to deny Hanover from getting any second chances on their shots. His early rebounds set the tone for his team to defend well against a high powered Hanover offense. Clark Indek secured the homeland with great defense to compliment his productive night on offense. Indek broke a 4-4 tie to put Cohasset ahead for good.

Timmy Cavanaro was challenged early and often by the defense – but responded well as he went 3-for-4 at the line. He closed the half with a nice jumper from Zach Coggins to put Cohasset ahead 13-8 at the midpoint.

Hanover went back to their playbook to see how to solve the puzzle presented to them in this first playoff game. The 4-seed was not supposed to befuddle the No. 1 superpower – what to do?

Cohasset answered with more of the same: relentless hustle, good defense, great shooting, clutch free-throws and effective press-breaking. Coggins had the hot hand in the second half to lead his team in scoring. Chris Cohen played terrific from the point guard position to contribute on offense and cause havoc on defense. Cohen set up some nice scoring opportunities all night.

Ryan McKeon delivered big as usual with another great performance with multiple steals, scoring, and great passing to enable the entire team to put up points. He drained a beautiful 8-footer midway through the half to put Cohasset ahead 21-12.

Eric Weinstein kept Hanover at bay with good defensive pressure to deny any chance at a

Cohasset looking for its Dream Team

Do you want to be a member of the Dream Team?

Cooperstown Dreams Park in Cooperstown, NY sponsors a baseball tournament each year for 96 teams from across the country for boys ages 12 and under. This is an opportunity for baseball players who are either 11 or 12 years old to join this team and enjoy this tournament.

This year, the tournament begins on Saturday, June 30 and will end with closing ceremonies on Thursday, July 5, at which time the boys will be awarded rings for playing in this tournament.

The athletes will stay in barracks inside the Dreamspark for the week. During this time they will have the opportunity to trade pins, which represent each of the teams in the tournament. They will also have meals provided for them three times a day. The security that is provided is excellent to ensure the safety of all the ballplayers. The Park is a beautiful compound of baseball diamonds and the facilities are clean and well-maintained.

This is an experience of a lifetime. It is also a good family vacation, as the surrounding area is beautiful and there is plenty to do. There is also time between games to spend as a family. Also, don't forget that the Baseball Hall of Fame is just minutes away.

A slot is already saved for next year as well, for which we will be shooting for a later date in the summer, so consider that as well when you are making your decision about this year. Those that choose to attend this year, will be provided that opportunity again next year, if that is their choice.

If you and your child are seriously interested in participating in this experience, please respond via e-mail to Mike Maher at maher63@comcast.net by March 16. Your child's entry fee will be approximately $800 to cover the trading pins, insurance, and entrance fee.

Your child will not only receive a commemorative ring and two uniforms but, more importantly, a chance to play baseball on a national stage. If you know of anyone who might be interested in participating, please let them know.

For more information you can check out www.cooperstowndreampark.com to get a flavor of what you can expect.

There are 12 spots on the roster (a few are filled already); Maher is also looking for two assistant coaches. Maher added he would like to keep this an all-Cohasset team.

though, who did an outstanding job last weekend, as the majority of those who swam at the meet for the Waves turned in their best times of the year. In fact, the Waves had 107 top-10 finishers at the Regional.

Ryan's qualifying for the New England's was of particular note as this is her first year with the Waves' competition team.

For the boys, Rice led the way as the 10-year-old from Cohasset was entered in eight events, four of which are freestyle—the 50, 100, 200, and 500. He also competed in the 100 and 200 individual medley, the 100 fly and 100 backstroke.

Both Michael Connolly and Connor Green swam in six events each.

Then 12-year-old Connolly from Duxbury will swim in the 50, 100, and 200 free and three 100-yard events—the backstroke, the fly, and the IM. In the meantime, the 11-year-old Green from Cohasset was entered in the 50, 100 and 200 backstrokes, the 100 free, and the 100 IM.

What made Connolly and Green's accomplishments noteworthy was they just celebrated birthdays in February moving them up to their current age group. For Connolly, he had to achieve the more challenging 12-year-old qualifying times and an 11-year-old, while Green had to meet the 11-year-old time standards as a 10-year-old.

The Waves' final qualifier was 11-year-old Ian Wilson (Duxbury). He was entered in both the 100 and 200 backstrokes, and like Danielle Healy on the girls' team, Wilson qualified for last weekend's meet in Beverly the previous weekend.

The New England Championships culminated an outstanding season for the Waves.

"As a coach, I couldn't be happier with the results of our under-12 team," said Mike Riley, who oversees the entire Waves' program. "The success of the our kids is a true testament to their commitment of the team's philosophy."

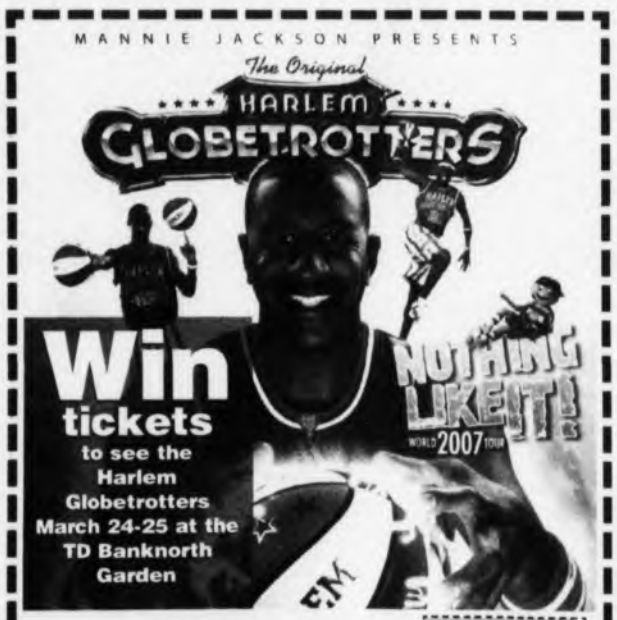
comeback. Jack Leffel played well at the forward position with great passing and good rebounding. Leffel also drained a nice free throw after getting mugged up the middle.



Hanover never gave up and slowly chipped away at the nine point deficit to keep it close. But Cohasset knew better than to let this beast up off the mat. Coggins and Cohen kept up the pressure with timely turnovers and clutch scoring late in the match to pad the lead, including Cohen's solo drive to put Cohasset ahead 27-18 with less than three minutes left.

Hanover put on a last-minute charge to narrow the margin, but couldn't get close enough. Cohasset prevailed 27-23 in the end to march on for another chance to tame the Green Wave of Abington.

One can expect another battle of epic proportions to lay claim to the league championship. Stay tuned.

Pan-Mass Challenge

Registration to ride in the 28th annual Pan-Massachusetts Challenge can be done through the PMC Web site, pmc.org. Open to just 4,500 cyclists, the PMC will be held Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 4 and 5.

The ride is the nation's original fundraising bike-a-thon and today raises more money than any other athletic fundraising event in the country. This year's goal is to raise $27 million for the Jimmy Fund, which supports cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute. To date, the PMC has raised more than $171 million for the world-renowned cancer research center.

Cyclists can choose from nine routes that pass through 46 Massachusetts cities and towns, over one or two days. Two-day cyclists can ride the original 192-mile Sturbridge to Provincetown route, the180-mile Sturbridge-Bourne-Wellesley route, the 163-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Provincetown route, or the 153-mile Wellesley-Bourne-Wellesley route. One-day cyclists can ride the 111-mile Sturbridge-Bourne route, the 84-mile Wellesley-Bourne route, the 72-mile Sturbridge-Wellesley route, the 68-mile Bourne to Wellesley route, or, new this year, the 50-mile Wellesley to Wellesley route.

Minimum fundraising requirements range from $1,200 to $3,600, depending upon the route chosen. The most popular routes typically fill up within weeks.

The PMC is a family of thousands who return to Massachusetts from around the world, year after year, committed to a common goal: a world without cancer. More than 200 PMC cyclists and volunteers are cancer survivors. Registration is $160, which funds support services, meals, and overnight accommodations, riding jerseys and more.

For more information, or to register, visit www.pmc.org or call 800-WE-CYCLE.

Rec Dept. offers boot camp fitness program

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering a bi-weekly Boot Camp Fitness Training Program, to be instructed by Betsy Callanan.

This unique physical training opportunity meets from 6 to 7 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, starting Tuesday, April 3, on Cohasset Common, in front of Town Hall. The fee for this session is $100, with checks payable to the Town of Cohasset.

You may register at any class at 6 a.m. at Town Hall. The first 10-week session will conclude Thursday, June 7. The second session begins Tuesday, June 12.

Callanan will run an interval calisthenics and running fitness program for men and women of all levels of ability. While running and/or walking remains an essential aspect of this cardiovascular training format, included will be various integrated calisthenics such as jump rope, stairs or hills, squat thrusts, lunges, push-ups, skipping/running knees, sit-ups, etc. Callanan has designed this program to improve cardiovascular endurance and strength.

Please dress in layers as weather conditions dictate, bring a water bottle and jump rope to class, and wear running shoes.

Keep in mind, success in this class is based upon your individual personal best, not as a competition with others.

South Shore Arthritis Walk

The Arthritis Foundation is seeking walkers of all ages to form teams for the sixth annual South Shore Arthritis Walk, the Arthritis Foundation's nationwide walk event that raises awareness and crucial funds to fight arthritis, the nation's number one cause of disability.

The walk will take place Sunday, May 6, at Plimoth Plantation in Plymouth and is open to both teams and individuals. This annual event raises funds for critical arthritis research and for community health programs that help people in Massachusetts live better with arthritis until a cure is found.

To register or for information, contact Terri Fedrow at the Arthritis Foundation at 617-219-8220 or visit www.southshore-arthritiswalk.kintera.org.

Handling Homesickness BEFORE Camp: New Research Shows How Families Can Help

By Bette S. Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

It should be no secret that feeling homesick is normal and that most homesickness is mild. Separation from family, friends and the familiarity of home can cause feelings of longing for home and frequent thoughts of home, otherwise known as homesickness, in people of all ages. But, where homesickness is concerned, an ounce of prevention is worth far more than a pound of cure. Research now proves it's essential for all campers to know what to expect and what to do if and when homesickness hits! The first report of its kind for pediatricians, family doctors, and parents (published in the journal Pediatrics by Christopher A. Thurber, PhD, Edward Walton, MD and the Council on School Health) encourages new thinking: homesickness is a universal but highly preventable and treatable phenomenon. Campers and the adults who love them need to understand how to talk about it before camp, which is one key to prevention. Research proves that what parents and doctors say to kids before they attend camp has the power to lower the intensity of homesick feelings. Results also showed that a combination of educating children and coaching parents in how to cope reduced the intensity of homesickness for first-time campers by as much as 50%.

PLAN TO:

Bring something from home that's a reminder of home, like a family picture, special blanket, pillow, stuffed animal. This can bring you comfort if homesickness hits.

Talk to your counselor about your feelings of homesickness. Keeping homesickness bottled up can make it worse.

Write letters.

Join in on a fun, distracting activity to take your mind off homesickness.

Pack your positive attitude. Think back to all the things you've looked forward to doing. Read the list of camp activities you are looking forward to. Think about the good side of things (activities, friends) to feel better.

Think about loved ones and remember what they would say to help. Before you leave home write down supportive comments from people in your family. Reading these comments can help you quite a bit.

DON'T:

Rely on a pick up plan to be used if the camper doesn't adjust to camp. These deals set the camper up to fail since it's assumed that the adjustment won't happen. Pick up deals also undermine the child's sense that their parents have confidence in them to be independent and resilient.

Do something bad at camp in order to be sent home.

Try to escape. Such problem solving strategies won't work. Talk honestly about homesick feelings.

Hold your homesick feelings inside.

Give up. There are counselors who will help with your feelings of homesickness.

The annual event helps raise money to offset the cost of the prom and other senior events.

San Francisco, here I come!

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

It's official! I know what I'm doing next year. I'll be heading west to the University of San Francisco pursuing an English major. And if all goes according to plan someday I'll have a (successful?) career in writing. I'm getting ahead of myself. On St. Patrick's Day, I'll be seeing the Dropkick Murphys at the Garden courtesy of Mom & Dad. In the very near future however, I have school and work to worry about. By the way, in the future, the deli will be adding pub style pizzas and delicious fried dough to the menu. Now you won't have to wait for Strawberry Fest to get your fix!

Here's what's going on at CHS this week.

- Tuesday after school a joint faculty meeting was held in the library.
- The School council met Wednesday after school.
- The PSO Telethon Rehearsal was Wednesday night.
- Wednesday night the Athletic Council met in the library.
- Mid-term progress reports went home Thursday. Hopefully you got to the mail before your family did. Parents, please don't go overboard if you punish your children for a mid-term report. They have the whole second half of the semester to improve. But when the final grades come in, I'm washing my hands. If you haven't got your act together by then you've made your bed.
- Thursday morning the PSO President's Council met.
- Thursday a Train Safety activity was held during the school day. I'm afraid trainsurfing is out of the question, guys.
- Department Heads met after school on Thursday. Where there bodies were; nobody knows.
- Tonight is Mr. Skipper! Come support the potential winners of this male beauty pageant and raise money for the Senior class of CHS! If you want a taste of what I'll be doing for my talent, find the new Snickers jingle on Youtube. If I don't see you tonight, we'll have another chat — same time next week.

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

ATTEND OUR FREE WORKSHOP

Call our office at 800-964-4295 to reserve seating for this important workshop. During this call we will inform you of the exact location of the workshop. At this workshop you will learn the details about your trust that perhaps your attorney never explained. We'll explain the new laws that directly affect your estate planning documents, and how to take steps to correct these problems. All those in attendance will receive a 19-point checklist for a "self analysis" of their estate planning documents. As a bonus, if you bring this advertisement to the workshop you will receive a FREE REPORT on the new (February 2006) Medicaid Laws. You will discover how to protect your home and assets from increasing medical and nursing home costs, taxes, and the costs and time delays of probate.

RECEIVE $1,000

The first attendee who submits a disposable, non-returnable, copy of their estate planning documents that do not have any of the problems addressed in this article will receive $1,000! Bring your documents to the workshop for a complimentary 19 point written analysis.

YOU CANNOT STOP THE WORLD FROM CHANGING...BUT YOU CAN USE NEW TECHNIQUES TO PROTECT YOU AND YOUR LOVED ONES.

Don't wait until you actually have a problem before you deal with it. By waiting until the problem happens you typically can only minimize the damage, rather than prevent it. Let's prevent it! By attending this FREE workshop you will receive a 19-point review of your existing trust, or a review of your estate planning goals and help creating a personalized plan. We will tell you the areas of vulnerability your estate has and how to protect your assets.

- Clients of Dennis Sullivan & Associates do not qualify, as many of their trusts address each of these issues.
- Any Attorneys and/or Financial Advisors in attendance will be charged a fee of $1,000.

High school to host 'Eat Your Art' exhibit

spam, cake, frosting, fruits and vegetables have starred in some of the artworks as well. "We've seen spaghetti used for hair and the combination of all sort of interesting ingredients," says Berkowitz.

Sam Burgoon and Alex Laas, both juniors at the high school have already started working on their entry. The bulk of the piece will be a dress "woven" from fruit roll-up. The dress is being created on a mannequin and will also feature life-like "skin" made from frosting.

"Right now my whole room smells like frosting," Burgoon said. This isn't her first entry into the Eat Your Art exhibit. Last year, she and her friends created a giant three-square-foot cube of Rice Krispies' treat. Five bags of Rice Krispies cereal and 10 bags of marshmallows were used to construct the "masterpiece."

A first time entrant in the adult category, teacher Jonathan Nutting, is still brainstorming for his creation. Ideas include a tribute to the late James Brown, the Boston skyline, but he thinks he's settled on something from the Wizard of Oz. He and roommates plan to "walk around the supermarket" this weekend to get the materials for their collaborative entry.

The registration form contains a disclaimer where participants can indicate whether their art is truly "edible" based on the way the ingredients were handled and if the combination of materials would be pleasing to the palate. A list of ingredients is necessary for each entry.

"We've seen spaghetti used for hair and the combination of all sort of interesting ingredients."
— Nina Berkowitz, art teacher

The difficult task of judging the edible masterpieces belongs to three middle/high school teachers: David Ames, a high school science teacher, Cynthia Gordon, a middle school social studies teacher and Bryan Marks, a music teacher.

There will be two categories of judging, original artwork or reproduction of artwork (this included copying famous people/icons). There will be four age brackets (grades K-4, 5-8, 9-12 and adult). Prizes will be given to winners in both categories for each age group. Prizes are donated gift certificates from local businesses. The event is a fundraiser for the Cohasset Arts Boosters and all proceeds will go toward a general fund that supports the drama, art and music programs in the middle and high schools. The Boosters were able to turn last year's event proceeds driven from the $2 entrance fee into a digital printer for the art department, according to Chairman Elaine Breslow.

"This event is really colorful and fun. And kids and adults are only limited by their imagination," says Breslow, "It's a unique and different approach to art and fundraising."

Artists, chefs and everyone in between are encouraged to bring their creations to the middle/high school on March 14. No pre-registration is necessary and there is no registration fee. The event begins at 6p.m in the Cohasset High School. Entrants can register up until the event and are responsible for the set-up of their artwork for viewing. Admission to the party for all non-entrants is $2.

For questions or to register, contact Nina Berkowitz by email nberkowitz@cohassetk12.org or at 781-383-6100 ext. 264.

Dueling divas ring in new dynasty

As dueling divas Krystle and Alexis on ABC-TV's "Dynasty," Linda Evans and Joan Collins helped take the 1980s primetime soap to the top of the Nielsens with a campy combination of catfights and couture. Almost 20 years since they last sparred over John Forsythe's Blake Carrington on the small screen, the actresses have taken to the stage as fading and feuding movie stars in the comedy "Legends!" which is at Boston's Shubert Theatre, on national tour, through Sunday.

According to Evans, who is making her stage debut, the reunion would never have become a reality were it not for her friend Nolan Miller, who created the shoulder-padded "Dynasty" designs that Evans and Collins turned into a mainstream fashion trend a quarter century ago.

"I certainly wasn't looking for a stage vehicle. Not at all — in fact, I was determined not to do it. Back as far as junior high, I wouldn't even get up to give a book report in school," explained Evans recently by telephone from Chicago. "Everything I had done in my career until now had been on film. My agent knew not to even send me offers for stage work. Nolan Miller asked me to read 'Legends!' as a favor for his friend, John Bowab, who was preparing to direct the play with Joan Collins. The first time I read the script, I laughed so hard I couldn't put it down, and I couldn't say no to doing it."

Written by the late James Kirkwood — a Tony winner for the book for "A Chorus Line" – "Legends!" first toured 20 years ago, ostensibly on its way to Broadway where it never did arrive, with real-life theater legends Mary Martin and Carol Channing in the leads. That production also played Boston's Shubert Theatre, just one stop on a road so rocky that Kirkwood later penned a dishy tell-all entitled "Diary of a Mad Playwright" about the trouble-plagued tour.

Audiences may have looked away from "Legends!" the first time around, but Evans believes they'll like what they see in this new production.

"What's great about this is that it really works for us. We have this built-in nine-year television history as rivals who loathed each other so audiences have no trouble thinking of us as movie stars who don't get along. It is an actor's dream, really. The image is already established. My character, Leatrice Monsee, always played nuns, nurses and saints, while Joan's character, Sylvia Glenn, played hookers, bad girls and prostitutes. Joan and I know how to play these roles."

There is nothing else quite like the intimacy - the dance, if you will - between the actor and the audience. It is a wonderful feeling."
Actress, Linda Evans

And their new characters may even bare their claws and engage in the kind of catfight that made "Dynasty" a hit.

"I can't say too much, because it might give away the story, but we definitely have a fight. Our characters hate each other, so what's wonderful is that they have to get together because they both need the work. One of my lines is, 'Would you please be so kind as to tell me why you took my husband?' We really go after each other. It is terrific stuff to play."

But are Evans and the 73-year-old Collins just acting?

"I couldn't do this show for all these months with someone I didn't get along with," says Evans.

While the Golden Globe winner and Emmy nominee has played similar characters before, acting on stage has taken some getting used to for the 64-year-old, who was signed to a contract with MGM Studios not long after graduating from Hollywood High School.

"It was a shocker at first to do something for two hours at a time, eight shows a week. I had never worked this way before. Everything previously had involved just short takes. I feel like I am only now just starting to understand the process, because the adjustment of moving from film and television to theater has not been easy. I have, however, developed an enormous sense of respect for theater actors," says Evans, who got her first big break when she was cast as Barbara Stanwyck's daughter, Audra Barkley, in the ABC-TV western "The Big Valley," which ran from 1965 to 1969.

"I learned so much from Barbara Stanwyck. She taught me to do my best always, because ultimately you can only do what you can do. Barbara was not a diva. She was a true professional who was very much respected by everyone with whom she worked. It was Barbara Stanwyck who showed me that I am no different from anyone else on the crew."

It was while working with Stanwyck that Evans first met Miller, who is the costumer on her current assignment.

"Nolan Miller designed our clothes on 'The Big Valley,' where he actually hid my shoulders. I love Nolan Miller and I love Nolan Miller's clothes. He has done some really beautiful things for 'Legends!' There is one outfit that, even though I have worn it on stage over 150 times, I would still like to take home with me."

While Evans clearly likes being able to don Miller's costumes once again, she is also enjoying the entirely new experience of working in live theater.

"The audience has been the biggest surprise for me. I've been very pleased by the warmth of their response. They really have an impact on us as actors. There is nothing else quite like the intimacy — the dance, if you will — between the actor and the audience. It is a wonderful feeling."

"Legends!" will be at the Citi Shubert Theatre, 265 Tremont S., through March 11. For tickets and information, call 1-800-447-7400 or visit citicenter.org

Movie review

A chilling sign of the times

Zodiac (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Reporter Paul Avery (Robert Downey Jr.) and cartoonist Robert Graysmith (Jake Gyllenhaal) perk up when they hear of new clues about the Zodiac killer.

The first, flat-out great film of 2007, David Fincher's spine-tingling "Zodiac," is a 158-minute, decades-spanning movie about one of America's most notorious serial killers. This is the "GoodFellas" of psycho-killer thrillers.

In many ways, it is also Fincher's 1995 breakthrough effort "Se7en" stripped of its exploitation trappings, creepy credit sequence and twist ending and transformed into a great American crime epic.

The story begins July 4, 1969, in Vallejo, Calif. On the evocative, Scorsese-like, period soundtrack, we hear Three Dog Night's lament "Easy to Be Hard." Darlene Ferrin (Ciara Hughes), a pretty young woman, picks up teenage Michael Mageau (Lee Norris) in her car and takes him to a lover's lane. As they talk, another car, one the woman appears to recognize, pulls up behind them, leaves and then returns. The graphic horror of what happens next needs no adornment and will leave you shaken.

The killer, who is played by four actors and whose musical theme is again, very appropriately, Donovan's haunting and incantatory "Hurdy Gurdy Man," taunts and mesmerizes the public by sending bizarre coded missives to Bay Area newspapers.

The writer of these chilling, cryptic letters claims to be collecting souls to serve as his slaves in the afterlife.

Dissipated San Francisco Chronicle columnist Paul Avery (Robert Downey Jr.) begins a public correspondence with the killer. Cartoonist Robert Graysmith (Jake Gyllenhaal), whose exhaustive nonfiction books are the basis of the film's script, becomes similarly obsessed and jeopardizes his marriage.

San Francisco Inspector Dave Toschi (Mark Ruffalo), the real-life inspiration for Steve McQueen's iconic San Francisco cop Bullitt, and partner Bill Armstrong (Anthony Edwards) are assigned to the case, which is going to change their lives forever.

A remarkably accomplished, measured and mature procedural, "Zodiac" is to "Se7en" what the real-life case is to "Dirty Harry," Don Siegel's great, lurid 1971 classic, featuring a Zodiac-like killer played by Andy Robinson.

Films hover weirdly over "Zodiac." Toschi and Graysmith actually see "Dirty Harry" with their wives at the same theater on the same night. The killer may be a fan of "The Most Dangerous Game," a 1932 genre film about a hunter who stalks humans for sport. Some believe the Zodiac also wrote letters labeling "The Exorcist" "a comedy" and excoriating "Badlands," (what a concept, a psycho-killer film critic).

But movies and "real life" are different, as a scene in which the killer attacks a man and a woman with a knife horribly demonstrates. Another scene in which Graysmith finds himself alone in a basement with a strange man is simply terrifying.

Heading a great ensemble cast, Ruffalo projects both determination and frustration. Gyllenhaal's Graysmith is another Donnie Darko, an innocent fascinated and bewitched by depravity. As celebrity attorney Melvin Belli, Brian Cox is a hoot. John Carroll Lynch is scary as the dead-eyed prime suspect.

Fans of "Se7en" and "Fight Club" may be befuddled by this somber, ambiguous work. "Zodiac" unfolds in a creepy, real retro-world, where jurisdictional anomalies and bad record-keeping make life miserable for the good guys. The film is a tale set in an Analog Age when crime detection is the stuff of shoe leather, ink, paper and pastel-blue, rotary dial phones.

The truth is out there, all right, and it will kill you.

Rated R. "Zodiac" contains profanity, sexual situations and extreme violence.

Nick Pedro (right) is hugged by a fellow contestant after being eliminated from American Idol on Thursday, March 1.

Nickie comes back from Hollywood

By Rebecca Hyman
RHYMAN@CNC.COM

TAUNTON – He had a bad day.

Nick Pedro's "American Idol" journey came to an abrupt end last week when host Ryan Seacrest informed him he was going home.

"Give a round of applause, ladies and gentlemen. Such a terrific guy," Seacrest said.

Pedro, 25, the Silver City crooner who has been making his hometown proud since he landed a slot as a contestant on the blockbuster singing competition, took the news with characteristic graciousness and a gentlemanly smile.

Pedro, one of the top-20 finalists, sang "Fever" in the men's performance round on Tuesday, Feb. 27, when all the contestants were asked to dedicate a song to someone in their lives.

He dedicated "Fever" to his girlfriend.

"I was actually apart from her on Valentine's Day, which is something she was very understanding about. That means a lot to me. This will be the ultimate Valentine, singing her a song in front of 30 million people. How many people can say they got a Valentine like that? Hopefully, it's something special because she means a lot to me," he said before he sang.

The judges greeted his performance warmly but not enthusiastically. They complimented his voice, but judge Paula Abdul said she'd like to see him have more fun on stage, and judge Simon Cowell said he was worried Pedro lacked charisma.

After the results were revealed on Thursday, March 1, Seacrest asked the judges what went wrong for Pedro.

"You've got a good voice, man. All of you should pat yourselves on the back for making it this far. Out of over 100,000 people, you're standing on that stage in the top 20. That is big, so keep on keeping on," judge Randy Jackson said.

Jackson told Pedro: "Keep that whole Sinatra vibe going on."

Cowell, who has notoriously high standards, said: "You're not a bad singer actually. It's about standing out in the crowd."

Then Seacrest handed Pedro the microphone to sing "Fever" again, his final performance on the program.

Pedro rose to the occasion, singing with emotion and composure. As he sang, he walked over to his fellow contestants and high-fived each one. Abdul stood as he sang.

The last line of the song seemed to resonate with the audience and capture the mood: "What a lovely way to burn."

"Thank you everybody. Thank you so much. God bless. Thank you," Pedro said after he finished singing. His fellow contestants surrounded him on stage in a show of support.

This was Pedro's second go-round on "American Idol." Last season, he made it to Hollywood but bowed out when he forgot the words to "Build Me Up Buttercup" in the group round. This season, he sailed through group and made it weeks further into the competition, surviving several elimination rounds.

Abdul, a Pedro fan from the start, gave him words of encouragement: "Last year you opted out when you made it to Hollywood. I'm so glad and everyone's so glad that you opted in this season."

Thursday's episode featured a tribute to the four contestants eliminated that night with a clip of Pedro from earlier in the competition saying he returned this season to redeem himself.

"No matter how far I get, I'm proud of what I've already done," he said.

All reviews by James Verniere, unless otherwise noted

Agent Burroughs (Laura Linney) and FBI trainee Eric O'Neill (Ryan Phillippe) pull off a secret late-night meeting in "Breach."

New Releases

"AVENUE MONTAIGNE" (B+)

In the slight but appealing French comedy "Avenue Montaigne," waif-like Cecile de France ("The Russian Dolls") plays Jessica, a starry-eyed young woman who shares a love of soap operas with her beloved grandmere and takes a waitressing job at the show-biz hangout Le Cafe des Theatres. Soon, Jessica is meeting the swells and shuttling between le cafe and le theatre with trays loaded with food and drink. She befriends a stormy-browed pianist (Albert Dupontel), whose beautiful wife-manager (Laura Morante) disapproves of his plan to play only for the poor and infirm. If "Avenue Montaigne," which was co-written by director Daniele Thompson ("Jet Lag") and actor-son Christopher, sounds a bit like a French soap opera and a bit insider-y, it is. That may also describe the state of the French film industry. (PG-13)

"FULL OF IT" (C-)

Molly Ringwald, where are you? It takes such a film as "Full of It," a story about a geek who yearns to hang out with the popular crowd, to feel nostalgic for the good old days. Sam (Ryan Pinkston), a squeaky-clean transfer student, loves math and thinks his parents are swell. On his first day, this born loser befriends bookworm Annie (Kate Mara), is bullied by a tough jock and makes goo-goo eyes at his hot teacher (Teri Polo) and the class floozy, Vicki (Amanda Walsh). Feeling rejected, he checks in with his bitter guidance counselor (Craig Kilborn), who advises him that the key to making friends is lying. He tries it, and it magically seems to work. Overcome with his newfound skills, Sam becomes a varsity basketball stud, brushes off Annie and gets it on with some hot girls. — Chelsea Bain

ONGOING

"BREACH" (B-)

Anyone in the mood for "The Devil Wears Brooks Brothers"? How about for a bleak political fable about a deeply religious, high-ranking government official so delusional he thinks he knows more than anyone else? He's actually betraying his country and responsible for the deaths of others. "Breach" boasts a darkly tormented turn by Chris Cooper as Robert Hanssen, the real-life veteran FBI agent who specialized in computer technology and security and caused the greatest intelligence breach in U.S. history. (Rated PG-13)

"BECAUSE I SAID SO" (B)

This film has a secret weapon — not Jane Fonda, but Diane Keaton, one of our most accomplished comic actors, an artist so adept she can turn much of this film's leaden screenplay into gold. Daphne Wilder (Keaton) is a baker and a meddling, single mother of three grownup daughters. Milly (Mandy Moore), the youngest, is a sad-sack singleton who has terrible luck with men. Daphne decides to use the Internet to meet and "audition" prospective mates for her daughter. She finally finds architect Jason (Tom Everett Scott) and the unattached Johnny (Stephen Collins). You know where this is going, but Keaton makes it all bearable and even fun. (Rated PG-13)

'Old' Town Hall fix up possible

'Holistic' approach to overhaul backed

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The old Town Hall could become new again in the near future. On Wednesday night, the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) reviewed David Farrag's application for funds to hire a historic restoration architectural firm to advise the Town on how to best repair the "old" part of Town Hall. The old part of town hall includes the auditorium and some second floor offices. The CPC recommended a $35,000 allocation for the architectural services; the amount will not cover any of the actual work that needs to be done. Town Meeting will have the final say on how CPC money is spent.

"We want to look at the whole town hall holistically, not look at things one by one."
— David Farrag

Farrag applied for the funds as a private, concerned citizen and was joined in his presentation by Susan Jaffe, President of the Cohasset Dramatic Club.

"We want to look at the whole town hall holistically, not look at things one by one," Farrag said. Last year the CPC allocated money to repair the exterior front doors but none of the other problems have been addressed. "We want an architect to look at the whole thing, not just the theatre and not just the business part."

His request is the first step that could become a large overhaul of the Town Hall's old portion. He handed out a one-page listing of items that are currently in disrepair. Major items include window replacement, floor refinishing, new lighting, updated heating and painting. An architect will be able to advise on how to proceed with the restoration, balancing the needs to the community and users with historical accuracy.

Jaffe was present to attest to the needed repairs, as the Cohasset Dramatic Club is the primary user of the auditorium. The organization dates back to 1921. The group currently puts on two performances a year, a comedy or drama in the fall and a musical in the spring. The club is also runs Cohasset

Late train stalled

MBTA proposal gets little support

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Anyone who knows the Gladys Knight tune "Midnight Train to Georgia" won't be substituting the words "Midnight Train to Cohasset" anytime soon.

Judging from discussion at Monday's Selectmen's meeting any hope for a "late" Greenbush train — sometime after 10 p.m. — has been derailed.

As it turns out, other towns along the line did not warm up to the idea, Town Manager Willam Griffin said.

The issue is an interesting one because the Greenbush trains are expected to roll by later summer. The line was abandoned in 1959 when the Southeast Expressway was built. However, over the decades the highway has become increasingly gridlocked and the need for public transit has come to the forefront.

The issue of a late train has surfaced quite literally at the 11th hour and before town officials along the Greenbush corridor could weigh the effect of regular service on their towns and neighborhoods.

Greenbush liaison Mark Brennan went over the recent "late train" survey that he and fellow liaison Tom Gruber conducted through their weekly column "Making Tracks" in the Cohasset Mariner. While a majority of respondents favored a late train by a ratio of 2 to 1– Brennan noted the survey, which received 108 responses, was not intended to be scientific. He said, while in the minority, those who are opposed, feel very strong about it.

"If we had an applause meter – the folks who are against the late train are vehemently against it," he said.

However, some respondents suggested Selectmen conduct a public hearing on the proposal.

Under the current proposed schedule, the last Greenbush train would arrive in Cohasset at about 10:50 p.m., Brennan said.

Cohasset Triathlon is picking up speed

First Annual Event set for July 8th

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Although still about four months away, the first annual Cohasset Triathlon's planning and registration are in full swing. A triathlon includes three legs - a swim, a bike and a run. Incorporating Cohasset's scenic and historic aspects, this three-leg - swim, bike, run - event will donate all net proceeds to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

At press time, Race Director Bill Burnett of Linden Drive, reported that registrations totaled 304 athletes. They are more than halfway to their goal and limit of 500 participants. The athletes will be young and old, ages 11 to 65 years old, with both the youngest and oldest participants hailing from Cohasset. The event will involve athletes from far and wide including California, Illinois, New York, New Jersey, Florida but 20 percent of the current registrants are from Cohasset.

Burnett has put together an enthusiastic team to assist him with the race day coordination. Each piece of the race involves a great amount of logistics, and needs a volunteer force. Swim Coordinator Deb Thomas, Bike Coordinator Scott Bates, Run Coordinator Joe Carrabes, Finish Line Coordinator Bill Good and Registration Coordinator Bill Burnett Sr. will help to manage the event.

There is plenty more opportunity to get involved; volunteers are needed for support at registration, in the transition area, on the course and at the finish line.

POLICE/FIRE BEAT

Spate of calls reporting erratic drivers

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police say the public is their eyes and ears. Therefore, they appreciate when people call to report that a vehicle is being driving erratically — even if the report turns out to be a false alarm.

Often the caller provides a plate number and description of the vehicle. The report gives police the opportunity to locate the vehicle and determine if the driver was having a medical problem, such as a diabetic reaction or heart attack; was driving under the influence of alcohol; or just became distracted for a few seconds, Chief James Hussey said.

"We encourage people to call us," he said.

Hussey said police will make an evaluation and make sure the person is OK; if he or she is determined to be OK then police will let the operator know that someone called about his or her driving and they are following up on that report.

This past week, there were five reports of erratic drivers in the police log. In one case, an elderly gentleman was driving the car, Hussey said. It turned out that he was fine; police talked to him, explaining he may have crossed the centerline and urged him to be careful. They observed him drive away and he appeared to be OK, he said.

In another incident, a caller reported a sedan being driven erratically southbound on Route 3A. The caller also reported to have seen the operator drinking. As it turned out the driver had been drinking a can of Pepsi. He was given a field sobriety test, which he passed. Police called the caller to explain that there had been follow-up.

Another caller complained about a car swerving all over the road. Police found the vehicle at Mobil Mart and talked to the operator, who said he lived right up the street and had just shot down to the store. Police explained that the plate had been called in because the caller witnessed the vehicle swerving. The operator seemed to be fine, police said.

Police turned another incident over to Scituate after a call about a car that was following too closely and flashing its high beams that was heading into that town. "We did have a plate number and Scituate is making contact with the registered owner," he said. Hussey said Cohasset made a record of the incident.

"We encourage people to call us."
— Police Chief James Hussey

Door cracked

Cohasset police are investigating reports of a damaged door at Cohasset Food Mart. An employee called dispatch at 5:41 a.m. Tuesday (March 6) saying the bottom half of the glass door was cracked. Police Chief James Hussey said there was nothing at the scene, such as a rock, that could have caused the damage and there did not appear to be any other attempt to gain access to the convenience store on King Street. "Everything was secure and undamaged so we are not sure if it was an attempted break-in or an act of vandalism."

Goats let out

A recent walk-in to the police station at 11:24 a.m. on Tuesday (March 6) asked for more police patrols from 9-11 p.m. at night. The individual reported that someone had been opening his gate and letting his goats run free. Chief Hussey said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy is following up with the goat owner. Hussey said Murphy explained that goats can be very smart and if they know there is food outside, they could open a gate and get out. Hussey said, however, if it turns out that is not the case, then police would put on extra patrols to see if they can find who is responsible for letting the animals out.

Mirrors damaged

Cohasset police detectives are following up on a report from an employee at Shaw's Plaza that the mirrors to his motor vehicle were smashed sometime over night Tuesday (March 6) into Wednesday morning. The detectives will investigate whether there is a potential motive for the breakage, Chief Hussey said.

Window smashed

On Saturday (March 10) at about 8:42 a.m., an Aaron River Road resident reported that the rear window of her car was smashed overnight. A teen at the home had been driving the car the night before but had no knowledge of any damage to the window. Apparently, the family discovered the broken window the next morning. Chief Hussey said there was no rock or other implement in or near the car. Detectives are looking into the matter, he said.

Pump attached

At 2:39 p.m., Tuesday (March 6) a motorist drove off from Leo's Exxon with the nozzle still in the gas tank. There was no gas leak; the nozzle just snapped off, police said. The reporting officer said the party returned and everything turned out OK.

Juvenile arrest

A second juvenile has been arrested in connection with the theft of a stepladder that was allegedly used to climb the water tank several months ago. Teens climbed the water tower and this arrest was the result of an investigation, police said. Juveniles are under 17 years of age and therefore, police do not release their names. The youth is also being charged with trespassing.

Illegal dumping

Last Friday (March 9) at 12:08 p.m., a caller reported that a village business had illegally dumped trash into the dumpster at the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street. The owner of the offending business was contacted to respond. Chief Hussey said police will purse the criminal charge of illegal dumping if the owner requests them to. He said in first-time situations, police usually give the party a warning.

Uninsured MV

Police had a motor vehicle towed and summonsed the operator to court when it was determined that the car being driven was uninsured. Chief Hussey said an officer stopped the car for speeding last Saturday (March 10) at 9:46 a.m. at lower King Street and CJC Highway (3A). The officer used the new mobile data terminal (MDT) to run the vehicle registration, which came back that it had been revoked due to lack of insurance. He explained that even though a plate may have a current sticker — an officer will always run the plate at a traffic stop to get the latest information.

"In cases like this the officer has no discretion," Hussey said. "An officer cannot allow an uninsured motor vehicle to be driven." The operator is being summonsed to face a charge of driving an uninsured motor vehicle.

MV crash

One car was towed following a two-car accident last Saturday (March 10) at 4:13 p.m. at Beechwood Street and Hillside Drive. A 2004 Honda Civic was exiting Hillside Drive and attempted to make a left onto Beechwood when a 1989 Jeep Cherokee traveling south on Beechwood hit it. Police said the operator of the Honda was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. The Honda had to be towed; no one was injured, police said.

Uprooted tree

An uprooted tree was resting on some wires and blocking Fox Run on Tuesday (March 6). The call came into dispatch at about 5:20 a.m. Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the tree was uprooted due to the wind and was hanging on the wires. He said the fire department stood by until National Grid and the DPW were on the scene.

Silvia said National Grid took care of the wires and the DPW removed the tree. The road was completely blocked for a time.

"The wires can present a dangerous situation so we stand by until National Grid is on the scene and can take care of it," he said.

Crocker pleads guilty to yacht club theft

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Davenport B. "Dave" Crocker, Sr., 70, of Cohasset, has been placed on three years probation for stealing more than $300,000 from the Cohasset Yacht Club, where he served as treasurer for many years.

Crocker pled guilty to one count of larceny over $250 in Norfolk Superior Court last Friday (March 9). He had pled not guilty at his arraignment in January.

Crocker, who has paid back $203,314, must make full restitution to yacht club on a schedule to be determined by the probation department. He still owes $108,686.

Yacht club officials discovered the alleged theft of about $427,000 in late 2005 and subsequently sent a letter out to the 245 members of the 111-year-old facility. However, the District Attorney's office, which researched back as far as the statute of limitations allows, came up with $312,000, said David Traub, spokesman for District Attorney William Keating's Office.

The yacht club agreed not to prosecute Crocker if he would repay the money. However, Cohasset police launched a criminal investigation.

On Dec. 7 a Grand Jury indicted Crocker on one count of larceny over $250 by scheme on diverse dates during that time period. "By scheme" usually means the crime took place over a period of time.

Crocker, who is not a CPA, did not return a message left on his answering machine Tuesday at his Hingham office on Station Street.

According to the yacht club letter sent last year, Crocker repaid $200,000 and agreed to pay an additional $260,000 within 18 months. Commodore F. Wisner Murray stated in the letter sent to the membership that the $260,000 was secured by a second mortgage on Crocker's condominium in Florida.

At last Friday's hearing, Judge Judith Fabricant ordered Crocker to stay away from the yacht club.

In another case, Crocker has repaid the $42,100 he stole from the Hingham-Hull Rotary Club where he served as the club's treasurer; a theft that also came to light in 2005. He was arraigned on the larceny charge on April 14, 2006. The case was continued without a finding for six months following a May 18, 2006 hearing at which the District Attorney's Office reported that Crocker had repaid the Rotary Club in full. On Nov. 17, 2006, the case was dismissed with the condition that Crocker pay court fees that included a $90 victim witness fee and $21 monthly probation fee.

POLICE/FIRE BEAT

Spate of calls reporting erratic drivers

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police say the public is their eyes and ears. Therefore, they appreciate when people call to report that a vehicle is being driving erratically — even if the report turns out to be a false alarm.

Often the caller provides a plate number and description of the vehicle. The report gives police the opportunity to locate the vehicle and determine if the driver was having a medical problem, such as a diabetic reaction or heart attack; was driving under the influence of alcohol; or just became distracted for a few seconds, Chief James Hussey said.

"We encourage people to call us," he said.

Hussey said police will make an evaluation and make sure the person is OK; if he or she is determined to be OK then police will let the operator know that someone called about his or her driving and they are following up on that report.

This past week, there were five reports of erratic drivers in the police log. In one case, an elderly gentleman was driving the car, Hussey said. It turned out that he was fine; police talked to him, explaining he may have crossed the centerline and urged him to be careful. They observed him drive away and he appeared to be OK, he said.

In another incident, a caller reported a sedan being driven erratically southbound on Route 3A. The caller also reported to have seen the operator drinking. As it turned out the driver had been drinking a can of Pepsi. He was given a field sobriety test, which he passed. Police called the caller to explain that there had been follow-up.

Another caller complained about a car swerving all over the road. Police found the vehicle at Mobil Mart and talked to the operator, who said he lived right up the street and had just shot down to the store. Police explained that the plate had been called in because the caller witnessed the vehicle swerving. The operator seemed to be fine, police said.

Police turned another incident over to Scituate after a call about a car that was following too closely and flashing its high beams that was heading into that town. "We did have a plate number and Scituate is making contact with the registered owner," he said. Hussey said Cohasset made a record of the incident.

"We encourage people to call us."

Door cracked

Cohasset police are investigating reports of a damaged door at Cohasset Food Mart. An employee called dispatch at 5:41 a.m. Tuesday (March 6) saying the bottom half of the glass door was cracked. Police Chief James Hussey said there was nothing at the scene, such as a rock, that could have caused the damage and there did not appear to be any other attempt to gain access to the convenience store on King Street. "Everything was secure and undamaged so we are not sure if it was an attempted break-in or an act of vandalism."

Goats let out

A recent walk-in to the police station at 11:24 a.m. on Tuesday (March 6) asked for more police patrols from 9-11 p.m. at night. The individual reported that someone had been opening his gate and letting his goats run free. Chief Hussey said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy is following up with the goat owner. Hussey said Murphy explained that goats can be very smart and if they know there is food outside, they could open a gate and get out. Hussey said, however, if it turns out that is not the case, then police would put on extra patrols to see if they can find who is responsible for letting the animals out.

Mirrors damaged

Cohasset police detectives are following up on a report from an employee at Shaw's Plaza that the mirrors to his motor vehicle were smashed sometime over night Tuesday (March 6) into Wednesday morning. The detectives will investigate whether there is a potential motive for the breakage, Chief Hussey said.

Window smashed

On Saturday (March 10) at about 8:42 a.m., an Aaron River Road resident reported that the rear window of her car was smashed overnight. A teen at the home had been driving the car the night before but had no knowledge of any damage to the window. Apparently, the family discovered the broken window the next morning. Chief Hussey said there was no rock or other implement in or near the car. Detectives are looking into the matter, he said.

Pump attached

At 2:39 p.m., Tuesday (March 6) a motorist drove off from Leo's Exxon with the nozzle still in the gas tank. There was no gas leak; the nozzle just snapped off, police said. The reporting officer said the party returned and everything turned out OK.

Juvenile arrest

A second juvenile has been arrested in connection with the theft of a stepladder that was allegedly used to climb the water tank several months ago. Teens climbed the water tower and this arrest was the result of an investigation, police said. Juveniles are under 17 years of age and therefore, police do not release their names. The youth is also being charged with trespassing.

Illegal dumping

Last Friday (March 9) at 12:08 p.m., a caller reported that a village business had illegally dumped trash into the dumpster at the Harborview Apartments off Elm Street. The owner of the offending business was contacted to respond. Chief Hussey said police will purse the criminal charge of illegal dumping if the owner requests them to. He said in first-time situations, police usually give the party a warning.

Uninsured MV

Police had a motor vehicle towed and summonsed the operator to court when it was determined that the car being driven was uninsured. Chief Hussey said an officer stopped the car for speeding last Saturday (March 10) at 9:46 a.m. at lower King Street and CJC Highway (3A). The officer used the new mobile data terminal (MDT) to run the vehicle registration, which came back that it had been revoked due to lack of insurance. He explained that even though a plate may have a current sticker — an officer will always run the plate at a traffic stop to get the latest information.

"In cases like this the officer has no discretion," Hussey said. "An officer cannot allow an uninsured motor vehicle to be driven." The operator is being summonsed to face a charge of driving an uninsured motor vehicle.

MV crash

One car was towed following a two-car accident last Saturday (March 10) at 4:13 p.m. at Beechwood Street and Hillside Drive. A 2004 Honda Civic was exiting Hillside Drive and attempted to make a left onto Beechwood when a 1989 Jeep Cherokee traveling south on Beechwood hit it. Police said the operator of the Honda was cited for failure to yield to oncoming traffic. The Honda had to be towed; no one was injured, police said.

Uprooted tree

An uprooted tree was resting on some wires and blocking Fox Run on Tuesday (March 6). The call came into dispatch at about 5:20 a.m. Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the tree was uprooted due to the wind and was hanging on the wires. He said the fire department stood by until National Grid and the DPW were on the scene.

Silvia said National Grid took care of the wires and the DPW removed the tree. The road was completely blocked for a time.

"The wires can present a dangerous situation so we stand by until National Grid is on the scene and can take care of it," he said.

Crocker pleads guilty to yacht club theft

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Davenport B. "Dave" Crocker, Sr., 70, of Cohasset, has been placed on three years probation for stealing more than $300,000 from the Cohasset Yacht Club, where he served as treasurer for many years.

Crocker pled guilty to one count of larceny over $250 in Norfolk Superior Court last Friday (March 9). He had pled not guilty at his arraignment in January.

Crocker, who has paid back $203,314, must make full restitution to yacht club on a schedule to be determined by the probation department. He still owes $108,686.

Yacht club officials discovered the alleged theft of about $427,000 in late 2005 and subsequently sent a letter out to the 245 members of the 111-year-old facility. However, the District Attorney's office, which researched back as far as the statute of limitations allows, came up with $312,000, said David Traub, spokesman for District Attorney William Keating's Office.

The yacht club agreed not to prosecute Crocker if he would repay the money. However, Cohasset police launched a criminal investigation.

On Dec. 7 a Grand Jury indicted Crocker on one count of larceny over $250 by scheme on diverse dates during that time period. "By scheme" usually means the crime took place over a period of time.

According to the yacht club letter sent last year, Crocker repaid $200,000 and agreed to pay an additional $260,000 within 18 months. Commodore F. Wisner Murray stated in the letter sent to the membership that the $260,000 was secured by a second mortgage on Crocker's condominium in Florida.

At last Friday's hearing, Judge Judith Fabricant ordered Crocker to stay away from the yacht club.

In another case, Crocker has repaid the $42,100 he stole from the Hingham-Hull Rotary Club where he served as the club's treasurer; a theft that also came to light in 2005. He was arraigned on the larceny charge on April 14, 2006. The case was continued without a finding for six months following a May 18, 2006 hearing at which the District Attorney's Office reported that Crocker had repaid the Rotary Club in full. On Nov. 17, 2006, the case was dismissed with the condition that Crocker pay court fees that included a $90 victim witness fee and $21 monthly probation fee.

Recreation's summer drama program.

She said that currently the organization brings in all their electrical equipment and has tried to combat the growing problems including eliminating a mold issue in the dressing rooms.

"We've done what we could and we have resources that we'd be willing to contribute further to this project," said Jaffe, "we want to make it a place that people can be proud of."

Stuart Ivimey, Chairman of the CPC, said that he was for updating the outside of the building and for fixing up the town auditorium. However, he parted ways when restoration became maintenance. He gave the repair of the auditorium bathrooms and rugs in the second floor offices as examples. He, along with committee members, agreed that looking at the old town hall as a whole was the correct way to go and that getting their arms around the issues, with an expert's advice, was wise.

The funding for the project Farrag envisions coming from several different sources, including the Dramatic Club, the CPC and the town's capital budget. The committee made clear that the CPC's monies only went to CPC supported pieces of this project, not building maintenance.

The architectural firm will outline both the specifications for the project and cost estimates. CPC Member Sarah Charron advised that a structural engineer should be hired to look at the building as well. Member Ralph Dormitzer said that further uses of the building should be investigated along the way, mentioning Recreation Director Jack Worley as a first contact.

"If we are going to do it, we should do it right," said member Alfred Moore. The vote was unanimous with all present.

Town Meeting voters will decide whether to appropriate community preservation money to pay for an historic restoration architectural firm that would come up with specifications to restore the old section of Town Hall.

State match of funding could decrease

The state funding match under the Community Preservation Act (CPA) could change drastically this year. Although a final answer has not been received from the state, Chairman of the Community Preservation Committee, Stuart Ivimey, said that the state could provide as low as a 50 percent match this year.

"The answer I've been given is the match could be anywhere between 50 percent and 75 percent," Ivimey said. Since Cohasset's adoption of CPA the town, along with other participating towns, has enjoyed a 100 percent match from the state. Ivimey thinks it would be unlikely the match would drop from 100 percent to 50 percent in one year, but he drew up numbers for that scenario to "be on the safe side."

The Community Preservation Act's funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

Currently, the Community Preservation Coalition, a state organization, is proposing legislation that would guarantee towns that have adopted the CPA a 75 percent match from the state.

Ivimey discussed with the committee the pros and cons of the new legislation. The drawbacks to the proposed legislation are that the funds could now come with new strings attached and could become an additional burden on other state organizations. Lastly, the legislation would assure Cohasset that 75 percent of their funds would receive a state match.

"The answer I've been given is the match could be anywhere between 50 percent and 75 percent."
— Stuart Ivimey, CPC chairman

"We want to bring home the most bacon for Cohasset so we want this to occur. We want to be able to guarantee Cohasset 75 percent match," said Ivimey, but he continued, "the legislation is getting away from the purity of the CPC."

Presently, funds from the CPA can be spent in three specific areas: open space, affordable housing, and historic preservation. Each year, the CPC must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of the three specific areas. Aside from minor administrative costs, the CPC does not spend money. The CPC only makes recommendations to the legislative authority in a town or municipality, (in Cohasset's case, Town Meeting).

Freezing pipes

The cold snap last week apparently caused pipes to burst in a house on S. Main Street and another on Spindrift Lane. The incident on S. Main was reported at 8:30 p.m., Tuesday (March 6). Water from a broken pipe on the third floor had leaked down through the wall and ceiling into some lights. The wiring inspector went to the scene and advised the resident to call an electrician.

A neighbor reported to a Realtor that water was pouring out the back of a house on Spindrift Lane last Friday (March 9) at about 5:15 p.m. The fire department was able to gain entry and shut off the main water valve. It was another frozen pipe situation, Chief Robert Silva said.

Plaza flooding

A water heater that was in the ceiling at Strecker eye care let go last Thursday (March 8) at about 6:45 a.m. affecting that business and the two on either side of it: the hair salon and Buttonwood Books. Fire Chief Robert Silvia said there was quite a bit of water on the floor. Strecker called a cleanup company and took care of the situation, he said. The water and electricity were shut off until a plumber and electrician could make repairs.

Rabies clinic includes Cohasset

On Saturday, April 7, the Town of Hull will be hosting a Rabies Clinic, offering low cost rabies vaccinations to its community pets, and as well, we are offering this clinic to our neighboring pets in Hingham and Cohasset. Dr. Grace Strake, DVM, South Coastal Animal Health, Weymouth, will be assisting the Town of Hull, administering these vaccinations. The Clinic will be held behind the Hull Police Headquarters, 1 School St., from 2 – 4pm. Rabies vaccinations will be $10.

All dogs must be leashed. All unpredictable or aggressive dogs must be leashed. All cats must be crated.

Briefly

TM warrant

Town Manager Bill Griffin told Selectmen this week that the annual Town Meeting warrant has gone to the printer. He also said as soon as it is converted, the warrant would also be posted on the town's web site at: www.townofcohasset.org.

In other Town Meeting news, Griffin noted this year's Town Meeting would start at 9 a.m.

The warrant has fewer articles than is usually the case, so it is possible that voters will wrap things up by mid-afternoon, Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said.

Village RFP

The Request for Proposals for a village "build-out plan" that got the go-ahead at the fall special Town Meeting when voters allocated $15,000 for consulting services is going out, Town Manager Bill Griffin said this week. Proposals are due Friday (March 23).

Dangerous corner

Selectmen will ask Chief James Hussey for an update on accidents at Beechwood Street and Route 3A. The intersection, which is signalized, is still one of the most hazardous in town. Police provided some analysis a few months back when they were looking at whether the left-turn only arrows were working properly. Selectmen also noted that part of the problem involved motorists making left-hand turns into and out of the Exxon station at the corner.

Selectman Fred Koed said there is a company that installs video cameras that pick up motorists, who are violating traffic rules.

But Selectman Gary Vanderweil said those cameras have generated a spate of lawsuits because people object to being "guilty until proven innocent."

Historical tour available on DVD

The Cohasset Planning Board Office has recently reproduced a 1953 film produced by Dan Cotton and Claus Gellotte to present at the 1954 town meeting to encourage acceptance of adopting zoning in Cohasset. With narration by Cotton and filming by Gellotte, the pair set out on a road tour to film the sights and landscape of 1953 Cohasset. Also filmed was Route 53, at that time called Route 3, from Queen Anne's Corner in Norwell to Hanover as a contrasting warning that, without zoning, Route 3A in Cohasset could soon "look like this."

Memorable sights of 1953 Cohasset include Cohasset Common, Jerusalem Road, the Causeway, Stony Beach, Sandy Beach, Cunningham Bridge before it was rebuilt, the Olde Salt House, John Smith Memorial Landing, the "Oakes" Estate, the Old Beechwood Ballpark and Fire Station, the Wheelwright Dairy Farm and Farmstead, Lily Pond, and the Old Nichols House built in the 1700's. The first Zoning Bylaw was adopted one year later.

This 11-minute color film is now available in DVD format for $40. Anyone interested in purchasing a copy should contact Jo-Ann in the Planning Board Office at the Town Hall, 781-383-3517.

HAPPY ST. PAT'S DAY!

Hello Cohasset. Well, March is certainly here with a bit of ups and downs but that is par for the course I guess. The warm weather that we had a few days ago is being pushed away but keep thinking SPRING! Happy St. Patrick's Day to all tomorrow. Enjoy the weekend celebrating, parades and parties but remember to take care and stay safe on all counts!

CUT FOR A CURE

The Third Annual Cut for a Cure, hosted by the Adrian Morris Salon took place on March 10th. With three stylists in the salon they did 42 haircuts and raised over $2000. Their evening reception hosted 300 people! At this point, we are still receiving donations but have grossed over $30,000! 100 percent of the proceeds will go directly to Live Learn Love Breast Cancer Outreach Organization. The organization was co founded by Rosie Lonborg and Pam Ahl and provides financial support, outreach and education to women and their families dealing with the devastation of breast cancer. They are local and reach out to women here on the South Shore. This is great news, super job!

NEW ORLEANS UPDATE

There is good news from New Orleans. Chris Higginson's soccer team, the Cosmos, was invited to the Southeastern United States Championship, held in Birmingham, Ga. For the second year in a row, they made the finals in the U12 division. Cadie's and Stephanie's team, the Strike Squad, was invited to compete (with 461 teams) for the U10 division title, and on Sunday, in a penalty kick finale after 3 overtimes, they won 3-2, becoming the Southeastern U.S. champions.

Chris, Cadie and Stephanie send greetings and thanks to all their coaches and teammates in Cohasset, for all the great times they had playing soccer together last fall. They look forward to seeing everyone again when they come back this summer.

ELECTION SUPPER

The Annual Election Supper, a springtime tradition, will be held at the Beechwood Congregational Church on Church St. in Cohasset. Candidates and voters are invited to get together for dinner on Thursday evening, March 22nd at 6:30. Dinner will include chicken breast, dilled carrots, red bliss potatoes, rolls, cake and ice cream as well as beverages. Before dinner, all candidates will be introduced. Tickets are $10 for adults and $4 for children. Reserve your tickets by calling 781-383-1298.

LOCAL ROOTS

Here is some "warming and springlike" news to report. Two Cohasset artists, Sarah Roche and Claire Watts, will be featured at the New England Spring Flower Show starting this weekend at a special art exhibit called, "If You Can Paint a Leaf, You Can Paint the World." Sarah's watercolor on vellum "Tree Peony Seed Pod" and Claire's watercolor "Apple" will be part of the New England Society of Botanical Artists' exhibit of more than 40 botanical artworks, capturing a plant's natural beauty using scientifically accurate observations and esthetically pleasing compositions. Emphasizing plant diversity and preservation, this year's exhibit demonstrates a broad range of paintings and drawings. Award-winning and internationally recognized artists share the exhibit with novice students of the discipline. The Flower Show opens March 17 and continues through Sunday, March 25 at the Bayside Expo Center . Make sure to check it out and pass on your "warm" congratulations.

SALVE REGINA

Great news about two Cohasset young ladies, Erin Liddell, a freshman and Alicia Sanchez, a junior who have both been named to the dean's list at Salve Regina University for the fall semester of the 2006-2007 academic year. To qualify for the dean's list, full-time students must earn a minimum grade point average of 3.6 without receiving a grade below a 'B' in that semester. Keep up the work ladies.

COLBY NEWS

Welcome back to Jessie W. Guild, a junior at Colby College, who recently returned from spending the fall semester in Spain studying at the University of Salamanca through the Colby in Salamanca program. Jessie, a graduate of Cohasset High, has also been named to the dean's list for her outstanding academice achievement during the fall semester. Jessie, the daughter of Peter Guild of Hingham, and Lindsay Cooney of Cohasset, is a psychology and Spanish major. Students, whose grade point averages are in the top 30 percent are named to the dean's list.

Another traveler, Thomas A. Myers, also a junior, recently returned from spending the fall semester in India studying through the Pitzer College-India program. Thomas, a graduate of Milton Academy, is the son of Michael and Rhonda Myers of Cohasset. He is majoring in philosophy.

This is so exciting to learn about and I am sure you have a lot of memories of your semester. Welcome back.

Our last student who has recently returned is Nicole A. Turgiss, also a junior at Colby. Nicole has recently returned from spending the fall semester in Australia studying at the James Cook University in Townsville, North Queensland. Nicole, a Cohasset High grad, is the daughter of Robert and Susan Turgiss of Cohasset. She is majoring in biology. Two-thirds of Colby students live and study abroad. Super news.

Church moves into the 21st Century

Website bringing people together for Lent and beyond

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is moving into the technology age and striving to connect its community in as many ways possible. The "web ministry" found at www.ststephenscohasset.org, was an initiative started last year to provide a forum for the church to reach out to current and potential parishioners, as well as any other interested parties.

Its latest effort is a "Daily Lenten Devotion" which is a daily reading that follows a weekly theme. For Christians, lent is the six-weeks leading up to Holy Week, the week of the Easter holiday.

"It's a time to be more reflective and contemplative," Colette Wood, interim assistant and the second half of the website team.

Colette Wood and David Theodore work on the St. Stephen's "web ministry" that can be found at: www.ststephenscohasset.org.

"We're trying to reconnect people. It doesn't replace community, it enhances it."

— Collette Wood, St. Stephen's

The themes include "African American Spirituals," "Healing," "Traditional Anglican," "Caring for Creation: Environment," "One-ness of Christ" and "Me and Jesus." Parishioners have chosen passages that mean something to them personally and read them for a recording that is then posted on the website. So far the response has been very positive within the parish and beyond. Two area Episcopal parishes, Holy Nativity in Weymouth and St. Andrew's in Ayer, Mass., have linked the program from their own website. Anyone, of any denomination, is welcome to visit the website to view this unique feature.

The Daily Lenten Devotion program is just one feature of Webmaster David Theodore's easy to navigate design He credits the parishioners enthusiasm and involvement with its success. He's designed the website to enhance the community's interaction with each other outside of the church setting.

"A website is only good if people go to it," Theodore says. Many parishioners have volunteered their favorite passage for the weekly theme and read it for the online congregation. It's a way for parishioners to connect, share and help each other through this "anxious world," Wood says.

The web ministry is a multi-media website that contains varied content including a twice-daily prayer, discussion boards, music, art images, audio and video.

Wood says the website allows 24-hour, 7 day-a-week access to "spiritual nourishment." It allows for flexibility in the busy, modern lives of parishioners and a greater community. The website offers inspirational passages and hymns on multiple subjects because it's difficult to read the Bible for just the right words to help through a tough situation. It also provides a community to relate to when a parishioner can't sleep at night because he/she is concerned about a loved one's health, Wood says.

Wood described how an ill parishioner who can't make it to Sunday service is using the web ministry program to remain connected to the parish.

The advent of computers and the use of the internet can lead to a more lonely and individual experience, however, Wood says that this website is bringing people together.

"We're trying to reconnect people. It doesn't replace community, it enhances it," says Wood. Between Sunday services or when going through a difficult time, the web ministry provides a connection for parishioners to the church community.

"Someone can do the dishes or light a candle or take a bath while listening to a reading," explains Wood. The website also has music sung by the church choir and accompanied by the organ. The website is full of sound and music that appeals to the senses, Wood says.

The website has caught on at the church over the last year. Currently, it's receiving about 3000 hits per day.

"We have 80-year-olds buying a computer just so they can get on the website," said Theodore. The website is part of a full circle affect that's happening in churches and religion across the country. People who left their church because of disagreements with their methodology or ideology, often turned to the internet and "blogging" to discuss spiritual ideas. These "spiritual seekers" are now coming back to church communities because churches, like St. Stephen's, are reaching out to them through the internet.

"They realized they can't be their own pastor," Theodore explains, "they need a little guidance." Churches are using the same communication medium (the internet) to get through to those people who are looking for a faith community. Fittingly enough, Theodore, a Scituate resident, was drawn to St. Stephen's by its website.

"As a faith tradition we have a very rich history that comes with very rich traditions. But our Church is moving in the directions that we want everyone to feel welcome," says Wood, "I think this website is a part of that. Everybody's invited."

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church is located in the Cohasset Village at 16 Highland Avenue.

The lecture, which is open to the public, will take place Wednesday, March 28, at 7:30 p.m., at St. Anthony Church Parish Hall, 129 South Main St., Cohasset.

Public speaking

Adults who find themselves tongue-tied and sweaty-palmed speaking in front of a group of people can find the tools they need to become more confident speakers with South Shore Conservatory's "Speak Up, Speak Out and Speak For Yourself" workshop.

This two-hour program is guaranteed to loosen up even the most reluctant of speakers, and uses a series of communication games and exercises to put students at ease and give participants the tools they need for making presentations. Conducted by speech specialist Ellen Kelly, the workshop can be particularly helpful for adults seeking to perfect their communicating skills.

The program will be offered Saturday, March 24, from 2 to 4 p.m., at the Conservatory's 1 Conservatory Dr. location in Hingham. Tuition for the workshop is $50. Pre-registration is required. For more information or to register, call 781-749-7565, ext. 10.

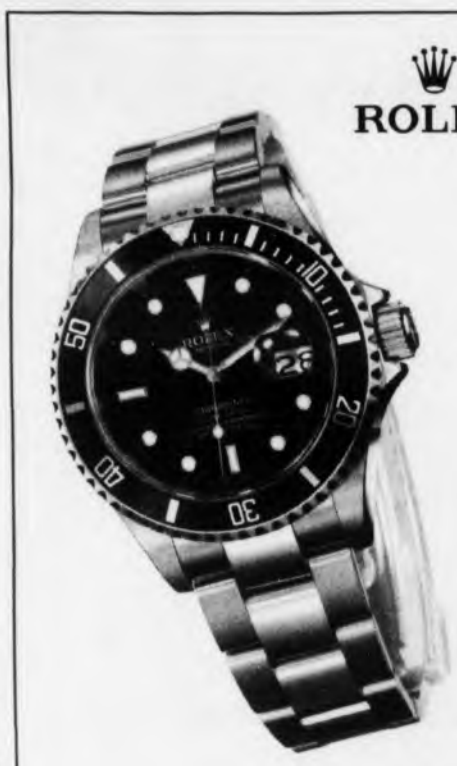
From the archives of Cohasset Historical Society



Margaret Hall joined the American Red Cross in 1918. You can read her journals and view her photographs at the historical society.

As we continue to highlight women during the month of March, we chose as our second notable woman, Margaret Hall. Margaret spent her childhood summers on her family's estate near West Corner.

In 1918, she joined the American Red Cross and shipped overseas for service. On arrival, police and customs inspectors failed to ask her if she was carrying a camera, which was not allowed. Using this contraband camera, Margaret Hall captured not only important moments in history, but also the destruction and emotional damage that were a part of World War I.

The Cohasset Historical Society is lucky enough to have in its collection the images that Margaret Hall took of her experiences during World War I. In addition to her photos, the society is in possession of her journals, which chronicle this amazing point in history. Many exceptional women like Margaret gave up their comfortable lifestyle for ascetic conditions on the Western front. These women deserve to be remembered for their service to their country. Visit the Society at 106 South Main St. to read Margaret's journals and view her amazing photographs.

All Aboard: Cohasset woman took last train to Boston in 1959

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Greenbush tickets courtesy of James R. Watson of Hingham.

"When the train pulled up I remember Sharon being amazed at this great big train. When you're little, a train is something enormous."
— Betty MacDonald, Church Street

"The sun was shining brightly on June 30, 1959. On that day in history the Old Colony train made its last trip from Cohasset to Boston and back again. Riding the train were Betty MacDonald and her 4 year-old daughter, Sharon. They headed out of Cohasset for a day in the city.

"I didn't think much of it, I just thought it would a fun thing to do," MacDonald said, "I had been riding the train everyday back and forth from Weymouth to Boston for work so it wasn't a novelty for me. I thought it would be something Sharon would remember." The last journey of the Old Colony train was Sharon's first trip.

"She was bug-eyed," MacDonald says emphatically. "Sharon talked about the train for days and days after." The two were driven to the train station in Cohasset by MacDonald's husband, Malcolm, although memories were fuzzy as to where the station actually was. MacDonald remembers they typically took the train from the North Scituate station because it had an overhang feature that protected passengers from snow and rain as they waited for the train. The Cohasset station, as they remember it, was open to the elements and had nothing you could stand under. They left Sharon's younger sister, Joyce, then two, at home with her dad, "she was too young to come along," MacDonald says.

"When the train pulled up I remember Sharon being amazed at this great big train. When you're little, a train is something enormous." MacDonald and her daughter boarded the train and, to their surprise, it wasn't all that crowded. MacDonald credits this to boarding a later train, whereas the bulk of commuters would have taken the earlier train.

"Sharon was looking out all the train windows, she had a lot of fun," they arrived at South Station in about an hour. They walked from South Station to Boston Common and the Swan Boats. They looked at the flowers growing in the Boston Public Gardens. From there they went shopping and MacDonald bought Sharon some new clothes. They got a bite to eat and it was time to head back home – on the last train.

MacDonald grew up in Weymouth and met her husband when she was just 13 years old at a local high school dance. They will celebrate 53 married years together next month, and they've called Cohasset their home for 52 of those years. Together, they have raised six children, 4 boys and 2 girls.

Although both she and her husband are retired, she is looking forward to the train coming back to Cohasset. She said that back when she used to ride the train to work regularly it cost $5 for 10 tickets. "That would get you there and back the whole week, now $5 just might get you there once!"

According to Jacqueline Dormitzer's "History of Cohasset," the new link to Southeast Expressway from Boston to South Hingham opened just one week before the last Greenbush train. Although bus transportation was provided in leiu of train service, the train's disappearance seemed to be the end of an era.

Now, with the Greenbush train on the horizon a new era in transportation in Cohasset and the South Shore is beginning. MacDonald hopes that the train might simplify trips to Boston, "it will make it a lot easier to go shopping." She also mentioned the increased difficulty in navigating the streets of Boston, many of which have changed throughout the Big Dig project.

"I think I'd like to be on the first train when it comes back in September," says MacDonald, "that might be fun."

"The Cohasset triathlon is positioned to be a great event. The location is ideal. The athletes are looking forward to it. But, as I told Bill, 'Your event is only as good as the volunteers.' I would expect a first class event on July 8," said Brian Noyes, Event Director of the well-established long running Duxbury Triathlon.

The scenic course begins with a 1/4-mile ocean swim at Sandy Beach. The race is specifically being held in July when the water temperature will average between 62 and 65 degrees. A 12-1/2-mile bike will follow the swim. The course winds through Cohasset and North Scituate and will begin at Sandy Beach, then head down Atlantic Avenue to Jerusalem Road. Riders will continue down Jerusalem Road to Route 228 and turn left (south). The course heads east down Main Street toward the Common and proceeds straight into North Scituate. In North Scituate, the course makes a left on Gannett Road and then a left onto Border Street. The final leg will take riders back onto Atlantic Avenue and finally to the transition area at Sandy Beach.

Once back at the beach, athletes will begin the 3.2-mile run that will loop around Little Harbor. Runners will follow Nichols Road to Jerusalem Road and turn left. The course will take the runners around the Common to Beach Street. Runners will follow Beach Street to Atlantic Avenue with an exciting finish just a short distance from the transition area.

Burnett has worked closely with town departments to get this event off the ground. The Board of Selectmen approved the race back in September. Town Manager Bill Griffin and the Sandy Beach Association have helped immensely making the "Cohasset Tri" possible, says Burnett.

"We have fantastic support from the town with this event."
— Bill Burnett, race director

"We have fantastic support from the town with this event."

The race has attracted "fantastic sponsors," according to Burnett, and include The Red Lion, O Water, BMW of Norwell, Dean & Hamilton, the Fruit Center in Hingham, the Bicyclelink in Weymouth, Atlantic Bagel, 93.7 Mike FM and the South Shore Hospital. Mike FM 93.7 will provide entertainment and music from their mobile truck in the transition area at Sandy Beach to help create a festive backdrop for racers and spectators.

The sponsors are eager to be a part of the first time event because of the race itself and the organization its proceeds will benefit.

"The Cohasset Triathlon is a perfect fit for O Water. We are both young organizations, and we look forward to growing together with the Cohasset Triathlon. We can't wait until race day!" said Jimmy Seaborg of O Beverages, who is donating all the water for the racers at the finish.

[The Fruit Center] is thrilled to be asked to participate and we look forward to supporting the triathlon and the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation," said Mike Dwyer, Marketing Director for the Fruit Center. The Fruit Center will provide nourishment to racers at the finish.

The sponsors help to cut down race costs so the greatest amount of money can be donated to Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF). Registration fees ($60/individual and $95/relay team) will generate approximately $30,000 and the net proceeds will go to JDRF. Athletes are also encouraged to get sponsors to raise additional money for the cause,. The goal is to generate $10,000 from racer sponsorships, and $4,000 has already been raised.

The JDRF is an organization searching for a cure for Type I Diabetes. Type 1 diabetes strikes children suddenly and makes them insulin dependent for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications.

Children with Type 1 diabetes no longer produce insulin, but without it, they cannot survive, which means they must take it either through several shots each day or through an insulin pump which is worn 24 hours a day. Blood sugar must also be monitored throughout the day by pricking the finger. The short-term effects of severe low blood sugar can be dangerous, and the long-term complications from high blood sugar can include heart disease, kidney failure, blindness and amputations.

"It's a great event for the town and it's a great event for diabetes," says Burnett, "I hope people are out in their lawn chairs cheering on the athletes the day of the race."

To find out about volunteering or registering for the Cohasset Triathlon, visit www.cohasset-tri.com. For more information on Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, visit www.jdrf.org.

Late train stalled at the station

"There was a groundswell that wanted more mid-afternoon trains," he said about the survey. Some hospital workers, for example, go to work early and want to come back early between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m.

Selectman Gary Vanderweil said 108 responses was hardly a "tidal wave of interest" and that not a large number were interested in a later train. He said a late train that was not at capacity would consume energy and not be wise environmentally. Vanderweil also said for those who want a mid-afternoon train – there is a 3:30 p.m. commuter boat. The terminal is only a short walk from South Station, he said.

Selectman Fred Koed said the timing is not right for the proposal. He said the issue should be looked at perhaps six months after Greenbush is in service. Selectman Ted Carr also said he preferred to leave things as is and perhaps revisit the issue down the road.

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said while some people would gain an occasional benefit — such as those attending a late Red Sox game — those living next to the tracks would never get a break and suffer the entire burden. "How to make it fair to everyone, that is the big issue," he said.

Brennan also explained that the MBTA did not indicate how late the train would be only that it would be "later than the last train."

Selectmen reached a consensus that they were not in favor of a late train at the present time.

OPINION

Midnight train

Over the years, the Mariner has made no secret of the fact that it has supported restoration of the Greenbush Line of the Old Colony Railroad Project.

By late summer or early fall, Greenbush service will resume after 48 years. We think ultimately the train will be good for the South Shore.

But with that being said, we think Selectmen did the right thing by not welcoming a late train without further study. It is not clear at this time if a train that would run "sometime after the last train at 10 p.m." would attract enough riders to make it worthwhile.

In our view Greenbush is supposed to provide convenient service to commuters at peak times. It is not the T – which runs every so-many-minutes throughout weekdays and on weekends.

Surely if residents along the Greenbush corridor want to go in to see a nighttime Red Sox game, they can drive to Braintree and take the T. The trip there and back along Route 3 would be in off-peak times. Therefore, sports fans should be able to reach the T station without too much hassle.

And as Selectman Gary Vanderweil pointed out, the commuter boat provides an alternative for folks who work the early shift in town and want to return earlier in the afternoon rather than wait for the train.

Those living along the tracks, as Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said at Monday's Selectmen's meeting, are going to be shouldering the "burden" of the train more than the rest of us.

Greenbush, in our view, is intended to provide commuter service to Boston and back. Let's keep it that way unless there is a groundswell of support for a late train.

Rave reviews for 'Dancing with the Stars'

TO THE EDITOR:

The calls and e-mails of congratulations and enthusiasm are still coming in for Steppin' Out, South Shore Art Center's sold-out "Dancing with the Stars" evening on March 3rd at the Red Lion Inn. It was a fabulous evening and a tremendous success made possible not just by the energy of Billy Costa and the talented dancers from eXtreme Danceport and Studio 665 but also by the effort and support of SSAC's enthusiastic staff and volunteers. It was amazing, over the months of planning and preparation, how the project grew almost exponentially and everyone's willingness to assume more and more responsibility matched every new decision. Clearly, it was this untiring enthusiasm for our very own "Dancing with the Stars" evening that made it "a party to be remembered for a long time."

As Chair of the event, I would like to thank the staff and committee members for their support and hard work. It truly was a team effort and they couldn't have been a better team. In particular, I think the most unsung heroes were Diane Kennedy, Assistant Director, who seemed to work on every detail 24/7, even when she was on vacation; Kimberlee Alemian, Graphic Designer, who designed an invitation and marketing materials that conveyed the evening so well that the tickets were selling as soon as the invitation was opened; Jen Willms, President-Elect, whose creative input and productivity were unparalleled; and Sarah Hannon, Executive Director, SSAC's and our unflappable leader.

In addition, I would like to thank Frank Near for bringing us Billy Costa; Michael Nedeau, owner of Party by Design, for designing and supplying the perfect ambience; Pat Cammett for her stunning flower arrangements; and all the committee members who contributed time and energy in acquiring silent auction items, selling tickets, and helping in every possible way before, during and after the event.

Lastly, I would like to thank our sponsors: Abbott Homes, Kitchen Concepts; HSBC Bank; Party by Design; Red Lion Inn; Boston Common Magazine; Boston Symphony Orchestra; HC Design; Home Center/Sotheby's; North American Top Gun; Adrian Morris Salon; and last, but definitely not least, Candace Cramer, SSAC's Director of Development, who worked so closely with all our sponsors.

'Determining our own future'

COMMENTARY

JIM HAMILTON

Though Cohasset may not have the same acreage available as Lincoln, Cohasset can learn by Lincoln's example: develop what needs to be developed and conserve what needs to be conserved.

Since 1969 when the Massachusetts legislature enacted the Conservation Restriction Act, the procedures for creating conservation restrictions on land has helped thousands of Massachusetts families protect thousands of acres of open space, farmlands and forests.

A conservation restriction (CR) can be written for different purposes to suit the particular needs of the property owner. The owner may be donating the land to a town, agency or charitable conservation organization such as a local land trust like the Cohasset Conservation Trust (CCT).

The CCT led the conservation movement in Cohasset when it was formed in 1967 and continues to do so today. The CCT owns 14 properties totaling 90 acres, has participated in the purchase of two town properties, the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary and the Brass Kettle Watershed, and holds the CR for the Barnes property.

Visit the Trust's website www.cohassetconservationtrust.org to learn more about these properties and how there are tax advantages when donating land to a land trust.

Altogether, between the private and public properties, there are 1,032 acres of conservation land in our town or approximately 1/3 of the town's total acreage.

Trustees of the Reservations (TTOR) and Town-owned conservation land are open for public use. Much of the CCT conservation land is also open for public use, but some are small pieces that provide scenic outlooks to Little Harbor and the Atlantic Ocean. Other CCT properties provide habitat for wildlife, are wetlands or have no public access since the acreage was donated to the Trust by abutters who wished to have the land set aside in perpetuity to preserve its original character.

Lately, the Cohasset Land Foundation (CLF) has been formed to acquire parcels of land: tracts large enough so that some of the acreage can be developed into marketable house lots which take the financial burden off the CLF when it comes to paying for the land. With some additional funding from the CCT and possibly the Community Preservation Committee (CPC), financing can be a cooperative venture among like-minded organizations. It's a reasonable concept to provide open space for the Town while meeting the needs of new homebuyers and abutters who prefer living next door to conservation land.

The CLF is based on another Boston suburban town, Lincoln, with many similar characteristics to Cohasset. Lincoln led the way in conservation-based affordable housing. Both towns are affluent with a growing proportion of expensive housing and both pride themselves on their colonial historical background and high percentage of open space. Lincoln has been successfully at work on their affordable housing percentage longer than Cohasset that only formed its Cohasset Housing Partnership (CHP) this summer. Both towns recognize that housing should be made affordable for first-home buyers such as young families and town employees as well as seniors.

Both towns also recognize that initiating affordable housing units from within, rather

Traffic control at RR crossing

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Portadam supports prior to installation.

Support system partially installed.

MBTA and North Main Street signs – There have recently been a number of issues concerning traffic control signs in the vicinity of the railroad crossing on North Main Street. Residents have asked some new signage near the homes on the Cohasset side of the tracks. Last week, there was an accident in which a driver apparently spanned the traffic divider island on the Hingham side of the crossing neatly shearing all of the signs from the island. So, now there are no warning signs on the island. CBB quickly responded with some temporary markers to delineate the island. Permanent and replacement signs are on order.

On Tuesday morning one of us met with an MBTA representative, the DEP superintendent and police chief. They agreed to:

- The MBTA will move the 35 MPH speed limit sign from the edge of Woodside Cemetery (when traveling toward Cohasset) and move it to the Cohasset side of the tracks beyond the new N. Main Street entrance to the station. (Note – This road in Hingham going toward Cohasset has a "Thickly Settled" sign, which carries an implicit 30 MPH limit. Did you remember this? By moving the 35 MPH sign to the Cohasset side of the tracks we will maintain the 30 MPH limit until Cohasset bound drivers are past the station entrance.)
- A "Caution Children" for Hingham bound traffic will be placed before the home at 488 North Main St. by the Cohasset DPW (This will warn drivers to slow in the vicinity of the residences in this area.)

Forest Ave. Street and Sidewalks – Just to keep you up to date, this past week we will be receiving bids from tree companies for the necessary removal of the trees prior to the Forest Avenue sidewalk construction. Based on questions from the potential bidders we expect that five bids will be received for this work. State law mandates that we award the tree removal to the lowest qualified bidder. This portion of work should actually start around the end of March or early April. So, be on the lookout for construction workers along Forest Avenue during this time frame.

More on the harbor wall reconstruction – Last week we spent quite a bit of our column talking about the Portadam that would be erected along Border Street to facilitate the reconstruction of the seawall. On Wednesday of this week Portadam installation began. The first accompanying photo shows workers staging the Portadam supports in the harbor area prior to installation. As you can see this was done prior to low tide in preparation for the actual installation work during low tide.

The other photo shows a small section of support grids for the waterproof membrane that will form the backbone of the dam during installation. It's difficult to see in this photo, but each support is securely braced to the adjacent supports. This will make the supporting grid strong enough to resist the forces of the tides. The installers tell us that complete installation of the Portadam will take four to five days. So, we should see the contractor working on the wall sometime next week.

Support System partially installed – Another interesting component of the seawall reconstruction project will be the traffic control that will be used along Border Street. Because the work will probably block the Border Street lane adjacent to the harbor, one-way traffic will be necessary. The contractor will be deploying a one-way traffic light system at Border Street. The traffic light system will allow traffic to flow in one direction and then in the opposite direction. There will be a delay between the light cycles to permit the traffic coming from one direction to clear before traffic is permitted to flow in the opposite direction. (You may remember that a similar system was employed on Route 3A while the bridge over the North River in Marshfield was being reconstructed.)

Two other phases of this harbor wall project are currently out for bid. These phases are to restore the harbor wall between Lawrence Wharf and the Veterans Memorial and then to restore the sea wall at the Cohasset Sailing Club. These two projects are no where as complicated as the harbor wall currently under construction. There was a bidder's conference on Wednesday, March 14th. (Bidder's conferences are routinely held so that prospective bidders have a chance to ask questions of the design engineer and to visit the site of the work. This permits the bidder to submit a more accurate bid, sometimes at a lower cost, because they will have fewer unknowns.) When the bids are opened on March 22nd we will know whether we will have sufficient funds remaining to complete one or both of these remaining wall restorations.

Welcome to the dark (roast) side

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

I don't trust people who don't drink coffee for four reasons: (1) They obviously have some sort of natural edge over me; (2) they hail from that mythical land of nod where they regularly get uninterrupted nights of sleep; (3) they must have some other addiction that I don't know about; or (4) they don't have any addictions at all and therefore barely qualify as human — just like all those people who exercise at 5:30 a.m. in the morning.

I used to be one of those non-coffee drinkers. But, I came over to the dark side the day I enrolled in law school and began reading boring texts; attending 7:30 a.m. classes in ancient, unheated buildings; and waking up repeatedly from night terrors involving not studying for a test, not knowing where or when a test was being given, and not having enough credits to graduate.

It's now well over a decade later, and I've managed to put law school far behind me, although I still occasionally wake up in a cold sweat over a school-related nightmare. These are often followed by a sigh of relief that it's just a nightmare and not early menopause. However, my sleepless nights are more often the result of working late, and a child who every hour on the hour needs a drink of water, a visit to the bathroom, or to climb into bed with Mommy. (As a single parent since my son's birth, I've never had the luxury of saying those three magic words on which most marriages hinge: "It's your turn.") On the flip side, at least somebody wants to climb into bed with Mommy these days.

However, coffee is not just about the caffeine. It also serves as an integral social connecter in most people's lives.

I've resorted to bribery for the latter (meaning paying my child not to climb into bed with me), but I've come to accept the fact that not working late actually increases the middle of the night panic attacks where counting the items on my never-ending "to do" list never quite manages to put me back to sleep. Hence, I'm forced into frequent worship at the altars of the patron saints of coffee beans, otherwise known as Dunkin' Donuts and Starbucks.

However, coffee is not just about the caffeine. It also serves as an integral social connecter in most people's lives. Coffee brings people together whether we're conversing with colleagues in the company kitchen (cursing the coffee cad, who has once again left just enough in the pot to avoid brewing a fresh one; yet never enough for more than a quarter cup of dregs); visiting the local coffee shop with friends; or, for those of us who work from home, using Starbucks as our official conference room.

Why? Because coffee is the ultimate equalizer. We're all the same in the eyes of the barista and our desperate desire for that decadent cup of dark roast. And while a "double decaf venti latte frappawhatever" from Starbucks may be more expensive than a gallon of gasoline these days, it's still accessible to most everyone (as opposed to good hair days and that new Dolce & Gabbana suit I've had my eye on).

Yet, for those of you able to resist the soothing aroma, I congratulate you. And, as I sit here in Starbucks writing this column and relishing my tall coffee of the day, I offer a conciliatory, although somewhat wary, toast to the non-coffee drinkers within our realm. (Meanwhile, in the back of my mind, a John Williams' theme song is playing, and in a galaxy far, far away, Darth Vader is warning Luke Skywalker to "[never] underestimate the power of the Dark Side.")

Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident who moved here only after her broker assured her that the town was big enough to have both a Starbucks AND a Dunkin' Donuts. For more of Diane's random musings, check out her blog at www.womensDISH.com.

HEALTH NOTES

Being prepared for a 'Bon Voyage'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Careful planning for a getaway, short or long will make any vacation better, particularly if your plan covers the unforeseen occurrences which may get in the way of an otherwise enjoyable interlude. If you're thinking about a getaway this spring, it's also a good time to think about some things that may help you stay healthy.

The Center for Disease Control web site: www.cdc.gov/travel.htm has a comprehensive summary of travel health tips. It provides information for the specific destination, giving applicable travel alerts together with necessary vaccinations, a listing of prevalent diseases, tells about mosquito and tick protection, warnings about safe food and water. There's even a green sheet ranking the health and safety of individual cruise ships.

It's suggested that you put together a travel health kit. You should pack your prescribed medications, including an antibiotic to self-treat moderate to severe diarrhea. In addition, bring an over-the-counter medication to prevent diarrhea, sunscreen, insect repellent, and alcohol-based hand gels containing at least 60 percent alcohol to wash your hands if soap and clean water are not readily available. A popular new health accessory is a lozenge taken in water a few days before getting on an airplane, called Airborne Formula available from pharmacies. Allegedly, it provides protection against airborne illnesses transmitted in aircraft. Remember to take sunscreen if you're going to a warmer climate. Remember, a health kit is useful only if it is available. It should be carried with the traveler at all times, e.g., in carry-on baggage and on excursions. All medications, especially prescription medications, should be stored in carry-on baggage, in their original containers with clear labels. With heightened airline security, sharp objects will have to remain in checked luggage. Oh, and bring your regular medications if you have any. Be sure to take a list of your prescriptions. Also, they have these pill organizer boxes with columns of compartments for days in the week and rows for times in the day.

Do you have both the required and appropriate vaccinations for the country you are going to?

Check your health insurance for travel restrictions. Some policies restrict coverage in travel situations. Also make sure you know where to get medical care at your travel destination.

Be sure you find out what you can carry on an aircraft before you pack and prepare for your trip. There's a maximum three-ounce restriction about liquids and gels in carry-ons, including toothpaste that one may carry on. At least there was, last time we checked. Oh, and don't forget to remove the guns from your shoes.

Do you have both the required and appropriate vaccinations for the country you are going to?

For your destination, be sure to have the relevant Travel Warnings and Public Announcements concerning civil unrest and other conditions as well as Consular Information Sheets with information about travel requirements such as new or unusual entry or currency requirements.

And when you pack, don't forget handkerchiefs, warm and cool clothing, hats, the right shoes, sunglasses, bathing suit, etc.

And for cooking while traveling: Sometimes you may have to cook in unfamiliar places. Don't forget the basics of getting meats above 165 degrees Fahrenheit; keeping dairy products cool, and being very careful about kitchen hygiene.

Finally, don't bring back any unwanted souvenirs, and if you feel the least bit unusual, see a doctor right away to be sure that you're not carrying something contagious. Have a good trip!

When I'm glad I'm not Irish

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

As you undoubtedly will be notified many times before this week is done, Saturday is St. Patrick's Day in South Boston and environs all over the South Shore, a day when Irishmen gather to trade stories of the Auld Sod that may or may not be true.

It is also the one day of the year when I'm glad I'm not Irish.

Oh, I have nothing against the good St. Pat. I hear tell he drove the snakes out of Ireland and I guess that's a plus. He also brought civilization to the heathen Irish although there are days when I'm not sure that some of them were not out to lunch at the time.

I don't have to wear one of those silly pins that says, "Kiss me, I'm Irish."

It's their methods of celebrating the day that throws me.

Not being Irish, I don't have to eat corned beef and cabbage on St. Paddy's Day. I don't know what they do to corn beef but I'm sure they don't do it in public. I'd rather have haggis, the Scot's national stomach turner.

I don't have to cry when an Irish tenor sings "Danny Boy," whether he's on key or not. What is it about the Irish that they can turn on the tear ducts at will even before the first notes of even an Irish jig hit the air?

I don't have to wear one of those silly pins that says, "Kiss me, I'm Irish." I'm not bragging when I say I've kissed a couple of girls in my time, some of them Irish, but I never had to wear such an invitation on my lapel.

I don't have to go around greeting friends and acquaintances with "Top o' the morning." I'm not even sure what a top o the morning is. The Irish have a facility for taking good words and turning them into something else, like "Irish coffee."

I don't have to go around explaining to my non-Irish friends why my Irish friend "Knocko" doesn't mind being called that. In fact, he rather enjoys it. I have known Irishmen to run for public office insisting their name be Knocko on the ballot.

I don't have to drink green beer at the local pub. I don't know what they add to perfectly good beer to make it green but whatever it is it can't be good for the stomach. Thankfully, I'm not called upon to drink beer any more, green or otherwise.

I don't have to pretend I'm carrying a shellalegh (I don't have to learn to spell it, either) for protection at St. Patrick's Day celebrations. Why they don't call it by its right name, a walking stick, is beyond me. It would help my spelling, too.

I don't have to wear a green necktie or a shamrock in my lapel. Fact is, I don't own a necktie of any color and what is a shamrock but a four-leaf clover that was grown on the other side of the Irish Sea?

And to all Irishmen who are bigger than me, I'm only kidding, lads.

Water issues on 'Our Town'

As the March 31 annual Town Meeting approaches OUR TOWN, co-hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo sit down with Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt for the full hour.

Pratt will field questions from the hosts on the water articles that are on the Warrant.

The water department is seeking authority to sell water to other municipalities. Relating to that issue, Pratt said at a recent Selectmen's meeting, "We are letting opportunity go out to the ocean everyday." However, Selectmen voted 4-1 not to recommend the article to Town Meeting.

A water rate increase is also on the Warrant. That issue received unanimous support from Selectmen.

Tune in and find out what Pratt has to say about these important issues and the goals of the water department.

Our Town airs Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9pm on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!

Stormwater bylaw should not be watered down

TO THE EDITOR:

Everyone agrees Cohasset has a serious, long-standing stormwater flooding and pollution problem, it's getting worse, and it affects our public health and safety. Everyone agrees we must do something to keep the situation from getting worse and remediate existing conditions.

It would seem a no-brainer. Yet the Stormwater Bylaw is already bogged down in controversy.

The crux of the matter is opponents don't want any infringement on their property rights even if their actions may infringe on their neighbor's property rights, nor do they want another level of bureaucracy.

Proponents advocate a reasonable regulation and permitting process by an independent commission dedicated solely to prevention and remediation of stormwater flooding and pollution will preserve everyone's property rights — and be effective in solving Cohasset's stormwater problem.

Two diametrically opposed positions held by intelligent well-meaning individuals.

In the middle are residents all over Town (Ripley Road, Smith Place, Pleasant Street, Elm Street, Atlantic Avenue, Beach Street, Rattle Snake Run, Deep Run to mention a few) whose yards and basements are regularly flooded and polluted by stormwater. They await and deserve relief.

Stormwater pollutes every water resource in Cohasset and hanging in the balance is the quality of our drinking water (Lily Pond) and recreational waters (i.e., Little Harbor & The Harbor). We, as residents, need to know this is being addressed.

The system we have in place isn't working and we need a new one.

I agree with the Selectmen's decision to postpone the Town Meeting vote on the Stormwater Bylaw — but for a different reason. I resigned from the Stormwater Committee because I couldn't support a watered-down version of the bylaw that would solve little and I was afraid it would pass at Town Meeting and we'd be stuck with it.

Some disagree with me, but based on what I've learned from sitting on the Water Resource Protection Committee, the Harbor Health Committee, the Stormwater Committee, and from talking with many of you who are affected by stormwater flooding, I am convinced we need a comprehensive bylaw and an independent commission.

A comprehensive stormwater bylaw won't prevent you from putting an addition on your house or from building a new house. It won't prevent residential or commercial developments. It won't prevent you from putting on a deck, erecting a shed, or planting a rock garden.

It will make it a little more difficult. Given the stakes, I think it's worth it. I hope you do too.

Include North Cohasset in town water system

TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. McElroy provided the Mariner with a copy of his letter to Selectmen, the Town Manager and the Water Commission.

I noted with interest the proposal of the water commissioners to sell more water to neighboring towns.

First, I want to congratulate the water commissioners on their very hard work in maintaining and protecting the Cohasset water supply and distribution system. I also believe that they make a good case for selling water that can be safely projected will not be needed and would otherwise "go into the ocean."

However, five plus years ago, I asked the water commissioners to plan for incorporating North Cohasset into the Cohasset system (we currently receive water from Hingham, some of which is sold by Cohasset to Hingham).

I am totally dissatisfied with the Aquarion Water Company because they do not appear to have plan for maintenance of the distribution system pipes (unlike Cohasset, which has been diligent in its maintenance). I am not aware of comparative costs; both sources are expensive. I know that some people in North Cohasset have said that our Aquarion-supplied water has a bad taste to it and sometimes causes discoloration of laundry. I believe those complaints have subsided in recent years.

In any event, the first priority of the Cohasset Water Commissioners should be to extend its service to North Cohasset. The Commissioners have cited technical problems, but "where there is a will there is a way."

Perhaps North Cohasset will not confront serious water shortages for one or two decades, however it is inevitable. Including North Cohasset in the Cohasset system is the best answer to protecting us from future disastrous water shortages.

A tasty triumph thanks to local businesses

TO THE EDITOR:

The fourth annual Taste! fundraiser to benefit Wellspring and the Hull Lifesaving Museum was a great success. Almost 200 guests gathered at Atlantica Restaurant to sample wines and fabulous fare presented by a number of the areas best restaurants and caterers. The eateries participating brought their distinctive tastes and traditions to the party. From lobster bisque to tiny paper cones of fish and chips, spicy gumbo to jambalaya, artisan goat cheese to seafood stir fry and dozens of desserts – the guests enjoyed the chance to taste everything and then go back for more and more!

Atlantica, Bare Cove Gourmet, The Chef's Table, Maggie's Corner, The Borrowed Butler, Barefoot Bob's Beach Grill, Cherrywoods BBQ, Cohasset Wine and Spirits, DiNero's, French Memories, Jake's Seafood, Port Side Wines, Raffael's, Red Parrot Restaurant, Starbucks Coffee, The Silent Chef, Toast, The Ocean Club, Weinberg's, Vermont Butter & Cheese, and Java Jungle contributed to this tasty triumph.

Many thanks to the businesses, who not only donated scrumptious food, but also gave up an evening to participate; the volunteers who are a critical part of everything that we do; and of course our generous guests who made the evening so much fun! Every contribution matters and guarantees that Wellspring and the Hull Lifesaving Museum will always be here enhancing life on the South Shore.

Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 7 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the oval to the right of one's choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

Anyone that is permanently physically disabled and cannot cast their vote at the polling place may file a letter from a physician with the Town Clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast a vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the Town Clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

'Determining our own future'

than from outside developers pushing 40B, can create more compatible housing in keeping with the town's character. The example that Lincoln has set is called Battle Road Farm, a 40 percent affordable condominium community that was built with a traditional New England farmhouse feeling including plantings typical of 19th century farms. Half the homes were reserved for local residents, town employees and employees of local nonprofit organizations who were selected from a lottery system. The homes are clustered around a town meadow and wetland that minimizes the disruption of the 47-acre natural environment. There is even some mixed use included featuring an office building that helped contribute funds to offset the costs and paid for an access road's reconstruction.

Though Cohasset may not have the same acreage available as Lincoln, Cohasset can learn by Lincoln's example: develop what needs to be developed and conserve what needs to be conserved. The town-owned acreage next to the Peppermint Brook watershed that the Selectmen just voted to put into a conservation restriction is an example of this principle. This parcel has little, if any, developable land, no real access, and doesn't perk. The true value of this land to the Town lies in its ability to protect our drinking water supply and conservation is appropriate.

Another example is the CLF's proposed project on Beechwood Street. Some land is being developed to provide moderately priced housing, the remainder of the land will be held in conservation by the CCT with 5-acres set aside for future use by the Town as recreation fields. The landowner receives a fair price, and the Town gets housing, recreation fields and conservation land — all at no cost to the taxpayer. A win-win situation.

Whether Cohasset can mix affordable housing with open space or not, there are other ways to achieve our goals. Opportunities can be found to rehabilitate existing structures into affordable condo or rental units that improve their neighborhoods as well as allow young families or seniors to live in neighborhoods integrated in the community not segregated in age or income restricted developments.

Whatever course the Town takes, somehow, it just feels right to make these decisions ourselves rather than have outsiders or special interests determining Cohasset's future.

Jim Hamilton lives at 298 King St.

Sustainable Cohasset launches film series

Sustainable Cohasset will commence its documentary film series with the first film to be shown in March. There will be three movies in all dealing with energy issues. Two of the films focus on energy issues in the United States and the third documents how Cuba survived an oil embargo.

The first film, "Who Killed the Electric Car," deals with the successful launch of the EV1 by GM's Saturn division. The leased cars were extremely popular and therefore when the leased vehicles were not renewed to their satisfied users, there ensued a unique campaign to return the vehicle to the California highways. Tom Hanks, Phyllis Diller and Jay Leno make appearances in the film. When the EV1 devotees did not succeed they even held a formal funeral. The film brings a humorous note to a serious study of a unique political and social phenomenon.

The public is welcome to view the film at Paul Pratt Memorial Library on Monday, March 19, at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served.

Question of the Week

Despite all the concern about affordable housing over the past 10 years – Cohasset's affordable housing stock is still a little more than 2 percent and the town is still vulnerable to 40B projects. How serious is the affordable housing issue and what can be done about it?

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dormitzer

The income and asset tests for affordable housing that the State Department of Housing and Community Development (DHCD) apply to applicants exclude most Cohasset residents. Affordable housing under Massachusetts General Law (MGL) 40B applies income and asset tests as follows: for rental housing, maximum annual income for a family of two $50,000, and assets $50,000; for ownership housing assets of $150,000. These restrictive qualifications mean that few Cohasset people qualify for affordable housing as defined by the State.

The State has set a goal of 10 percent affordable housing for every community and legislated comprehensive permitting for developers to circumvent local zoning ordinances in order to build their projects. Today in order to meet the 10% goal, Cohasset needs to add 228 affordable housing units. Should the Avalon and Cedarmere developments be completed as proposed, Cohasset would very nearly meet the State requirement.

At issue, however, is that 40B developments, and in particular, Avalon is not a response to a local need but an opportunistic response to a State law. Today, only 85 of the 300 employees of the Town of Cohasset live here. A more enlightened "affordable housing" law might have enabled these non-resident employees to live here with higher and more realistic incomes and assets. We continue to press for a new definition of affordability and welcome support for a more enlightened version.

SELECTMAN/ Paul Carlson

State law requires that 10 percent of housing in each town in the commonwealth meet stringent requirements for "affordable" housing. This law has been in effect for about 10 years with little enforcement. With more active enforcement, the state could require Cohasset, which is at approximately 2 percent, to permit development of affordable housing without the usual oversight from town boards, possibly causing more storm water, traffic, public safety and other problems. Our strongest defense is to show both good faith and real progress on this issue.

If the Avalon project goes forward, the 200 new units would bring us to about 9 percent and some additional smaller projects would bring us into compliance. However, we are rightly concerned that a large project such as Avalon will be very costly for the town, particularly the school and public safety departments. We must carefully prepare for these projects to protect Cohasset from being overburdened by the expenses required to fulfill our responsibilities.

The Cohasset Housing Partnership and the Cohasset Housing Authority are key groups working on this issue for the town. They are looking for solutions that will allow us to show progress. In addition, we should also work with our legislators and with other similar towns to find a legislative solution.

One possible solution for Cohasset is to encourage low-income senior housing. We have large cadres of active and concerned volunteers at the Senior Center and at FISH who can provide many services that may be needed.

We must also remember that few Cohasset residents or town employees will qualify for affordable housing under the income and asset tests, but elderly family members of some residents may.

I fully support affordable housing for those who are qualified. I will work to implement this program while maintaining Cohasset's character, services and affordability for our current friends and neighbors.

Has MCAS helped or hurt Cohasset? And is there a concern that student high-stakes testing hamstrings teacher creativity – forcing teachers to "teach to the test?"

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

The MCAS tests provide us with an objective gauge of how well our children are learning the current curriculum. When properly used, the MCAS tests results can point out areas in need of improvement, whether these areas pertain to an individual student, teacher or encompass a larger problem with the curriculum. And, if any of you have had the pleasure of watching our Curriculum Coordinator, Nancy Mrzyglod walk the School Committee through the results of the MCAS it is clear that our administrative team clearly knows how to use the information provided from the MCAS tests.

I am a firm believer in the value of a quality public school system and equalizing role it plays in our society. Prior to MCAS, there was no real mechanism in place to insure all of our schools were adequately teaching the state mandated curriculum. The MCAS tests can ensure that every student graduating from a public school has a certain level of knowledge and skill by holding the schools accountable for their students performance. Here in Cohasset, MCAS results are only one of many tools used to measure excellence in our public schools. By the way last year, our 10th graders ranked 10th in the State for Math and 14th in the State for English that is compared to 15th (math) and 16th (English) in 2005. Cohasset Public Schools are continuing the commitment to excellence.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Peter Richardsson

The Massachusetts Comprehensive Assessment System (MCAS) was implemented as the Department of Education's response to the Education Reform Law of 1993. The purpose of the testing portion of the law is to identify individual students and school district, which need attention. Also, all students must pass the10th grade level test to earn a diploma. According to a new Department of Education report, a record 89 percent of students in the class of 2008, this year's junior class, have already passed both the English and Math MCAS exams, meeting the state's requirement to earn a high school diploma. Although Cohasset's MCAS scores have slipped lately, from the third rated school in the Commonwealth in 2001 to 16th last year, needing the Commonwealth's attention hardly seems applicable to Cohasset.

The goals for the Cohasset School District are to be rated as a "top ten" school across ten different measures. The testing metrics include the ERBs, the Sanford 10, the SATs, etc. Other metrics include highly competitive college placements, National Merit Scholarship performance, and graduation percentage, where it was recently announced that Cohasset was ranked 3rd last year. In light of Cohasset's lofty expectations, the Commonwealth's imprimatur of the MCAS belies the test's relevance to a district that is competing to be literally the best. The MCAS is not close to the highest hurdle that Cohasset hopes to clear.

Testing is the most important tool used to prepare and evaluate students. Equally important, it helps a district refine and focus its attention and resources. MCAS is a useful tool, but Cohasset should be teaching to the goal, not any test.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For Selectman and School Committee candidates: Town boards have a lot of business to attend to. However, it is the public's business. Even as reporters we face challenges grasping all the issues and at times, boards do not relate well to audience members whether present at the meeting or on TV. What can you do to ensure the government's business is more "user friendly" to the citizenry?

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and should be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

8th grade boys in first as regular season ends

The Cohasset eighth grade boys basketball team finished the Patriot League regular season last weekend with a home win over Abington and a road win against Hanson.

The team ended the season in first place, with a record of 17-1. Playoffs begin this weekend, and the Cohasset eighth grade boys will be striving for postseason success to accompany their regular season accomplishments.

The boys claimed first place during the regular season despite facing tougher, and taller, Patriot League competition throughout their schedule, and the two wins this past weekend exemplified the challenges overcome by the team this season. On Saturday, Abington held a 10-point lead over Cohasset with only four minutes left to play. Fueled by three 3-pointers by guard Robert Jones, Cohasset came from behind to win the game by six.

On Sunday night Cohasset traveled to Hanson to face the team that had taken Cohasset into overtime during their first meeting. The Hanson game was fought in the rebounding trenches, with forward Kelby "KJ" Pontes and center Gabe Seksay grabbing boards and scoring down low to give Cohasset a 13-point lead midway through the first half.

Hanson, however, clawed its way back into the game during the second half, closing to within one point with only a few minutes left. Jones sealed the game for Cohasset from the foul line, calmly sinking free throws to put the game out of reach and assure Cohasset its 17th win.

The team began its season by notching six wins in a row before Christmas, with an overtime win in an away game at Pembroke an early season highlight. The Pembroke game was nip-and-tuck in the early going, with Cohasset guard Anders Goetz applying stifling man-to-man defensive pressure to Pembroke's star point guard while Pontes scored from the high and low posts.

With time expiring, Seksay brought Cohasset from behind with two foul shots to tie the game with about a minute left. In the overtime period, Jones hit a three-pointer from way beyond the arc to put the game away. Pembroke won the rematch in January for the only regular season loss Cohasset has suffered.

Cohasset's other wins have included hard fought victories, by narrow margins, over Quincy at home and away at Weymouth, and another overtime win against in a home game against Hanson. Cohasset forward Sam Richardson, who had eight points in the Weymouth win, sent the Hanson game into overtime with a timely steal that thwarted Hanson's attempt to get off a last-minute game-winning shot. Forward Ben Campbell, who has penetrated the lane and shot well from the outside all season, notched 12 points for Cohasset in the overtime win against Hanson.

Pontes has become a dominant player this year at both the offensive and defensive ends of the court, displaying multiple skills that have thrilled appreciative Cohasset fans and sometimes left opponents simply awestruck.

Offensive contributions have also come from guard Derek Youngman, who bounced back from an early season injury suffered in the first Pembroke game to score 14 points against Quincy; from forward Jack Carrier, who has added a repertoire of high post moves to his consistent rebounding. Jones, who dropped 20 points on Bridgewater at home, Goetz, who scored 13 points against Quincy, are also major contributors to Cohasset's offensive firepower.

Point guard Mike Monaco has emerged as a playmaker this season to help run the Cohasset offense, always ready to hit the high percentage shot and adding spark to the lineup each time he takes the court. Center Eric Wasel has displayed a knack for timely rebounding, and shown the ability to score off of his rebounds and from the low-post. Drew Cobin, who has seen time at both guard and forward, has displayed a reliable jump shot and solid defense.

Swim and dive team's season ends with a splash

Swim and dive team's season ends with a splash

The Scituate-Cohasset swim and dive team held its annual banquet last Thursday evening at Atlantica Restaurant, officially bringing the 2006-07 season to an end.

171), who started on varsity all four years and won a match at this year's states after finishing fourth at sectionals; and Cambi (189), who became only the third Cohasset wrestler to place in All-states twice, and also finished with an outstanding 48-4 record this season and a 110-27 career record.

Cambi will leave to wrestle at Roger Williams University in Bristol, RI, and he, along with all the other seniors, will be greatly missed by this Cohasset squad.

The team will only have two seniors next year as Steve Hurlbut (215) and Nick Secatore (171), were the only two juniors on the team. Hurlbut was voted Most Improved Wrestler on the team and also a league All-Star, and head coach Torin Sweeney looks at Hurlbut to be the team leader next year.

Secatore usually had to wrestle up a weight class or two and often wrestled the other team's best wrestler, but showed great resiliency and did what the team needed him to do.

Sophomore Steven Gratta of Hull was the lone Hull wrestler on the team and finished with a reasonable 9-9 record while battling various injuries. Fellow sophomore David Toomey was one of the seven to be voted a league All-Star and also placed fourth in the 130-pound weight class at sectionals.

The team has a lot of young, raw talent that will be vital in the upcoming years. In the 140-pound weight class alone, three freshmen – Mike Dorion, Andrew Littauer and Jake Wheelwright – all battled it out for varsity matches and will do the same next year. There was also Rookie of the Year for the team, Jack Murphy, who placed sixth in the sectionals at 112.

With these four freshmen, and another five on JV, the team looks well fit to compete for yet another league title. The rest of the power will have to come from the two seniors and eight sophomores, most of whom wrestled varsity.

News and notes

The following is a list of accomplishments submitted by head coach Torin Sweeney:

- 103: Sophomore Rudy Helbock finished the season dual meet season 13-10 and fifth in the sectionals

- 112: Freshman Jack Murphy(Cambi's cousin), dual meet record 15-9 and sixth in the sectinoals

- 119: Senior Ryan McLellan, four-year varsity starter, finished 41-9 this season, including third in the North Quincy tournament, first in Cohasset tourney and South sectional champion. Final career record: 115-38.

- 125: Sophomore Steven Gratta had some nagging injuries but was able to finish with a 9-9 record; the one Hull wrestler we have and he is well worth the co-op team.

- 130: Sophomore David Toomey, 29-19 overall record. Great season finish with a fourth in the sectionals and three days later beat Tim Malloy of Rockland (sectional champ) in the dual meet tournament.

- 135: Sophomore Andrew Liberty finished the season strong with a win in the sectionals and will only get better.

- 140: Three freshman shared this spot: Jake Wheelwright, Andrew Littauer and Mike Dorion, with Dorion getting most of the varsity work. All three will contend for varsity spots next year; it's a talented group of freshmen.

- 145: Senior Adam Smith, three-year varsity starter. Finished 30-10 while nursing a late-season injury. He got healthy enough to take second in the sectionals and fourth in the state in a very tough weight class. Great finish to a career in which he won 80 matches.

- 152: Senior Gannon Dorion was finally was able to get he own varsity sport after spending two years behind state champs David McKenna and his brother, Shane. He made the most of the opportunity and went 31-15 (eight losses at 160) and third in the sectionals. He won a match at the states. An awesome competitor, he will be missed.

- 160: Senior Tim Toomey, 34-15 (nine losses at 171). He could have placed in the state at 152 but chose to help the team by wrestling at 160/171, and he did it well. Tim is a four-year varsity starter and had a great season. He took fourth in the sectionals and won a match at states, finishing his career with 81 varsity wins.

- 171: Junior Nick Secatore, Weigh-in at a light 160 with Toomey so we could cover the 171 weight. Often Nick had to wrestle the other teams best kid and did it well. This is only his second year wrestling so next year he will turn it on; he's a very hard worker.

- 189: Senior Nick Cambi, a two-time New England qualifier, fourth at All-States. Became Cohasset's 10th state champion. He won the sectional tournament and the Cohasset Tournament, finished third at both the Marshfield Tourney and the North Quincy Tournament.

- 215: Junior Steve Hurlbut took third in the sectionals and second in the Cohasset tourney; also took sixth ay North Quincy. He had a great season and finished 34-17. He was voted the Most Improved Wrestler on the team. He will be the team leader next season!

- 215: Freshman Nick Lieberman came on board later in the season after a football injury healed. It was well worth it. He gained valuable experience and won some matches. He's a good, hard worker that could be a state place winner with hard work.

- Swing man (145/152) Sophomore Mike Froio, 12-6 record. His biggest match came with a win over Carver's Mike Babbon in the league championship match. Froio's win, a 7-5 victory, was the upset we needed to finish off Carver that evening.

- Another swing man, Ross Collins-Wooley, also earned his second varsity letter, working in the line while Smith was injured. Ross is a good competitor and will vie for a varsity spot next season.

- 152: Senior Rob Brady joined the team last season and became a good wrestler but couldn't crack the experienced lineup. His efforts and commitment to the team where much appreciated.

- Rounding out the squad: Freshmen Matt Dooley, Sean McCarthy, David Hurlbut and Christian Brady, and sophomores Zach Troup and Chris O'Grady.

boys a bye during the first round of the playoffs tomorrow. They take the court in the semifinal round on Sunday afternoon in a game that will be played at Hull High School. While playoff game times were not known as this story went to press, locations and game times for the playoffs will be posted on the Patriot League website (www.geocities.com/patriotleague2001).

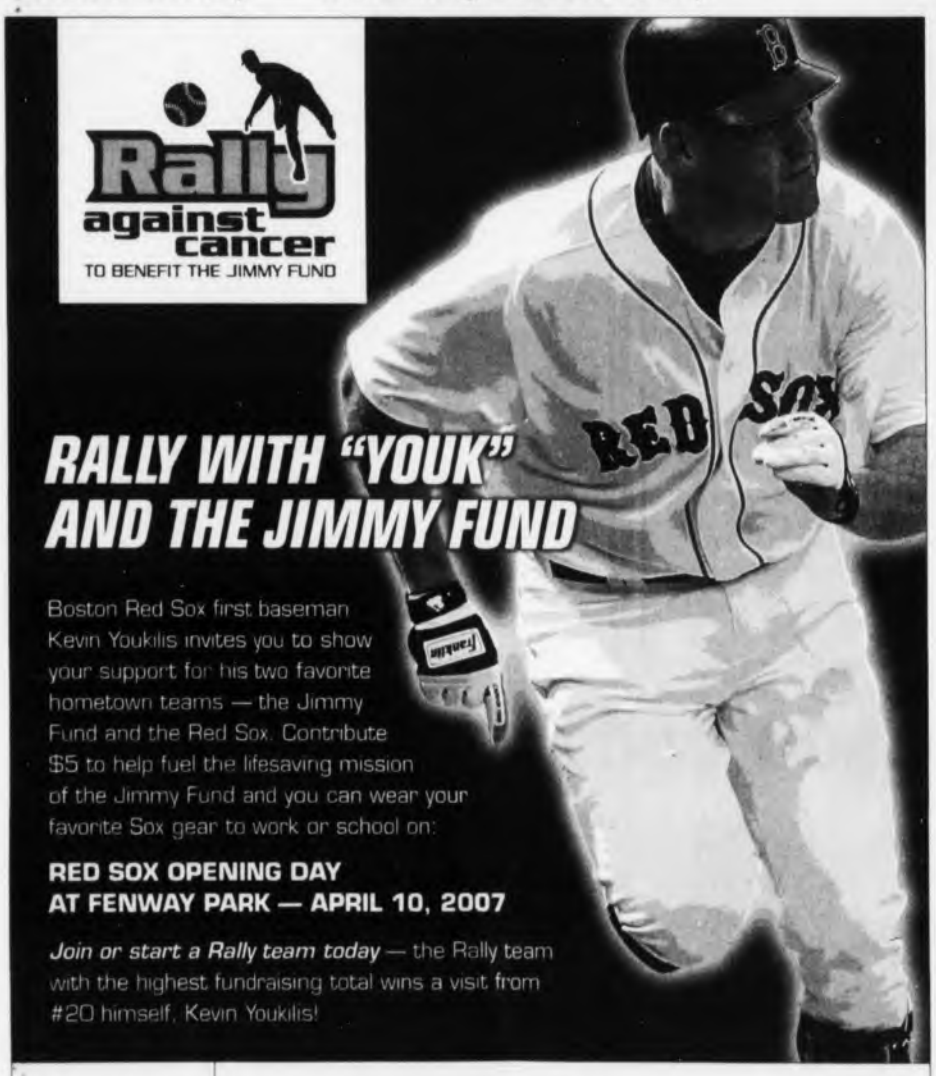
7th grade boys against Abington - Patriot League

The Grade 7 boys played the talented Abington team this past Saturday at Cohasset High School. Although they were defeated by double digits, the boys played a very solid offensive game against one of the Patriot League leaders.

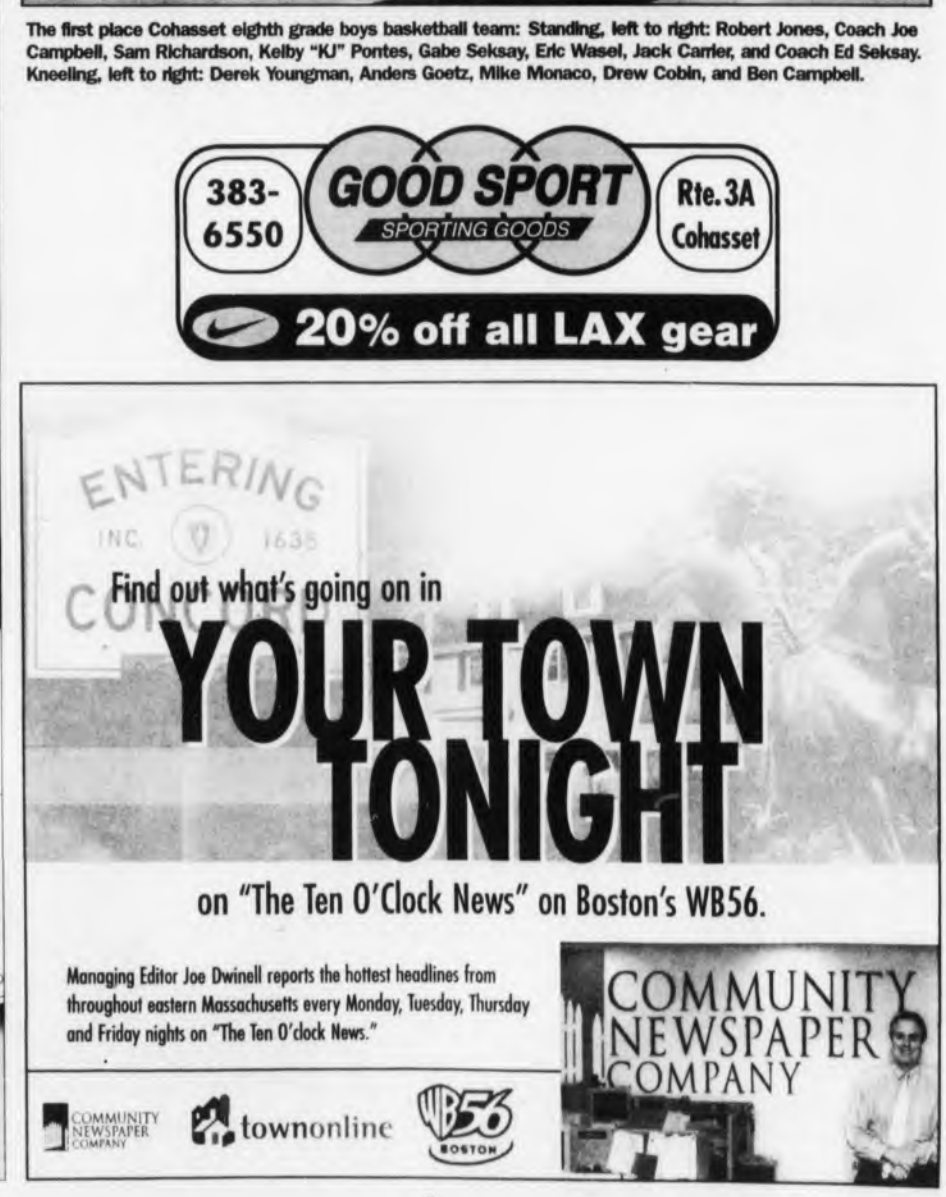
Abington got off to an early lead, as they worked their inside game to their advantage. The front line of Robbie Mahoney, Chris Murphy and Jay Salerno were undersized, but they played tough enough to keep the game within reach.

The offense was slow to start, but they began to put points on the board, with Jamie Faber and Murphy contributing with baskets outside and inside. Faber continued to play very well from the two-guard spot, as he played active defense. He also took what the Abington defense gave him, alternately taking the outside shot and slashing to the basket.

After Abington went on a run to take a comfortable lead, the boys continued to be aggressive offensively. Pat Kearney heated up from the outside, hitting two three-pointers in the first half, and Patrick MacCormack hit a nice jumper from the lane after he drove in. Mahoney continued to be the force inside and Salerno continued the battle, as well.



Morgan McCarthy pulled down some tough offensive boards, and he and Chris Lunde kept the passing game flowing. Kyrel Jaundoo was persistent on defense, as he continually disrupted passing lanes and slowed the Abington break. He also finished off a nice fast break with a lay-in.



In the second half, Cohasset continued to score consistently. They moved the ball around the perimeter, they caused turnovers leading to the fast break, and they hit some outside shots. Kearney drained another three from the wing, and MacCormack stuck his second jumper from inside the paint.

Faber and MacCormack continued to harass the Abington wings, and Faber ended the game on a high, completing a traditional three as the bell sounded.

Sports Notes

Cohasset Recreation offers USCGA Boating Safety Course

United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a two-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for those 16 years old and younger who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. USCGA instructors will teach the two-session course, which will take place on two consecutive Saturdays, May 12 and May 19, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Road, Cohasset.

To register, call Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 as soon as possible, as the class will be limited by size, and participants will be enrolled on a first-call basis. There will be a $45 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the textbooks and class materials. The fee will be payable at the first class, and checks will be payable to the Coast Guard director.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children age 12 and younger be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of this class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft.

State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

South Shore Arthritis Walk

The Arthritis Foundation seeks walkers of all ages to form teams for the sixth annual South Shore Arthritis Walk, the Arthritis Foundation's nationwide walk event that raises awareness and crucial funds to fight arthritis, the nation's number one cause of disability.

The walk will take place Sunday, May 6, at Plimoth Plantation in Plymouth and is open to both teams and individuals. This annual event raises funds for critical arthritis research and for community health programs that help people in Massachusetts live better with arthritis until a cure is found.

In Massachusetts alone, 1.5 million adults have arthritis and 3,000 children have juvenile arthritis. The Arthritis Walk features a fully accessible one-mile walk and a three-mile walk, followed by a post-walk celebration.

To register or for information, call Terri Fedrow at the Arthritis Foundation at 617-219-8220 or visit www.southshorearthritiswalk.kintera.org.

Swim and dive team's season ends with a splash

been broken and re-established during this season. The seniors were presented with senior gifts—a navy fleece blanket with the team logo.

Fortin also presented the 2006-07 MVP (Most Valuable Participant) awards for the season. The boys MVP award was presented to senior captain Justin Damaso for his "invaluable leadership, commitment and contributions to the team."

The girls MVP award was presented to Little, the only member of the girls team to qualify for state final competition in an individual event.

"Megan is an incredibly hard worker and is without a doubt a future leader of this team," Fortin said.

For a touch of humor Fortin presented the MRT (Most Restless Traveler) award to freshman Caitlin Mahoney and senior Brent Daly. The team travels 30 minutes each way to and from the pool for practice.

For his impressive display of sportsmanship during the boys 400 freestyle relay at the Sstate final meet, Daly was re-presented with a bronze medal to replace the medal that he gave up after his race to injured teammate, senior Colin Conway.

"The team knows that if it weren't for the hard work that Colin put in all season, the relay team wouldn't have gotten as far as it did," Daly had explained at the state event.

Conway swam the second leg of that relay in every meet this year, including state sectionals, and it was heartbreaking to him when he dislocated his shoulder swimming the 200-free event 30 minutes before the start of the 440-free relay.

Fortin said he had "never been as impressed as when Brent Daly told me he was giving up his medal. Those boys swam that race for Colin and broke that league record. They ended up with a third place finish at state finals, a new team record and shattered the old league record from the beginning of the season by five seconds. As far as this team is concerned, we have the state's only five-member 400-freestyle relay team."

To wrap up the evening, team captains Damaso, Rob Lilly, Alyssa Campbell and Sheelah Scott made team presentations and individually thanked Fortin for all his hard work, leadership and guidance.

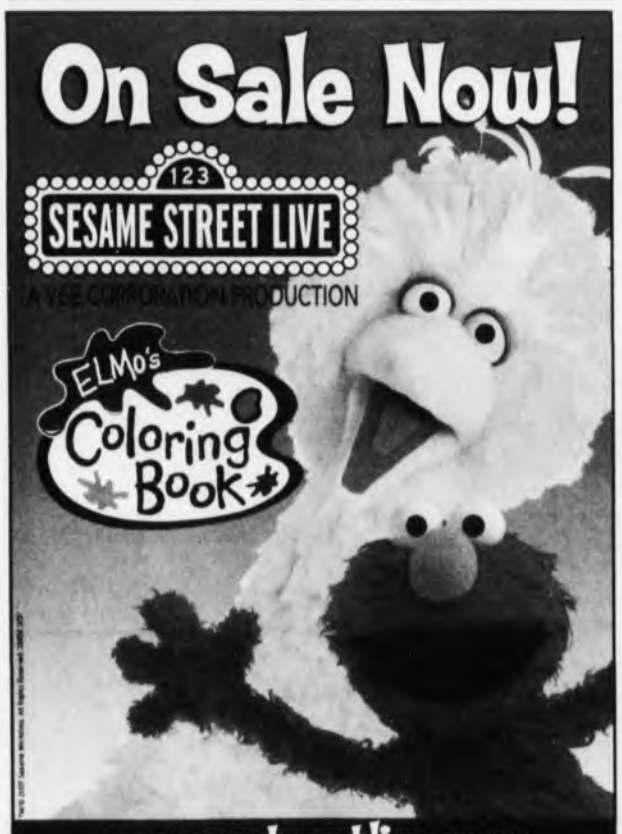
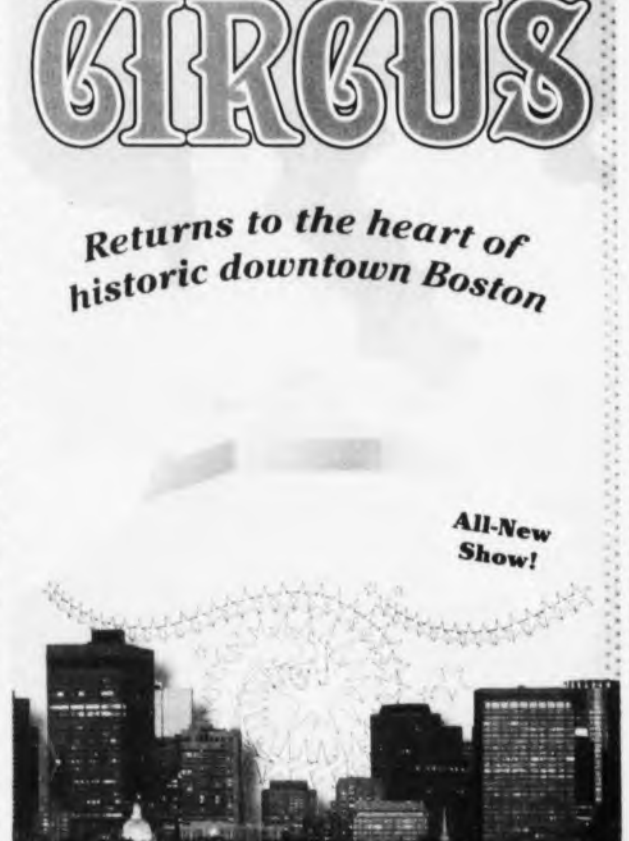
To honor his efforts for the past two years as head coach, Fortin was presented with a scrapbook that included newspaper articles, photographs and notes and letters from current and past team members.



The evening was topped with the surprise presentation of a team banner, made by Eagle Flag, to be used at all meets and team events. The team logo – a lighthouse with waves flowing from both towns – "represents the unbreakable bond that joins this group of student-athletes together. At the end of a stressful week and at the end of a hard season, what always makes me smile is how well this group gets along," said Fortin.

The coach continued to say, "My seniors leave telling me that they will never forget their years as a Sci-Coh and that they have gained 40 best friends. From day one this program has always been more than just winning meets and sending kids to states. It's been about working together to set our goals. It's been about acting as one united force through the support we give each and every member of this team.



"We all celebrate our successes together, because as one team we can accomplish so much. I think we have all realized tonight that this swim program is a family and I am honored to be the coach."

Informal screenings for children slated

The Osgood Preschool staff in conjunction with the school nurse will hold informal screenings for children on the third Friday of every month from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. The remaining dates are March 16, April 27, and May 18.

These screenings will consist of a play group activity as well as opportunities for vision, hearing and posture screening. These screenings are to assist in identifying those students who should be referred for an evaluation to determine eligibility for special education.

If you are interested in having your child participate, contact one of the preschool staff at 781-383-6117 no later than the Wednesday prior to one of the scheduled screenings.

Advanced driver training for teens

In Control Advanced Driver Training will partner with the not-for-profit Massachusetts Automobile Dealers Charitable Foundation to train nearly 700 South Shore teens in 2007 in SkidSchool, an advanced driver training program emphasizing the art of accident avoidance.

The Charitable Foundation subsidizes $50 of the cost of each teen's registration fee, making ICADT's class, taught at the Naval Air Base in South Weymouth, more affordable to local teens.

The Charitable Foundation's next classes with ICADT will be offered Sunday, March 25, and Saturday, April 7. Classes take place from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1 to 5:30 p.m.

In one four-hour course, certified instructors teach teens how to make panic stops and emergency lane changes, how to avoid tailgating accidents and how to handle a car in dangerous conditions such as ice and snow.

SkidSchool was launched in 2001 by Sandy Stevens of Stevens Advanced Driver Training and the Charitable Foundation, a nonprofit funded by Massachusetts auto dealers committed to giving back to their community. The Foundation now works with In Control Advanced Driver Training to offer classes.

The Charitable Foundation subsidizes a portion of the cost of SkidSchool for each student, and is currently enrolling students in classes across the commonwealth. For more information, call 617-451-1051, visit skidschool.org of email driving@msada.org.

This is not a school function.

There will be grade seven and eight only dances during April. Exact date to be announced.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

HOMESICKNESS PREVENTION TIPS:

1. KNOW whether your child is ready for a separation from home. Discuss this topic with your child. Realize that your child may be ready before you are! If you are unsure, get advice from your child's doctor—but not in front of your child.
2. INVOLVE the child in helping to choose the camp. This provides a sense of control and minimizes any feeling of being sent away.
3. LEARN more about the camp and what to expect. Attend Open Houses or camp gatherings in your area. Read and follow every bit of information the camp sends you about what to expect, what to do to prepare for camp, and what and what not to bring. Read and reread brochures, visit the Web site frequently, watch DVDs more than once. Identify specific activities or traditions the child looks forward to experiencing. Make a list of these and pack the list with other items bound for camp.
4. MEET counselors and other campers if possible. Open Houses and camp gatherings are scheduled to familiarize campers and families with the people who will be at camp and with the camp itself. A familiar face can make all the difference on the first day of camp.
5. TALK about homesickness; make sure the camper knows that these feelings are normal. Research shows that homesickness is a universal experience—everyone experiences some level of it. Plan together to pack much more than clothing and equipment for camp—you can also pack strategies your child can use when homesickness happens.
6. PRACTICE sleeping away from home! Try a three night stay with relatives or friends. Try it without phone calls; instead practice writing a letter or two.
7. NOTE how important notes and letters can be. If your child doesn't write letters regularly, practice now. Use written messages around your home so the child can practice responding to a letter. Write a lunch box note with a question and ask the child to respond in writing. Remember, notes are fine and they are better than nothing; long letters just may not arrive from camp! Have the camper choose some note cards or stationery and have a mailing party to get them pre-addressed and stamped. If you are not in the habit of sending a lot of letters, get going! Write some ahead of time and post them before the camper leaves for camp.
8. EXPRESS optimism, not anxiety or ambivalence about the up-coming camp experience. Children find comments like, "I hope you will be okay." and "What will I do without you?" to be worrisome. Preoccupying the child with worries about home while away could sabotage the experience. Your optimism will be contagious. Focus on why you chose the camp you did and all there is to look forward to doing and experiencing there.
9. HAVE your child mark off each day of the camp session on a calendar. Children like to see how many days they will be away. This helps them to understand how going to camp fits into the summer plan for the family.
10. CONTINUE with medications used throughout the school year. Medicine for attention, behavior or psychological conditions is as important at camp as it is at school. Don't use camp as an excuse to take a "drug holiday." Prepare the camper and the camp's nurse or counselors to know the medication schedule and the importance of sticking to it.
11. CREATE a plan with the camper for what to do if homesickness hits!

Cayman Islands – a grand experience

By Mark Skala

Another Cayman day ends in a spectacular sunset.

Stingrays have received a bad rap following the death of croc hunter Steve Irwin.

At least that's the view of Capt. Allen Ebanks, who runs a charter boat in Grand Cayman. The charismatic captain reminds passengers that the fish found in Stingray City in the beautiful waters off Grand Cayman aren't what killed Irwin last year.

"They are quite calm and no problem, man," he said in his decidedly Caribbean accent.

And he should know. He's been taking tourists and residents on trips to Stingray City — a popular destination — for many years. As our traveling group soon learned he is well versed in many Cayman subjects.

At first we approached our venture with him with a bit of trepidation. He didn't have the fancy, well-equipped catamaran like many of the more popular tour operators. But he wasn't lacking in expertise or island charm. He and his first mate Bradley — a young Cayman man who came to life the minute he jumped in the water — proved to be the perfect hosts for our snorkeling adventures in Stingray City, the coral reefs and coral gardens.

It should be on the top of the list for every visitor to Grand Cayman. The island is a different experience from the water. You become one with the environment — basking in the sun, savoring the warm ocean breezes, marveling at the azure blue water, and spotting fish a plenty.

And he was right about the stingrays; they show little interest in their human visitors. They swim up to you or around you; you are in their territory after all. If you stand or swim quietly they swim around or with you. They even let you feed them squid, but be prepared: they have a keen sense of smell and keep coming back for more food. First mate Bradley lifted them right out of the water so we got an up-close view of them.

Snorkeling and diving are, of course, key activities in Grand Cayman, as are myriad other water sports (sailing, kayaking, jet skiing). The island, like many in the Caribbean, also has a laid back approach to life. If you choose to do nothing, that's OK too.

It's a perfect location to sit back, read a good book, tune out with an iPod, and for many it's a chance to catch up on all the gossip magazines. One of the most popular spots on the island is Seven-Mile Beach, a long span of white sand and knock-you-out-gorgeous blue water. Paradise does come with a price, though — there are crowds and endless hotels and condos along the stretch of beach.

A true gem amid the high rises is The Villas at the Galleon. The villas are nestled between the ultra-chic and expensive Ritz Grand Cayman and the upscale and pricey Westin Resort and Casuarina. The complex has one-, two- or three-bedroom units that are all well - equipped and offer some stunning views of the water. Many of the units are rentable and, like much of the island, the complex is finally recovering from the ravages of Hurricane Ivan in 2004. Ivan wreaked significant damage on the island and more and more tourists are finally returning after a two-year hiatus.

After a day at the beach, snorkeling or shopping downtown, all focus turns to your rumbling stomach. You won't be at a loss for tempting cuisine. The island boasts numerous eating establishments, from fine dining to outdoor casual restaurants. You'll want to check out Eduardo's, an Italian eatery along the busy Seven-Mile Beach thoroughfare, nestled amid a strip mall. But don't let the outside fool you. Inside, there is a distinct Tuscan feel, with a Caribbean flair. The menu selections are plentiful, the portions generous and the prices reasonable.

Another stop worth the trip is the casual restaurant at the Ritz, called Periwinkle's. The service is impeccable, the ambiance first rate, and considering it's the Ritz, the prices are modest.

When day breaks, it's back to the beach for more swimming, walking and exercise – just in time to work up another appetite. The routine never gets tedious and time goes quickly. You'll be planning next year's trip even before the plane leaves the island tarmac.

Travel tips

- Bring your wallet. Grand Cayman isn't cheap. Paradise does come at a price, but it's worth it. Grand Cayman uses Cayman Island currency (CI), and the exchange rate is about 80 cents U.S. for $1 CI. Most places take U.S. money, but give you CI change.
- Definitely seek out Capt. Allen Ebanks for your snorkeling or Sting Ray City visit. He's a true Cayman character who shows you a side to the island you won't find aboard the chain operations. He's well known among the locals.
- The Villas of the Galleon are a nice change of pace from the pricey hotels and while not cheap, the condos are well appointed and right on the beach where you'll find umbrellas and lounge chairs for your exclusive use. (www.villasofthegalleon.com)
- Driving can be a bit treacherous, since it is a British Island and you drive on the opposite side of the road. Think taxis.

Despite their bad rap, stingrays are more playful than you might think. Here, first mate Bradley, part of Capt. Allen Ebanks' team, lifts up the fish to show the underbelly where the mouth is located.

'Scoundrels' finds success in Boston

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

When the creative team behind the stage version of "The Full Monty" — composer and lyricist David Yazbek, director Jack O'Brien, and choreographer Jerry Mitchell — decided to re-team on 2005's "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels," they may still have had the overwhelming success of Mel Brooks' musical "The Producers" fresh in their minds. After all, "The Full Monty" had opened to rave reviews in the fall of 2000, but when "The Producers" debuted in the spring of 2001, it became the must-see hit of that season. It also went on to win more Tony Awards than any other musical in Broadway history, beating "The Full Monty" in no fewer than 10 categories in which both shows were nominated.

Like "The Producers," which starred Nathan Lane and Matthew Broderick as swindling Broadway producers, "Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" also gets most of its laughs from the unlikely pairing of two competing con men who cheat unsuspecting women out of their money. When it opened in New York, the show starred John Lithgow and Norbert Leo Butz as the charlatans who set up shop on the French Riviera. Based on the 1988 feature film of the same name, "Scoundrels" found success as a stage musical, although it met its own Tony Awards nemesis when it went up against a little show called "Spamalot."

While it has since closed in New York, "Scoundrels" is on a national tour now at Boston's Opera House, and even though the production has been downscaled for the road, the show retains its clever humor and charm.

Freddy Benson (D.B. Bonds) and Lawrence Jameson (Tom Hewitt) celebrate after another successful con job.

As Lawrence Jameson, the suave, insincere elder statesman of scam, Tom Hewitt seems to be modeling his performance on the late Jack Cassidy. While Hewitt lacks Lithgow's captivating comedy twinkle, he is nonetheless a dashing ne'er-do-well whose longstanding prowess as a ladies' man is easy to understand. As the younger, rougher-around-the-edges Freddy Benson, D. B. Bonds has some big shoes to fill. Butz won the 2005 Tony Award for Best Actor in a Musical for the role, and he also played the part for the first few months of the current tour. Butz was an unkempt, uncool musical comedy force of nature who stole almost every scene he was in. Bonds wisely crafts his own take on Freddy, complete with manic head bobs and hilarious facial contortions. Northampton native and Boston Conservatory graduate Laura Marie Duncan, who has one of the best voices in the show, is a delight as the supposed soap heiress who becomes the conquest over whom the con men choose to cross swords.

Even with Michael Caine and Steve Martin in the lead roles, the movie version of "Scoundrels" was only so good and the same must be said for its musical progeny. Yazbek has written some catchy, up-tempo numbers - including the sensational "Great Big Stuff" - but too few are truly memorable. O'Brien does his usual first-rate job directing and keeps the action moving even when some of Mitchell's unnecessary dance interludes take things off track. Scenic designer David Rockwell has created an impressive array of sets and scene changes on what appears to have been a tight budget. Gregg Barnes has done less well with costumes. Duncan's outfits are ill-fitting and Hewitt closes the show in an inexplicably shiny suit.

"Dirty Rotten Scoundrels" will be at the Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through March 18. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 617-931-2787 or log on to broadwayacrossamerica.com.

War as eye candy

300 (B-)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

The abs are steel, the pecs titanium and the glutes bronze, and if they gave Academy Awards for cutting a fine figure of a near-naked man, Gerard Butler's King Leonidas would win pants-down.

"300," an adaptation of Frank Miller's ("Sin City") critically acclaimed 1999 graphic novel directed by Zack Snyder ("Dawn of the Dead"), is a fanboy beefcake lollapalooza.

A retelling of the Greek story of the 300 Spartans who held off a vast Persian army at a pass in Thermopylae known as the Hot Gates in 480 B.C., the film is remarkably faithful to Miller's visuals and worth seeing for that reason alone.

This is homoerotic eye candy on steroids, complete with a sibyl from Scores who prophesies as she strips. "300" is a much more stylized retelling of this story than the otherwise good, 1962 sword-and-sandal effort "The 300 Spartans."

In the vision of these new filmmakers, Sparta is a total military culture. At age 7, boys are taken from their mothers and sent to gladiatorial school. Every Spartan is a citizen-soldier first and foremost. Athenians, according to one Spartan authority, are a bunch of "philosophers and boy lovers."

Young Leonidas' first test of manhood occurs when he is left in a blizzard with a loincloth and a spear. The boy encounters a giant, famished wolf and lures the creature into a crevasse, where he kills it. It's a lesson worth remembering.

Forty years later, Leonidas (Butler, who brings Miller's graphic vision to startling life) is king of Sparta. The queen (resplendently, unapologetically sexy Lena Headey), his wife, is almost as tough as he is. When a multiply-pierced Persian messenger insults the queen and threatens Leonidas, the die is cast, and so is the messenger, into a bottomless well.

"300" is a complete glorification of combat, and its most exciting scenes depict wholesale slaughter and an ecstasy of killing. Some viewers, however, may find its gung-ho message — the idea this band of brothers must stay the course against hopeless odds — troubling and out of touch with the times.

While the virtual environments are riveting, dialogue and scenes of court intrigue are borderline camp. "Rome," by comparison, is Shakespeare. Even "Gladiator" was higher-brow.

"300" also pits pre-Aryan icons against hordes of dusky, swarthy types from the Middle East and Africa, flagrantly exploiting xenophobic stereotypes. Xerxes (Brazilian actor Rodrigo Santoro, whose voice sounds dubbed), a "King of Kings" on a quest to conquer the world, is a giant drag queen in elaborate bondage gear. The film's most odious traitor is physically deformed. Its heroes are uniformly handsome, even beautiful caucasian men who would happily die for one another.

"300," the Third Reich gives a big thumb's up.

Rated R. "300' contains nudity and extreme, graphic violence.

"GRBAVICA: THE LAND OF MY DREAMS" (B+)

When it comes to messy mother-daughter relationships, it's hard to beat Esma and Sara, two unforgettable females struggling for survival in "Grbavica: The Land of My Dreams." Esma (Mirjana Karanovic) works two jobs to support herself and Sara (Luna Mijovic), her troubled 12-year-old daughter. Sara can qualify for a discount for a class trip if she can produce a certificate that says her father was a war martyr, but Esma wants to pay full price.

Hyun-seo (Ko A-sung) searches for a way out of a hideous monster's lair in "The Host."

Sara slowly begins to realize there is more to her mother than meets the eye. Despite the somber cinematography and slow-moving script, this is an elegant and haunting tale. (Not Rated)

— Chelsea Bain

"THE HOST" (A-)

"The Host" is everything a movie monster should be. This mutant tadpole is ugly and ferocious and pops up at the worst times from Seoul's Han River. It snatches people, but it doesn't always devour them. It keeps some alive in a squalid, bone-filled, makeshift prison, the better for late-night snacking. Writer-director Bong Jooh-ho concentrates on a working-class family who come perilously close to being dinner. In a way that echoes "Alien" and great American chase films but never seems imitative, Bong relentlessly charges ahead, using comic relief to emphasize the absurdity of this catastrophe. (Rated R)

Principal Gauley to leave Deer Hill

Formal resignation has not been received

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"In just a short time, he has done a great deal for the community."
— Denise Walsh, Superintendent of Schools

The Deer Hill School Principal Keith Gauley has accepted a position as principal at one of two elementary schools in the Brewster, Mass. school district. The Eddy Elementary School is for grades 3-5, similar to Deer Hill. A formal resignation letter has yet to be received by the Superintendent's office, but that is the next step in the process. The School Committee will then need to accept his resignation and mutually agree with Gauley on an end date.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh says that typically the end date is July 1, which allows ample time for a transition period. Once the resignation is accepted, the School Committee will need to set out a plan to fill the principal's position at Deer Hill. It is likely that this will be formally discussed at the April School Committee Meeting.

Gauley will succeed a retiring principal at the relatively new elementary school that opened in 1997. His connection to the town of Brewster goes back a decade. Gauley has worked as the assistant director of programs at Cape Cod Sea Camps located in Brewster for more than 10 years.

"We knew [Cape Cod] was where we wanted to be," he said in an interview with the Cape Codder, which is one of the Cohasset Mariner's sister newspapers. Gauley expects to continue his position at the Cape Cod Sea Camp during summers, in addition to his duties as principal.

"I am going from one great community to another," Gauley said, praising the students, teachers and parents of Deer Hill School and the Cohasset community.

"If Mr. Gauley gives his resignation it would be a tremendous loss to Cohasset schools and the children of Cohasset. In just a short time, he has done a great deal for the community," said Walsh when reached on Tuesday.

Six CPC projects Seek TM approval

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Town Meeting voters will face the task of "unpacking" a suitcase article put forward by the Community Preservation Committee for multiple projects over the next year. The article (number 7 on the Town Warrant) includes projects related to two town-owned buildings, a collapsed culvert, Historical Society restoration and proposed park's parking lot,

The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) has heard presentations from six applicants over the last few weeks and determined if the project's objectives jive with the goals of the CPC. Each recommended project and proposed allocation amount will be presented by the CPC and interested party at the Town Meeting. The complete list of funding recommendations is not included in the Warrant sent out to households this week, because the recommendations were not completed until after the warrant went to print earlier this month (see complete listing of recommended projects).

According to Town Manager Bill Griffin the CPC recommendations will be presented under one article, but each recommendation will be voted on separately. Using that method, each project will receive the opportunity for discussion and some may get approval through town meeting while others may not.

The Community Preservation Act's funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.). The CPC funds are independent from the town's budget.

Funds from the Community Preservation Act can be spent in three specific areas: open space, community housing, and historic preservation. Each year, the CPC must spend or bank 10 percent of its annual revenue on each of the three specific areas. Aside from minor administrative costs, the CPC does not spend money. The CPC only

Relay dedicated to Representative Murray

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I know she will be up there smiling down on us with those blue eyes of hers; this would mean a lot to her"
— Lillian Curley,
Rep. Murray's daughter

Mary Jeanette Murray loved the Relay for Life. Since Cohasset established its own relay in 1996, Murray attended. This year, she will be there again, but only in spirit. This year's relay has been dedicated in her honor.

Her life's work was to serve the towns and citizens of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, which she did for 12 consecutive terms as their state representative. She brought a tireless energy to her position and unwavering sense of dedication to her constituents. Murray passed away after a battle with cancer in October 2006, at the age of 81. Like many of the local events she supported, the Relay was an occasion she never missed.

"She was there flipping pancakes on Saturday morning," said Relay Chairman Harry St. Onge, "and she would enlist the National Guard to help set up the Relay's tents. Mary Jeanette was just one of those special people."

Stephanie Landry, a friend and aide to Rep. Murray for eight years, was working with her in the State House when the American Cancer Society approached the Representative about hosting the Relay for Life.

"In the beginning Rep. Murray was the chief sponsor of the relay," Landry says. Murray put together a team and recruited other organizations, like the Hull Fire Department who are still participating, to get involved. Murray's team set up a large "bubble tent" and decorated it with Representative Murray bumper stickers. "The name glowed in the dark so we would be able to find our tent at night," she says with a laugh.

Landry recalls how Rep. Murray would go home in the evening to sleep in her bed and leave her team in the tent,

Students make 'comfort dolls' for kids in Africa

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In the modern age of technology, many teens socialize using computers after-school - downloading music, instant messaging, blogging, sharing pictures - it's the new way to communicate. But a new club at the high school, founded by sophomore Molly Gilbert, puts all that aside each Wednesday and gets back to traditional socialization. The group, up to about 20 participants, is the Knitting Club. And they are knitting for a good cause too — the CHABHA (Children Affected by HIV/AIDS) project to benefit kids in Africa..

Gilbert was spurred on to start the club when her mother, Staci Gilbert, brought home a "Duduza" (or comfort) doll from her knitting class at The Creative Stitch a few weeks ago.

"My first thought was 'this is so cute, I want to make one'," says Molly. The dolls are about eight inches high and are designed to fit into a child's hand. They are made with to fit the culture of the ultimate owners, with brown skin and brightly colored clothing. The dolls will embark on a trip to Kigali, Rwanda and end their journey in the hands of a child whose

Dirt bikes must follow rules of road

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A youth on a dirt bike had to push his bike home following a complaint from a caller on Scofield Road about him racing around the area last week.

Police Chief James Hussey explained that dirt bikes are not considered motor vehicles because their engines are too small. However, there are rules, he said. In order to operate a dirt bike, the individual must have a learner's permit; a special registration sticker; and obey all traffic laws on roadways.

Dirt bikes are not permitted to go more than 25 mph, cannot have passengers, and cannot be operated after dusk, he said.

Hussey said police are following up with the boy's parents to make sure he is aware of the rules.

Storm crashes

There were two motor vehicle crashes during last week's snowstorm. At 3:02 p.m. on Friday (March 16), a 2001 Toyota SUV slid down the hill on Jerusalem Road. The operator could not correct the steering and the vehicle collided with a utility pole. The vehicle was towed and no one was injured.

The second crash occurred at 10:47 p.m. last Friday. A 2000 Chevy Cavalier heading south on 3A started to slide on the wet surface, crossed over into the northbound lane, almost making a 180-degree turn. The rear of the vehicle ended up on top of the guardrail on the northbound side. There were no injuries. A wrecker was called to lift the Cavalier off the guardrail; the car did not have to be towed.

Junior operator

At 1:48 a.m. on Sunday (March 18). A passerby saw a 2002 BMW that had gone into a pole near the area of 40 Atlantic Ave. The airbag was deployed but there was no one in the car. Police said the BMW crossed the solid yellow line hitting pole #17 on the opposite side of the road.

A short time after police arrived the operator returned with a parent, who was the registered owner of the car. Based on the officer's investigation, the teenage girl, who had a junior operator's license, was charged with leaving the scene after causing property damage. She was cited for marked lanes violation and for operating outside the hours permitted for junior operators.

Youth charged

A Cohasset teen faces marijuana and alcohol charges following an investigation at his home. Police said the teen's mother called and asked to see an officer. She was concerned that her son was using alcohol and drugs. She invited officers in and further investigation revealed plastic bags containing about 2 ounces of marijuana.

Police are charging the teen with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute because of evidence that the marijuana was being packaged for sale. The youth also had beer in his possession, police said.

Cars egged

There were two reports in the police log over the past week of cars being egged. The first occurred at 3:43 p.m. Monday (March 12) on Border Street. The victim contacted police and wanted the incident logged just in case there were further incidents. At this time police believe it was an isolated event, Chief Hussey said.

The second incident occurred in the Shaw's parking lot and was reported by a parent who said his son's car was egged while he was at work at the plaza. The report came in at 9:17 p.m. on Sunday (March 18).

A witness provided a plate number of the vehicle involved in the egging and Cohasset police are following up to determine who is responsible, Hussey said. Police will also see if it is related to the other incident.

Shoplifting

Police responded to a report from Joseph's Hardware about the potential shoplifting of a power tool. An employee believed a man put the power toll into his vehicle, left the scene, and headed toward Scituate. Scituate police pulled the vehicle over but were unable to find evidence that anything was stolen and did not recover the tool. The incident occurred at 11:36 a.m. Wednesday (March 14).

The alleged shoplifter was issued an immediate no trespass order not to return to the store, police said.

Loud party

Police responded to a report of a loud party on Highland Avenue last Thursday (March 15) at 2:10 p.m. The anonymous caller reported there was underage drinking going on. Police were invited in and did not see any evidence of drinking and there was no loud music. However, Chief Hussey said police welcome tips and will follow up.

Parking complaint

The 15-minute parking limit in front of Tedeschi's is there for a reason, Chief Hussey said. "It is a convenience store and customers, therefore, need the convenience of being able to park out front," he said.

However, at times in the early evening those going to the Red Lion Inn park in the village rather than the town lot or Red Lion Inn parking lot, taking parking away from the storefront. Police followed up with the Red Lion Inn. The manager said signs would be posted asking customers not to use village street parking.

Car off road

A motorist who had her license for less than a week was heading southbound on North Main Street just past the railroad tracks when she drifted out of her lane and then overcompensated, police said. She turned sharply to get back onto the right side, and then skidded off the road, over the shoulder and into the water. The accident occurred at about 6:45 p.m. on Tuesday (March 20).

She was alone in the car and was cited for failure to stay within marked lanes. No one was injured, police said.

Water problem

Fire Chief Robert Silvia said the water problems reported at 9:45 a.m., on Saturday (March 17) at a building on Chief Justice Cushing Highway were caused by major roof leaks due to the combination of snow and heavy rain. "Water leaked into numerous electrical devices," he said. "The fire department shut down the electricity and called for the wiring inspector to inspect the wiring and electrical equipment."

The Cohasset Mariner wins prestigious newspaper award

The Cohasset Mariner was honored with a Publick Occurrences award from the New England Newspaper Association for the paper's in-depth coverage last year of the Cohasset override.

The award, presented last Friday in Boston, is named after the first newspaper published in the American Colonies more than 300 years ago. The royal governor of Boston shut the paper down after only one issue.

The Mariner was the only weekly among 10 papers from New England selected to receive this prestigious award for "superior achievement" in reporting on a particular subject. Some of the other papers honored with the award included the Hartford Courant, the Maine Sunday Telegram, and the Portsmouth Herald.

The judges, all Neiman fellows at Harvard University, said the breadth of coverage of the school budget override impressed them. The judges said the Publick Occurrences award is being given to the Cohasset Mariner for its "solid and thorough coverage of a major tax increase for the people of this community."

The staff, including reporter Samantha Brown, editor Mary Ford, photographers Robin Chan, Craig Goedecke and Laura Sinclair, and cartoonist Jim Hamilton all contributed to the body of work.

"It takes a team of dedicated people to put out a quality paper every week and we are so fortunate to have that on our Mariner staff," said Mark Skala, editor in chief for CNC/South. "We have a very discerning audience in Cohasset who expects the best, and we strive each week to deliver that. This award for our election coverage, in a small but important way, acknowledges that our efforts are well worth it."

This is the second time in two years that the Cohasset Mariner has won this esteemed award. In March 2005, the Cohasset Mariner was recognized with a Publick Occurrences award for its exhaustive series of stories on the abuse of power by a local police chief and town manager.

The awards luncheon was part of the newspaper association's annual convention at the Marriott Long Wharf in Boston.

NENA, founded in 1981, is the regional professional organization for newspapers in the six New England states. Its principal mission is to provide education and information to the New England newspaper industry.

Absentee ballots available for April 7 Town Election

The applicant must request an absentee ballot.

Absentee ballots for the annual Town Election on April 7 are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noon on April 6, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. Residents may vote absentee for the following reasons only:

1. Absence from the town during the hours the polls are open.
2. Physical disability.
3. Religious beliefs, which prevent voting at the polls on Election Day.

The applicant must request an absentee ballot. Applications are available in the Town Clerk's office or a written, signed request can be sent by mail, or hand delivered by the voter or any other person. The application should include the legal voting address of the voter, where the ballot is to be mailed and the signature of the applicant.

A family member of a person qualified to vote by absentee ballot may apply on behalf of such voter. The applicant shall state his or her relationship to the absentee voter; sign the application under the pains and penalties of perjury; and mail or hand-deliver the application to the clerk's office. Absentee ballots must be mailed to the voter. Returned ballots should be mailed or can be delivered by an immediate member of the family to the Town Clerk's office by April 7 to be counted.

The Accu-Vote optical scan system will be used. Instructions to voters are printed on the ballot and any pen or pencil may be used. To vote, completely fill in the OVAL to the right of your choice. Secrecy sleeves are available at the check in tables. The ballots can be inserted into the machine face up, face down, etc. and will be read. It is the usual policy to flip the ballot over so the blank side shows as they insert it into the machine. Voters who are uncomfortable with this should use the secrecy sleeve.

If you are permanently physically disabled and cannot cast your vote at the polling place, you may file a letter from your physician with your town clerk, stating that you are permanently unable to cast your vote at the polling place because of physical disability. A completed application for an absentee ballot for you to sign and return will be mailed to you by the town clerk at least 28 days before every primary and election.

Setting stage for future of village

Zoning changes to go to Town Meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Planning Board is proposing a zoning bylaw change (Article 15) for the downtown/village district that, if passed at Town Meeting, would require a special permit from the Zoning Board for dwellings for more than one family in the district. At least two village businessmen are concerned that this change will hinder, rather than help future development in the Village.

Selectmen reviewed this Article two weeks ago but felt they did not have a clear understanding of the bylaw. Two longtime Cohasset citizens and owners of village property, Jim Watson and Wayne Sawchuk, came before the Selectmen to explain their interpretation of the bylaw and express their concerns.

Watson, owner of the Cohasset Hardware building (40 South Main St.), and Sawchuk, owner of the Samuel Bates house (35-39 South Main St.), agree that the bylaw change is a step backward.

In fact, the bylaw change would take the town back to before a 2003 town meeting article passed changing the bylaw to a "by right use," rather than a by special permit. Currently, apartments are allowed "by right use," which means there needs to be a Zoning Board review, but standard building permits would apply.

The 2003 bylaw allows stores in combination with apartments and condominiums in the village. The bylaw states the units would have to be created in connection with a commercial use on the first floor of the structure. The 2003 bylaw also extended to dwellings the parking requirement exemption for commercial parcels in the village section of the downtown business district provided that a project is within 500 feet of the Town Parking Lot.

But a 40,000-square-foot requirement, adopted as far back as 1978, prohibits adding multi-family dwellings in the downtown business district on lots less than that size.

It's not clear why the 2003 bylaw does not supercede other restrictions such as the 40,000 square foot requirement.

"We shouldn't be changing a bylaw. A special permit will not allow apartments, we'd still be caught by the 40,000 square foot rule," said Watson.

Watson said that he would like to see a zoning law that recognizes pre-existing, non-conforming buildings as they sit on their footprints. Watson's business, Cohasset Hardware, is closing and he ideally would like to turn the building's first floor into two retail spaces and the upstairs into four one-bedroom apartments.

"If the town has control over how the buildings sat then we couldn't do anything crazy," explained Watson, "apartments above the first floor should be an allowed use."

Watson is still unsure when Cohasset Hardware will close its doors forever, but if the shop closes before the zoning issue is resolved, it could leave a vacant building in the center of the village. It also leaves open the possibility that Watson would sell the building to an interested party, one that might different ideas for the building.

Watson's building received town approval for two two-bedroom apartments split between the second and third floors back in 2000. However, timing wasn't right and the plan never came to fruition.

Sawchuk believes that apartments are necessary to keep the downtown area viable because they provide a guaranteed influx of people on a daily basis.

"[The Town] should be encouraging investment, not discouraging it," Sawchuk said. He has created plans for his lot that include an additional building with two floors of apartments, five new storefronts, and an outside patio. He would like to create a walkway to connect the new MBTA parking lot to South Main Street on his property.

"I think it's a value to have people like us involved because we have the best interest of town at heart," said Watson when interviewed recently.

Alfred Moore, Chairman of the Planning Board, agrees that this bylaw will not change anything right now.

The Planning Board is putting forth two articles for zoning bylaw change for the village area. The first article (Article 14) requests the creation of a village business district, separate from the downtown business district that incorporates three other areas of town. This change allows future bylaws to apply just to the Village, without affecting the other three Downtown Business areas, which include portions of the Harbor area, West Corner, and a small area in the Beechwood section.

The establishment of the Village Business District and the requirement of a special permit will "set the stage" for future changes, possibly for the fall Town Meeting, said Moore in a telephone interview. The special permit allows the Town to have greater control over the building of apartments or other changes. But will still not allow apartments in lots under 40,000 square feet.

At the fall Town Meeting, voters allocated a total of $30,000 to hire a consultant to draft a Village master plan, $15,000 was provided by the Town's general fund to look at zoning, retail analysis, parking while the CPC chipped in the balance of $15,000 to look at affordable housing, open space, and historical issues in the village. It was determined that the Planning Board would apply for applicable grant funding to offset and/or supplement the $50,000 price tag.

"Right now, it doesn't make sense to change a bylaw when the study isn't done," Sawchuk said. He expressed concern that if the bylaw passes, it might be difficult to make changes down the line, if the consultant advises that was not the wise course of action.

Moore said zoning changes need to be crafted very carefully.

"We have to make sure there aren't any unintended consequences," he said. According to Moore, these bylaw changes are preliminary in nature but will make additional alterations to the bylaws smoother once the consultant is on board.

"Everyone is so gun shy to have any changes, we need a consultant to come in," said Selectman Fred Koed. He hopes that the consultant will be able to tell the Town what's possible and the implications of those changes in the Village area.

The request for proposal (RFP) is out for a consultant and bids are due today (March 23). The consultant is expected to work with the Town during the late spring and summer. The anticipation is that the Planning Board will have a better direction for the Village area in time for the fall Town Meeting.

New courses will be offered at the high school

Graduation requirements tweaked

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The current school year won't conclude until June, but Middle-High School administrators and the School Committee are already looking ahead to next fall's program of studies. New elective courses, the majority for senior English, will be offered in the fall. Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini was on hand at Wednesday's meeting to present the additions to the 2007-2008 program of studies and a few language changes to graduation requirements.

A total of 14 new courses will be offered in the fall: 10 English, one math, one art, and two social studies. The additions do not make any changes in current course offerings, or alter each department's core requirements. The new courses are meant to add diversity to the program of studies and encourage students to pursue what interests them.

"We hope to better meet the needs of the student body," said Antolini, who began this process with his department heads back in August and September. At that time, hiring is complete and the staff is evaluated to see what specific skills or interests they may have that could translate into an elective course. In December, the teachers complete the development of the course. Department heads and teachers work together to fine-tuned the course to a specific area, gather materials, and determine the expectations and assessment of each student.

The English Department proposed 10 additional electives for seniors with the exception of the new SAT prep course. The topics range from an exploration of global literature from Africa, Asia and Latin America to an in-depth look at Joseph Campbell's writing on myth and its contemporary manifestations in the movies and other media. Other courses follow a theme and how that theme reveals itself in different types of literature.

The mathematics department will offer a math SAT prep course to juniors gearing up for the college entrance exam.

The new courses are meant to add diversity to the program of studies and encourage students to pursue what interests them.

The art department will offer a course in electronic studio art. The technology-based elective will do a series of projects in Adobe Photoshop using the computer to create art. Topics will include an introduction to the Window platform, digital photography, scanning, basic typography, photo retouching, digital collage and art history.

The social studies department put forth two courses, both looking at specific times and themes in history. A course on the holocaust and human behavior will look at the effect of holocaust from a historic, literary and current event perspective. The second will explore conspiracy theories in American history and pop culture.

The additions to the program of studies are a reflection of the teaching staff's hard work, diverse interests and qualifications, Antolini said, "the staff has worked hard to review the course of study."

"I want to caution parents that although these courses are offered, each course needs to have both student interest and get through the scheduling process," explained Antolini.

The School Committee approved the additions to the program of studies unanimously.

Graduation requirements were reviewed and it was found that there was some wording discrepancy and redundancy in the list. He proposed three changes to the current requirements.

First, each student much achieve a passing grade in three courses of social studies accruing 15 credits, of those three courses, each student must pass both courses (sophomore and junior year) in US History. In the previous phrasing it was not clear that both courses in US History needed to have a passing grade leaving open the door that a student could pass just one year of US History and still graduate. That is not the intent of the requirement, said Antolini.

Second, the requirements for physical education and health education were clarified. Each student must achieve a passing grade in two quarters of physical education and two quarters of health education, accruing at least 10 credits.

Third, the separate requirement for health education was deleted. The School Committee unanimously approved the language changes proposed. Member Alfred Slanetz said that he would like to have the Committee review the entire list of graduation requirement at a later point in time.

Deer Hill Principal Keith Gauley has accepted a position as principal at an elementary school in Brewster, Mass.

The Nauset Regional Schools Superintendent, Michael Gradone, listed the "enthusiasm" the people in Cohasset had for Gauley as one of the reasons he stood out from the other candidates.

"I can focus on what is important to the school. I am someone who wants to listen and become part of the community," explained Gauley to the Cape Codder.

Gauley became the Principal of Deer Hill in August 2003. He was selected from an applicant pool of more than 50 candidates. He came to Cohasset from Abington, where he had served for five years as the principal of Center Elementary School.

"When any administrator or teacher leaves a position, they have to consider what's best for themselves and their families," Walsh said.

Matthew Belson, reporter for the Cape Codder, also contributed to this report.

Tutoring policy under review

The School Committee recently reviewed a first draft of a tutoring policy that will be put in place for teachers and parents in the upcoming school year. Similar guidelines have been put in place throughout the state to prevent conflict of interest issues when a teacher is both a town employee and a private tutor. Rules on building use and associated fees will be laid out in as procedure.

School administration will review the recommended wording changes from the Committee and it will be brought before them at a later date.

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

THINK SPRING

Hello Cohasset. I hope your first few days of Spring have been fine. It is nice to say goodbye to the snow don't you think? We have a lot of events to talk about in the column, many congratulations so here we go.

WELCOME HOME

A very happy and proud family let me know that Lieutenant Andrew J. Hamilton of Cohasset is home from a 7-month tour in Iraq as a United States Marine. Andrews's parents, Jane and Joe Hamilton, are so relieved and happy that he is on United States soil once again, after serving our country. Andrew is in California at Camp Pendleton with his wife Lauryn and little girl, Addy. Andrew would like residents here in Cohasset to know how thankful he was for all the thoughts and prayers as well as the caring gifts that he received while away. Welcome home Andrew and thank you from us all.

COOKIE SELLER!

Hats off to Cohasset's Alyssa Lum on being one of three Girl Scouts in the Patriot Trail Council to sell more than 75 boxes of Girl Scout cookies. Scouts have been eagerly selling Girl Scout cookies since Jan. 5. Alyssa, who has sold 78 boxes so far, was surprised at her home with a special gift for her outstanding effort: a four-foot bunny named Blossom.

Congratulations!

IRISH MUSIC

The Relay for Life in Cohasset presents an Evening of Irish Music with the Makem and Spain Brothers on Saturday, April 28th at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Auditorium, 143 Pond St.. With comparisons to the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, and the Corries, The Makem and Spain Brothers know their musical history. And with an energy not witnessed in some time, they are ready to take the Irish song tradition to a new generation. Their songwriting contains the timeless qualities of folk classics, songs of the worker, songs of the sea and Irish culture. They tell the tale of Ireland and its people — a culture that has undergone terrible strife, but remains strong.

In the five years that they have been performing together, they have shared the stage with The Wolfe Tones, the Makem Brothers, and the Dublin City Ramblers, as well as countless others. They have performed in hundreds of venues along the eastern seaboard and have recorded a debut CD, "Heroes and Rogues," that is receiving critical acclaim as well as crossover radio play on Bluegrass, Irish, and Folk stations across North America. The Makem and Spain Brothers are driving Irish folk songs into the 21st century internationally. Tickets are $25 and can be purchased at Nobles Camera stores and Scituate Federal Savings Banks. For more information, please call 781.383.9457.

MIDFIELDER

Jake Previte, a sophomore at St. Michael's College Vt., made Honor Roll for the Northeast 10 men's lacrosse conference as a "middie." Jake played attack for many years in his career-especially at CMHS, but his freshman year, his college coach asked him to change to midfield. The NE 10 conference is the second largest Div. II league in the nation. This year, lacrosse's most respected publication "Inside Lacrosse" has chosen the newly formed program at St. Michael's to finish 4th in the pre-season rankings of Div II NE 10. Jake, this was fantastic news to receive, keep up the great work.

ACADEMIC HONORS

The Belmont Hill School recently awarded academic honors and Cohasset resident, Matthew Terrence O'Connell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael O'Connell received honors. Super Matthew, I know we will hear more about you in the months to come.

COUNTY FAIR!

The Cohasset ASP Appalachia County Fair is being held on Saturday, April 28 from 6:30-11 pm at St. Anthony's Parish Center. A delightfully entertaining evening designed to celebrate the important work of our Cohasset ASP volunteers and to raise funds for their upcoming return to Appalachia. The famous Redbones Barbecue of Somerville and music are serving dinner; dancing is coming to you from the "Gr8fls" formerly known as the Grateful Dads. You won't be able to resist the urge to shake-it on the floor. There will be live and silent auctions with art from local artists, vacations, event tickets and so much more. Also available will be original crafts from Cohasset volunteers and Appalachia and beer and wine will be available to those over 21. Tickets to this wonderful evening of fun are $35 per person and you may buy a table of 8 for you and your family and friends. You may obtain the tickets at local churches and also by calling or emailing Gary Ritts at 781-383-0345 or gar@2ndcc.org

ALL ABOUT HERBS

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly general meeting on Tuesday March 27 in Bates Hall at the Second Congregational Church. Coffee will be served at 9 a.m. and the meeting will begin at 9:30 a.m. In this month's program, "The Joy of Herbs In Your Kitchen and Beyond", Rita Wollmering, the founder of the HERB FARMacy will present information about growing, harvesting, and preserving herbs not only for the kitchen but for use throughout the house as well.

GIFT IDEAS!

If you are looking for a perfect Mother's Day, Father's Day or birthday gift, here are some suggestions. Cohasset Elder Affairs is sponsoring two excellent trips this Spring. On Monday, May 1st, they will travel to Historic Salem for a Tour of the Peabody Essex Museum and Lunch at Victoria Station on Salem's beautiful Waterfront. On Wednesday, June 27, a trip to Newport, Rhode Island will happen, where you will board the Vista Jubilee for the Parade of Sails as the Tall Ships return to Newport. Please call 781-383-9112 for more information.

That is it for this week. Send me your news for next week no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm.

This year's Relay dedicated to Mary Jeanette Murray

"But she would sneak back at night and bring us Dunkin' Donuts coffee and she would be in the high school cafeteria at 5a.m. cooking everyone breakfast."

Murray's daughter, Lillian Curley, has formed a team in her mother's honor. The team has yet to be named but she plans to get her family and friends involved. "We're going to raise as much money as we can," said Curley, "We need to find a cure."

Curley says that the relay was one of those events that ranked high on her mother's list of things to do every year. "It was near and dear to her heart, it was an event she liked to do." Although Curley has attended the relay in the past, this is her first year to form a team. Her kids and brothers will be coming along to participate.

"I know she will be up there smiling down on us with those blue eyes of hers; this would mean a lot to her," said Curley.

Jacqui Vitello, luminaria chair and 10-year veteran of the relay, fondly remembers Mary Jeanette's presence at the event. Vitello got involved in the relay when her father was battling cancer nine years ago. Her father had attended the first year of the event and was so moved that he wanted his family to get involved the next year. Unfortunately, Vitello's father passed away two months before the event. But she and her family still walked. She remembers Murray, who had known her father, offering words of support.

"I remember she came over and said 'your father would be so happy that you and your family are doing this.' She was just very encouraging."

Murray's influence and spirit will no doubt be a large part of this year's event that will be held on June 15 and 16. Residents from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Scituate and beyond will gather at the Cohasset High School track to raise money, walk, and support each other. The American Cancer Society's Relay for Life is an overnight benefit event that raises money to find a cure for cancer. This is Cohasset's 11th year hosting the event.

The Cohasset Relay for Life has set a 2007 fundraising goal of $200,000. Last year, they were able to raise $167,000 for the American Cancer Society. More than 40 teams have signed up to participate this year, involving kids, teens and adults from Cohasset and surrounding towns.

"The money we make is how we keep track of the relay's success, but it's so much more than that. There's an energy involved and it's really the experience of the event that is inspirational," says St. Onge. Cohasset's event, in just 10 years, has raised more than $1.1 million for the American Cancer Society. The money raised is then given to major cancer research organizations that are working every day to find the cure for all types of cancer.

The proceeds are driven from teams and individuals' fundraising efforts. Cancer is a non-discriminating disease and it's difficult to find a person or a family that hasn't been affected by it. The Relay for Life is a grassroots endeavor that brings individuals together who share a commitment to making a difference in the fight against cancer, says St. Onge.

The relay will begin at 3p.m on Friday, June 15th and conclude on Saturday, June 16th at 10a.m. Each team is charged with having at least one member of their team walking the track at any given time.

"In our fast-paced society, this event is a way to bring families together. They all stop for a day or two days and put their heart into something we all believe in. Heart and community are key," says volunteer and organizer Jen Piepenbrink. The young and old, teenagers, caregivers, cancer survivors and fighters attend the event.

The Relay's schedule is packed with activities. The opening ceremony begins at 6p.m.with a local cancer survivor addressing participants. That is followed by the survivor's lap, in which cancer survivors; those still struggling with the disease and their caregivers are invited to walk the track in celebration of their strength. Then, each team is introduced. Simultaneously, there will also be a "Taste of the Relay," local restaurants will be donating chowder and desserts.

At 9p.m. the Luminaria Walk, a cornerstone of the Relay for Life, will begin. Luminarias are paper bags filled with sand and a candle that line the inside of the track. Each bag is a dedication to a person who has struggled or is struggling with cancer. Many are decorated tributes to a grandfather, aunt or friend. Last year more than 4000 bags were lit for the ceremony, each with a donation of $5.

"Every luminaria has a story behind it. When you're walking and you come to someone you know, it's very powerful," says Piepenbrink.

This year the Relay is hosting a pre-event concert to raise money. The Makem and Spain Brothers, an Irish band, will entertain what St. Onge hopes will be a sell-out audience. The concert is set for April 28th at the Cohasset High School auditorium. Tickets are $25 and can be bought through Harry St. Onge, 781-383-9465.

If you'd like to get involved with the Relay for Life, it's never too late. Teams and individuals can get registered and involved up to the day of the relay. Visit www.acsevents.org/relay/macohasset to join an established team or start your own. Contact Relay Chairman Harry St. Onge, st.onge@comcast.net for more information.

"We don't look at how much money a team can bring in, you can have a team of five people or it can be 50 people, we just want people to be involved and experience the relay," says St. Onge, "And once they do, I know they'll come back."

Next week, the Mariner will begin a weekly "Relay Corner" with meeting dates, stories on participants, photos, fundraising information and important details on the event itself.

OPINION

Grounded in half-truths

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At the Mariner, we do not "sign" our editorials as a rule. That is because editorials represent the position of the paper and not the personal view of the writer. But I wanted to sign this editorial because it is very personal, and as someone who values my family's privacy, difficult to write.

I have never been to Iraq nor have I served in the military. But I do have some perspective. I have two sons: one of whom served 13 months in Ramadi; and my other son is deploying to Iraq in June. My nephew, a Marine, is currently in Iraq. Over the years from time to time my Scituate home has been full of ROTC and West Point cadets; active duty soldiers; and now war veterans.

As a staff writer for both the Hingham Journal and Cohasset Mariner over the past four years, I have reported on local men and women who have served in Iraq – in some cases I interviewed the soldier, sailor or Marine before he left and again when he returned. I also covered the homecoming of Hingham's 1058th.

I think I am qualified to share my perspective on "The Ground Truth," a film that purports to be a documentary and features interviews with about a dozen veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan and some families.

Monday night the movie ran on the Sundance cable-TV channel where I watched it in its entirety. I did not attend the showing of the film last week at the Hingham Public Library (coverage of which is in this week's Mariner, see page 10).

While I appreciate that those on all political sides of the Iraq war issue say they support the troops – I think painting our veterans as "victims" of our own military does the exact opposite. I would not have as large a problem with the movie if it provided another perspective: the good things and heroic acts occurring in Iraq on a daily basis, and the advances being made there. But the film focused on veterans who felt they were duped into joining up and then brainwashed into becoming killers.

With that being said, I realize war is horrible and terrible things occur. My husband and I were transferred to Calais, France, in the mid-1970s. The Nazis occupied Calais, which is on the English Channel, during WWII. Thirty years after the war, evidence of the occupation still abounded. Some of the bunkers served as mini-museums housing Nazi posters that gave orders to the residents. But our friend Claude – a Calais resident who loved Americans — had two older brothers, both of whom were severely mentally handicapped because as young boys they were so traumatized by the allies' bombings that had destroyed much of the city.

My Dad, a Marine, never talked about his WWII service and my son, James, doesn't talk about Iraq nor do his friends.

But I have a box full of letters that speak to visits to the schools, handing out soccer balls to Iraqi kids, and the challenges of life at "Camp Junction City."

As parents, we found out much later that James led 120 combat patrols in his first four months in Iraq and that he was awarded a Bronze Star. We found out because my husband asked him for a copy of his DD 214 form (Department of Defense separation form) for our family records. Listed on the DD 214 were James' medals. When pressed, James then shared with us his Bronze Star on the condition that me (his mother) did not contact the Scituate Mariner for a story. (While proud, he said, the medal belonged to those who did not come back).

The narrative accompanying the Bronze Star states in part, "…During his first week of patrols, 1Lt. Ford led a patrol that came in contact with hostile Iraqis. His patrol was fired upon. 1LT Ford responded by directing overwhelming fires that neutralized the threat quickly without taking any casualties from his platoon. Once the situation was under control, he immediately directed our medic and combat lifesavers to administer first aid to the critically wounded Iraqis…His conduct on the ground radioing in air assets for a medical evacuation was flawless…"

My first experience with the true cost of war came within a year after high school when two of my classmates were killed in Vietnam. During that military-draft era, some war protesters, dubbed "flower children," put flowers into gun barrels and some spat on troops when they returned. Some could not separate their opposition to the war from the troops on the ground.

We are not there yet with the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq but, in my view, we are heading in that direction.

Let's hope as this war story continues to be told that a fuller, fairer picture will be presented – one that treats our troops with honor and gives them the deep respect they deserve.

Kudos to the Land Foundation

TO THE EDITOR:

As Jim Hamilton pointed out in a column last week, the Cohasset Land Foundation promises to be a significant force in preserving land, complementing the work of the Conservation Trust. The Trust acquires land for public use by gift of real estate or by purchase below market (in essence a partial gift from the owner) with conservation restrictions, using donated funds.

The mission of the Land Foundation is to acquire land for which the owners require market price and thus is not of practical interest to the Conservation Trust. The Land Foundation would develop only that portion needed to recoup costs, so that the remainder is preserved for open space or other public use. This adds something (that otherwise would not be) to our stock of open space, essentially by eliminating the normal profit in land development. Some assistance from donated funds would be welcome, of course. The concept was originated and has been well demonstrated in the town of Lincoln over a period of many years.

Hopefully, the financial structure of some future projects may permit some contribution to Cohasset's much-needed affordable housing. However, that may not often be compatible with the primary mission, and is not envisaged in the Foundation's initial project on Beechwood Street.

Although I have "retired" from the Land Foundation, I treasure my brief association with this group of uniquely experienced, capable and public-spirited individuals. Cohasset is indeed fortunate not only to have them, but also because they are but a sample of the wealth of talent and public-spiritedness that the Town is blessed with. Let us appreciate and support them in their challenging mission.

'I really love good design'

TOWARDS A SUSTAINABLE COHASSET

JOANN MIRISE

Lucky for us (meaning we and Mama Earth) the green design market is exploding.

I am absolutely smitten. The object of my affection: the Toto Aquia Dual Flush toilet. On a recent trip to Portland, Maine, I stumbled upon a specialty hardware and decor shop in the charming Old Port neighborhood. Against my better judgment, I went in with my two preschool-aged children despite what looked to be walls of very fragile and expensive things to break.

What I found was a veritable gallery of the all-to-often overlooked objects of everyday life. The things we take for granted like knobs and switches were elevated to a level beyond mere function. Even door hinges were crafted with an artisan sensibility. It was on the second floor that the Toto caught my eye. With its elegant, elongated lines and the telltale sculptured dual button I knew I had happened upon what a number of "best-of" lists have touted as one of the top designs of recent years.

What makes this toilet so appealing, aside from its good looks and reasonable price, is its effortless, interactive way of addressing a really big issue — declining water resources. After your business is done and it is time to flush, you have the option to push one button for liquid (aka number 1) at .9 gallons of water per flush, or the other button for solids (number 2) at 1.6 gallons per flush. This simple choice could save the average household 2,500 to 15,000 gallons of water annually and as much as $50 to $300 a year. And with Massachusetts' water supplies continually being challenged, combined with the fact that 40 percent of indoor water usage is from the toilet, this single action clearly can make a huge impact. An unassuming, consciousness-infused toilet design. Brilliant. The bonus is that we only have to look to our fellow westerners to see that this design works. Dual flush toilets have been popular in the European market for years, and in countries like Australia and

Brook, Elm streets to be revitalized

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Before: workers adjusting dam covering.

After: dam covering in position.

First, Some Great News – You may remember that The Town of Cohasset received a Public Works Economic Development Grant from the Department of Transportation to redo the infrastructure in the village center. This work was done last year and made a general mess of the village while the transformation was underway. Unfortunately, due to escalating costs the grant, which the Town received in 2001, was not quite enough to complete the work on Brook and Elm Streets in 2006. Consequently, the Town applied for additional funds from the Department of Transportation to complete the project. Late last week we received notification from Representative Bradley's office that Cohasset has been awarded an additional $310K to complete the project. So, Brook and Elm Streets will be finished after all. When finished we will all be able to wave goodbye to the bumps on Brook and Elm we have suffered with the past year.

The construction that remains to be done will not be nearly as disruptive as the 2006 work. This is because when we were working last year we were able to get all of the new underground drainage work completed. So all we need to do now is replace the street, sidewalk and curbing. No more deep holes, plates in the streets and drainpipe repositioning. That's all behind us. As we begin discussions with the contractor we'll keep you posted about schedules and the other details.

Forest Avenue paving and sidewalks – We have been talking about the completion of the sidewalks and paving on Forest Avenue for the past year. One of the administrative details that needed to be tended to was holding a Shade Tree Hearing. The State defines a "Shade Tree" as a tree on a public way, or on the boundary of a public way. And, whenever a shade tree is to be removed, a Shade Tree Hearing must be held. You ask, what is a Shade Tree Hearing? After the proper public announcement by newspaper and posted signs on the trees to be removed the Town's Tree Warden must hold a Shade Tree Hearing. This is a public meeting at which residents can voice their support or displeasure with the intended removals. If any written objections are received, by law, the tree removal issue is given over to the Selectmen for a final decision. During the hearing held on Tuesday, March 20th we did receive a written objection. So, the issue is remanded to the Selectmen for a final decision. This means that nothing can be done on the Forest Avenue sidewalk / paving project until a decision is reached by the Selectmen about tree removal.

If you support or object to the Forest Avenue tree removal prior to the paving and sidewalk project we ask that you communicate this to the Board of Selectmen. This subject is on the Agenda for Monday, March 26th at 8:15 p.m..

Harbor Wall Replacement – The work on the Portadam continues along Border Street between Atlantica and Mill River Marine. As we have mention in prior articles, the contractor is erecting a dam so that he can work on the wall without worrying about the tides. As of this past Tuesday, the dam framework had been completed and the waterproof membrane that will form the actual dam surface is in the process of being positioned. By the way, how would you like to be the guy in the wetsuit in the accompanying photo in 40 degree weather?

As of this past Wednesday morning, the covering had been placed on the Portadam framework. The waterside edge is in the process of being dug into the harbor floor. The old harbor wall disassembly is scheduled to start on this Thursday, 3/22. (Our dead line for this column is Wed PM.) By the time you read this work on the wall should be well underway.

Because the Border Street construction site is so close to the street, the road will be reduced to a single lane until the project is completed. In order to manage the traffic the contractor has installed a one way traffic light system which we mentioned last week. Since them, the temporary traffic light has been installed and seems to be working well. If you have any comments about the light, think it is too fast, or too slow, please let us know. And, please drive slowly through this area. We've had reports on near misses as some cars pay no attention to the traffic light or come speeding into the area near Atlantica and become surprised by the cars stopped by the light.

Greenbush update – On Thursday (March 22) we were rearranging a fiber optic communication network, owned by Cohasset Schools, which passes over the rail bed at Sohier Street and again at Pleasant Street This network needs to be raised to clear the trains as well as moved to new poles. CBB was going to have the work done by their electrical contractor, but working with the schools, we can get it done much quicker at lower cost. CBB has agreed to reimburse the Schools for the cost.

Some re-grading is being done at the station site on Route 3A. Also, a few finishing touches are being added to the station platform. But, not much is happening elsewhere. We'd sure like to see some construction workers reappear at Pond, Sohier or King streets. The bumps and detours are getting to be pretty "old hat" after the six months to over a year that they have been in existence. So, we wait along, with you, for the crews to return. We hope this will happen when the asphalt plants reopen in April.

The art of insulting our enemies

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

Even the "Impeach Bush!" crowd will be pleased to learn that our leader, George 43, has discovered a new way to attack our enemies without firing a shot.

Most people called it a movie.

Iran calls it an insult.

Someone seems to have caught up to Iran's President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad between splits of the atom long enough to tell him that the new hit flick "300" is "serving the policy of the U. S. leadership."

"Leadership." In case you've forgotten, that's George.

If I remember my history classes with Professor G. Norman Eddy at BU, "300" is the story of King Leonidas and his 300 Spartans who held the pass at Thermopylae for three days against King Xerxes and his Persian host back in 480 BC.

Apparently just talking about it is an insult to the Iranians, the lineal descendants of the Persians, who admittedly emerge from the picture with reputations something less than spotless.

"The film depicts Iranians as demons, without culture, feeling or humanity, who think of nothing except attacking other nations and killing people," groused Ayende-No, Iran's largest newspaper.

Has anyone told the Israelis?

Some film reviewers did note with alarm, said the Associated Press, "the way Persians are depicted as decadent, sexually flamboyant and evil in contrast to the noble Greeks." But that only proves they were soldiers and this was a Hollywood film.

"The U. S., by producing such a movie, reverses historical reality and tries to compensate for its wrongdoings in order to provoke American soldiers" against Iran, said Javad Shamghadri, "cultural adviser" to President Ahmedinejad.

Has anyone told Javad that all this happened 2,487 years ago and 1,972 years before America was even a gleam in Columbus' eye? Besides, fellahs, the Spartans were Greeks, not graduates of Michigan State.

If Javad and the editor of Avende-No had read a little further in their history books they would have found that the Persians not only routed the Spartans and slaughtered them to a man but they won the war and burned Athens before being deployed home.

If the story of King Leonidas and his 300 Spartans could so rouse the passions of Ahmedinejad and his cohorts, why did they give a pass to the flick "Alexander," the story of the Macedonian king who absolutely destroyed the Persian empire a hundred or so years later?

If George 43 pulled that one off and got away with it, I'm speechless with admiration.

Perhaps we have discovered a new method of bloodless assault on our enemies — make a movie that would expose the dark side of their stories to all the world.

But do it first.

Special effects and my Hollywood moment

DRIVING WHILE TYPING

JOHN LENGYEL

Although I have many good qualities — my long, silky legs being chief among them — thinking ahead has never been my strong suit. When I was 12 I deliberately threw a snowball at a moving police car from my own yard, figuring the driver wouldn't react any differently than the school bus drivers did. Years later I went out of my way to surround myself with a wife and three children, only to discover I enjoy their company most when they're all asleep. And true to my nature, I spent tens of thousands of my parents' dollars getting a mechanical engineering degree and never worked single a day as an M.E.

Real mechanical engineers are disciplined, professional, enjoy working with partial differential equations, and are responsible for most of the technological marvels of the last century. They are one notch below rocket scientists, whereas I am one notch below a vertebrate. I like tinkering with machines, taking them apart and deciding much later whether to reassemble them, but ask me to calculate the shear stresses at the midpoint of a rotating jet turbine blade and I'll give you my stock answer: sometimes planes crash and there's nothing we can do about it. I'm not the guy you want working for NASCAR, let alone NASA.

But Reel Efx, a special effects company at Raleigh Studios in Los Angeles, was where I belonged in 1988. There was no higher math, no time cards, just a huge honkin' metal shop with enough tools and materials to give the IAEA pause. We made animatronic cows, blew up buildings, launched catapults, flew people on wires, and operated puppets, all during our off hours. The rest of the time they paid us to blow wind on Madonna, rain on Janet Jackson, levitate Linda Blair, and impale Jason Voorhees. We were single men who liked our work, so basically we never left except to deposit our paychecks.

I made two very close friends at Reel Efx: Jim, an energetic 30-something nerd who co-owned the company and was the main force behind it, and Beny, a 19-year-old kid whose voice had yet to change and was such fun to be around that I often forgot what a genius he was. This teenager had already done more in terms of invention and entrepreneurship than most people ever do. He had bought the chassis from an old VW Beetle, built his own dune buggy out of it, and would race it competitively at Pismo Beach whenever he wasn't flying one of his many home-made RC airplanes. Before Reel Efx he financed these and many other hobbies through his three small businesses, installing garage door systems, creating custom retractable swimming-pool covers, and renting out the professional-grade paint sprayer he'd bought to turn his low-rider Nissan truck from black to bright sparkly red.

The paternal half of Beny's extended family was Mexican and his mother's side was native Californian, so Beny could toggle back and forth effortlessly between American English and Mexican Spanish, complete with flawless accents in both cases. For someone like me, whose brain had burned ten million calories over four years trying to learn the most rudimentary French, hanging around Beny in Los Angeles was like having a friend with super powers. L.A. is a city with one foot in Reagan's America and the other in Mexico, so in public spaces a lot of your time is spent listening to unintelligible conversations. But when I was on a bus or in a restaurant with Beny the Babelfish, all was revealed to me.

"That guy's son is in jail for trying to rob El Pollo Loco," he would whisper. "And see that couple over there? They're having a fight over something he said about her sister."

"What's up with those two" I'd ask, discreetly pointing to two young Hispanic women giggling at a nearby table. "Do they like me? They keep glancing over here."

Without turning his head Beny would adjust his x-ray hearing and sit silently for a minute.

"No, your pants have exploded," he'd say.

This is something that actually happened to me. One morning I carried two heavy car batteries from one end of the studio lot to another. They didn't have handles, so as I tried to adjust and hang on to them I must have tilted them this way and that. I got battery acid all over my jeans but was too distracted to notice at the time. Something else I didn't know was the effect battery acid has on denim, but I found out a few hours later as I was showing a group of tourists around a sound stage near our shop. I crouched down to pick up a nail gun and the acid-weakened fabric gave way so unexpectedly and in so many places that it felt like my pants had literally been repelled from my loins.

I believe it capped off a tour they'll never forget.

John Lengyel lives in Cohasset. He's not kidding about the pants, but for the record his legs are nothing to write home about.

HEALTH NOTES

Personal hygiene and the Norovirus

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Immune systems may require generations to adapt defenses against ailments to which people are frequently exposed.

If it isn't one thing, it's another. Recently, the media has been filled with articles about Noroviruses, a group of viruses that cause the "stomach flu," or gastroenteritis. The term Norovirus was recently created after the original strain "Norwalk virus," which caused an outbreak of gastroenteritis in a school in Norwalk, Ohio, in 1968. Current variations of the Norovirus strain appear to have more persistence in an open environment, surviving longer on doorknobs, silverware, etc. Certainly the incidence of such illnesses has increased.

The symptoms of Norovirus illness usually include nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, and some stomach cramping. Sometimes people additionally have a low-grade fever, chills, headache, muscle aches, and a general sense of tiredness. The illness often begins suddenly, and the infected person may feel very sick. In most people the illness is self-limiting with symptoms lasting for about one or two days. During the course of the illness, it's important to get enough liquids, particularly children and the elderly, since there is a risk of dehydration. Viruses are different from bacteria and parasites, some of which can cause illnesses similar to norovirus infection. Like all viral infections, noroviruses are not affected by treatment with antibiotics and cannot grow outside of a person's body.

Unquestionably, gradual growth in pervasiveness of viruses and other types of interpersonal infections has been observed. This, despite increased vigilance in many environments, particularly schools where information on personal hygiene and sanitation is routinely taught and practiced. Increases have been noted where relaxed vigilance might occur, such as cruise ships and nursing homes where, while staff may use effective prevention techniques, temporary visitors to the environment: cruise passengers themselves or outside support staff may not exercise similar vigilance.

The immune system, like everything else that doesn't get used often, becomes rusty; operates at impaired efficiency. Immune systems may require generations to adapt defenses against ailments to which people are frequently exposed. Montezuma, presumably never had Montezuma's revenge. On the other hand his subjects got measles and died in great numbers.

So, we poor people with the weakened immune systems have to do things our forebears never even considered, like washing our hands before dinner or wiping germs off doorknobs, etc. Unfortunately, the increased capabilities of new viruses such as the Norovirus may cause us to think differently about the practices we use to control spread of infectious materials. Perhaps, when following the accepted rules of personal hygiene, we could also benefit by knowing what factors cause viruses to persist outside of the body. I remember an experience in school in which a classmate chided me because I contaminated his glasses by breathing on and wiping with a tissue to clean them. He was to go on in later life to become a doctor, so his classmates would listen intently to his pronouncements. But the concept has merit; persistence of viruses, bacteria and other living pathogens depends on several factors which are only slightly considered in the rules of hygiene: moisture and temperature. Certainly, we heat meat and other food products to 165°F to kill bacteria. We also use alcohol and other germicides in water as a disinfectant, but water itself is one of the factors, which sustain viruses outside the body. Even the gooey stuff we miss while cleaning kitchen cabinets, doorknobs and elevator buttons contains some moisture. So, maybe it would be wise to consider where moisture would play a part in degrading the following standard rules for personal hygiene:

- Frequently wash your hands, especially after toilet visits and changing diapers and before eating or preparing food.
- Carefully wash fruits and vegetables, and steam oysters before eating them.
- Thoroughly clean and disinfect contaminated surfaces immediately after an episode of illness by using a bleach-based household cleaner.
- Immediately remove and wash clothing or linens that may be contaminated with virus after an episode of illness (use hot water and soap).
- Flush toilets and make sure that the surrounding area is kept clean.
- Those with symptoms should not prepare food for three days after they recover. Throw away food that's been handled.

Water issues on 'Our Town'

As the March 31 annual Town Meeting approaches OUR TOWN, co-hosts Pat Martin and Mark DeGiacomo sit down with Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt for the full hour.

Pratt will field questions from the hosts on the water articles that are on the Warrant.

The water department is seeking authority to sell water to other municipalities. Relating to that issue, Pratt said at a recent Selectmen's meeting, "We are letting opportunity go out to the ocean everyday." However, Selectmen voted 4-1 not to recommend the article to Town Meeting.

A water rate increase is also on the Warrant. That issue received unanimous support from Selectmen.

Tune in and find out what Pratt has to say about these important issues and the goals of the water department.

Our Town airs Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays at 9pm on Comcast Channel 10.

Stay tuned Cohasset and stay informed!

Movie delivers anti-war message

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

"I would go from being a hero to a monster. I felt like one. I was a mess when I came back."
— Veteran featured in 'Ground Truth'

"There is no sanctuary in this war."

Those were the sobering words of one of many veterans, who were interviewed in "The Ground Truth," a critically praised documentary centering on the challenges faced by returning veterans in reuniting with their families and communities.

That statement reflected the soldiers' feelings not only about their time in Iraq but also about returning home, often injured, full of remorse, and feeling like merely shells of their former selves. One veteran in the film summed up his feelings in a couple of brief sentences: "I didn't fit. You don't like yourself anymore because you hate what you just did [in Iraq]."

It was in the spirit of honoring United States soldiers and veterans that Weymouth resident Carlotta Hayes scheduled a showing of the film at the Hingham library March 14. A number of Hingham, Weymouth, Scituate, and Cohasset residents attended. The film is being shown all over the country to raise awareness about the plight of veterans.

"I come from a Quaker family and I am a pacifist," Hayes said. "But I realize that not everyone holds the same viewpoint." Whatever your opinion about the war, she said, "Veterans deserve respect."

Before the film began, Hayes asked any veterans who were in the room to stand and be recognized. Several stood up and were met with heartening applause.

"The Ground Truth" is a graphic, gripping, and moving portrayal of the horrors of war on both sides and the difficult task of re-entering society after returning from combat. "It's absolutely ridiculous to think that we can revert back to being civilians after being told to kill," said one veteran in the film.

The soldiers were frank about their feelings. One called the debriefing experience "a slow descent from hell."

Others found the recruitment process misleading. "Unlike the warning on a package of cigarettes, there's no warning that a soldier might die," one veteran interviewed in the documentary noted. "You are told you will become a man. You're not given the full picture. The information is soft-pedaled."

Veterans also shared the reasons why they joined the armed services. These ranged from needing money for school to wanting to avoid getting into trouble. Another soldier "felt an obligation to give back. It was about love for our country, which is the greatest place in the world," he recalled.

Another soldier in the film rued the fact that while there a number of benefits to military service, "the purpose is to kill, to take life." Others noted that "starting with basic training, they systematically break you down" and that "the training is so effective that the vast majority emerge as warriors" in the struggle to survive.

Members of returning veterans' families shared their experiences. One woman had to care for her seriously injured husband, children, and house all at the same time, never knowing when life would start to get back to normal, if ever. One spouse realized that "a part of my husband died over there."

Another returning veteran's family recalled their son calling himself a killer before committing suicide. "There are emotional scars. They're not a physical thing so no one can see it coming," his mother said.

Other veterans say they will never be the same. One can't get the memory of discovering that he had killed three innocent Iraqis out of his mind.

Another soldier recalled seeing children whipped with antennas and breaking bottles over civilians' heads. "We could all do that given the proper circumstances," he said.

One veteran spoke of "the demons we have to wrestle with now. Another talked about the "ball of adrenalin I still have in my gut after three years of training. You can't just give it up," he said.

Perhaps the most sobering part of the film was descriptions of the killing of innocent civilians, including women and children, and the scars those deeds left on the soldiers. In the words of one veteran in the film: "All the aggression and hatred gets focused on every single Iraqi." Others spoke of "cold-blooded killing," "peer pressure," and the smell of burning flesh.

"My wife was so proud of me – how can I tell her about the dead kid at the side of the road?" one veteran said. "I would go from being a hero to a monster. I felt like one. I was a mess when I came back."

Another said he felt compromised — "You see kids playing football on one block calling, 'America! America!' and on the next block you get shot at."

Another soldier admitted to singing songs about "killing kids in schoolyards or women who are shopping." Another wondered if he was up to the task. "I asked myself, 'Will I be able to kill someone or will I flip out?" he recalled.

Another veteran in the film commented, "We're talking about giving a 19-year-old a rifle and ammunition and putting him behind the wheel of a tank and saying, 'If you want to go home, if you want to go back to your girlfriend, go in and destroy that city."

Images of returning veterans in wheelchairs or with shattered or missing limbs or with a face so severely damaged that it was difficult not to look away in horror combined with ones of injured Iraqis, including children, will likely stay in the minds of those who view the film for a long time.

So will the words of the veterans, in particular those spoken by one soldier who said: "Some days I'm glad to be alive, but other times I wish they would have killed me. I can't run or dance. In a way it's like I'm lost."

Another said, "I took my anger home with me. I didn't turn it in with my duffel bag." Still another said he sleeps with a gun in his bed.

The audience sat in silence as the showing of "The Ground Truth" came to an end. The discussion following the film was respectful, representing both sides of the issue. One thing was apparent — supporters of the United States invasion of Iraq and those who vehemently oppose the continuing occupation have at least a common interest in supporting the American troops.

Veterans in the film were angered by the length of time it takes to collect benefits and the related reams of paperwork and by the lack of attention to psychological issues stemming from their experiences in Iraq.

One veteran in the film encouraged fellow soldiers to speak out about their problems.

A World War II veteran, who attended the Hingham viewing of "The Ground Truth," expressed gratitude for the good care he has received from the Veterans Administration but was disturbed to hear that some Iraq veterans aren't receiving the same. "The news is not getting out. Where's the outrage? Why aren't we protesting [to get better treatment for veterans]?" he asked.

Elizabeth Wilding-Smith of Hingham wondered how anyone could think this is a "good and necessary war" after watching the film.

Keith Jermyn, who returned to Hingham from Iraq 10 months ago, called it "a powerful movie." Then he offered another side of the coin. "Some people are proud to be in Iraq," he said. "I fought to free those oppressed people." He also said that the film failed to show the "$50,000 sewer project and power upgrades we worked on over there."

Jermyn claimed he "didn't see any of what is shown here in Iraq. We were greeted warmly while there," he said. "We are helping people over there, and seeing this makes me proud to serve."

A Scituate mother of two boys expressed concern about the presence of military recruiters in some school cafeterias.

Robert Loring of Weymouth, who was wearing a hat with an "Impeach Bush" logo, said he was pleased to watch the film with "a roomful of peace advocates. There should be 1,000 people here watching this," he said. "It's a war you can't win."

Cohasset resident Rai Cunningham, who comes from a family with a military history harking back to the Battle of Gettysburg, called the movie "horrific." "Something about this war is rotten at the core," she said. "The creeping numbness among Americans is frightening. What's it going to take for our country to wake up and come out of this daze?"

"Bring the draft back!" was the suggestion of a couple of viewers.

Debbie Ludwig of Hingham recalled that "when the war started being framed in such a way that it was considered unpatriotic to dissent, people started being quiet," she said. "This just doesn't feel right."

At Hayes' request, the audience applauded each speaker for having the courage to speak his or her views. As the event drew to a close, she suggested, "Perhaps we could all work together on veterans' benefits and to find our common areas."

Hingham resident Shirley Brown encouraged those who are against the occupation of Iraq to join a peace vigil, write to the President, or "do whatever you can to help get us out of this terrible mess."

Perhaps the speaker who made the biggest impact was Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, who was among those who welcomed Jermyn home last year. Hedlund was the only Republican to support a resolution at the State House calling for the war in Iraq to end immediately. "United States military personnel are in 135 countries," he said. "This interventionist meddling has become institutionalized in our nation's foreign policy."

Although he said as a Republican, he's frustrated – "I feel like a man without a country" — Hedlund went on to say that war "is not a partisan issue. The money we're spending in Iraq could be used to fix this country. I've been biting my tongue for three or four years out of a fear of alienating my supporters, but many of my colleagues who didn't put their name to this resolution are also frustrated, befuddled, and outright disgusted about the direction in which this is going," Hedlund said.

The resolution was filed in response to a message to bring troops home now sent by voters in the 36 representative districts across the state — including Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, and Scituate (Precinct 3) —where it appeared on the Nov. 7 ballot.

One Vietnam veteran in the audience at the library called both wars a "waste of life and integrity. We have to rise up as citizens – we've lost our voice," he said.

'Peace Among Nations'

A Reflection by Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull, First Parish Unitarian Universalist Cohasset, for a service on Peacemaking at the Annual Union Service of Six South Shore Congregations, March 18.

Keeping hope is as tough as keeping peace. Building hope is as tortuous as building peace.

It was a tough choice — whether to tend to the erudite words and the commanding presence of my professor or to catch a glance through the window at the sun dipping into the Mediterranean waters just a few hundred yards from my classroom. As a student in this year-long seminar on Moral Philosophy, I knew I was privileged to learn through the seasoned lens of Dr. Charles Malik, as schooled in the philosophical particulars of Plato and Nietzsche as he was skilled in the political intricacies of Lebanon and the Middle East. As I sifted through the ideas and exchanges of that classroom and those occasional field seminars that lifted those exchanges into the villages above Beirut, I knew that these were moments not to be missed, however tempting the sunsets. Here was the man who had served as the first President of the General Assembly of the United Nations at its founding in 1945. Dr. Malik would lace his commentary on moral philosophy with stories of notes passed back and forth with Dag Hammarskjöld in their days at the UN. He would tease the political taboos of this Lebanese university with an offhand comment favorable to Israel. I learned a large horizon from that man so committed to peace among nations, so hopeful that it was possible.

My roommate that year was from Baghdad. Laila was in Beirut on a mathematics scholarship from her government. She would return home proud to bring expertise valued by her country in a discipline that still carried a gender barrier for young girls in my own.

Yet unknown to me was another student at the university, a young Palestinian woman who in 1948 with the creation of Israel had been forced to flee with her family first to Jerusalem and then to Beirut. Years later I would meet her at the Unitarian Church of All Souls in New York City, a city she would have long called home. At All Souls, Hanan became chair of the Peace Task Force.

How woven we are. How woven we are in this web that is never static. We know what happened last summer with the devastation of Southern Lebanon, with the raids on both sides of the border. We know that tomorrow marks the fourth anniversary of our country's invasion of Laila's homeland. We know that the institution served so well by Charles Malik and Dag Hammarskjöld still stands, however little faith some vest in it, no matter how many times it has kept us all from the brink of the even more horrific.

Ours is an extended family of nations. There is ready grist for petty quarrels; there is ready venom for brutality and war. Hope is commonly called unrealistic in this unruly family. Sharing does not come easy for this family's most spoiled children. Resentment and rage flair understandably for this family's most fragile members. Keeping the peace is fraught with problems that accrue when human rights are sacrificed on the altars of being right and having more.

Hope is unrealistic only in hearts and minds that hoard the tools of realism. Keeping hope is as tough as keeping peace. Building hope is as tortuous as building peace. Yet we as Unitarian Universalists espouse a goal of "world community with peace, liberty and justice for all." Is this just idle religious chit-chat or are we serious? How faithful are we to this notion of a functional global family? How ready are we as citizens and as people of faith to beat our addiction to goods and resources that come at such an unconscionable price to other family members? How ready are we as a family of faith to wade into the murky waters of peace among nations when we quarrel over money and the kids in our congregations?

How ready are we, I wonder, as my head turns to look out the window and catch the sun dipping once again into those waters off the coast of that jewel city of the Mediterranean, as the wisdom of my professor resonates through the years, and as the silent footsteps of my unknowing friend out there on the campus hold a Palestinian history, a Lebanese present and an American future. How ready are we, I wonder, as we consider once more just how it is our family of nations will be family.

Question of the Week

Town boards have a lot of business to attend to. However, it is the public's business. Even as reporters we face challenges grasping all the issue and at times, boards do not relate well to audience members whether present at the meeting or on TV. What can you do to ensure the government's business is more "user friendly" to the citizenry?

SELECTMAN/ Paul Carlson

Town citizens and board members occasionally have difficulty grasping all the issues that come before the boards. The board members clearly cannot be expert in all matters that come before them. Many of the issues discussed at these meetings are complex, some requiring specialized knowledge. In order to be knowledgeable, board members frequently must spend time prior to the meetings studying these issues. The members often rely on the very useful background information provided for the meetings.

We should make that background information broadly available by placing the information packets on our town website and in hard copy form at the Town Manager's office prior to the meetings. Confidential information (I have been told only a few percent of the total) would, of course, need to be kept separate from the public information. Thus, interested citizens could access the information provided the board members. If there is sufficient interest in posting these documents, we need to determine whether there are any logistical problems and decide how to make the information broadly available.

We also have numerous specialized appointed town committees that work very hard on various key issues. Some examples are the Stormwater Committee, the Capital Budget Committee and the Economic Development Committee. Their meetings are posted on the Town Clerk's bulletin board and on the town website. They are open to the public and all who are interested should attend. The committees also report to the Board of Selectmen.

The Mariner reporters have been impressive in discussing many difficult issues for the general reader. The television broadcasting of many board meetings has also brought the deliberations into our homes.

Furthermore, as a selectman, I will be available to citizens who wish to discuss town issues either on the phone or at one of our coffee shops.

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dornitzer

Every Friday the Selectmen receive a thick packet of information from Town Hall. It contains background materials for the upcoming Selectmen's meeting, important correspondence, legal briefs, personal letters and myriad other documents. In addition, in the months leading up to Town Meeting, warrant articles and pertinent background materials are added to the packet. During the week Bill Griffin keeps us informed with e-mails, often several each day. It is a challenge for the Selectmen to cope intelligently with this volume. I can understand the frustration of anyone watching or attending a Selectmen's meeting.

At our meetings, however, the discussion between Selectmen and with proponents of articles is open. We have the advantage of having seen the article or issue in advance and, perhaps, have been advised by legal counsel. Nevertheless, the discussions are frank and open, and the written materials, excepting confidential legal documents, are available to the public.

Unless you are a regular attendee at a Selectmen's meeting, it may not be obvious how we conduct our meetings. As a starting point, however, you might check out the Town web site, www.townofcohasset.org. On it are posted Selectmen's meetings with dates and the order of business for the next meeting. The web site also contains approved minutes, news, announcements and information from all the Town departments. Selectmen's meetings are also televised. A significant upgrade here would be a better sound system and, from a meeting management point of view, a requirement that all who wish to speak do so before a microphone. In addition would be a white board capability that would allow the viewer access to written materials on the web as the Selectmen discuss them.

Finally, the Mariner is an important resource for those who wish to be informed on Town business. It is reliably comprehensive and accurate. Somehow, the paper seems to get it right.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

As I have committed myself over the past three years, I will continue to make sure the citizens of Cohasset have numerous ways to access factual information. The School Committee welcomes questions and/or comments during specific agenda items.

As for me, I attend numerous meetings from the Cohasset Elder Affairs, School Council and up to 4 different PSO meetings all in an effort to be accessible to my constituents. I believe by me going out to the public arena, it makes it possible for some to ask questions that they may have but in a less formal arena and in front of the camera.

Over the next year, I believe the leadership in our town will have to tackle some very difficult financial questions regarding the direction of our town. It will be imperative that one takes the time to retrieve fact-based information.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Peter Richardsson

Last Thursday my wife was honored at a State House ceremony to recognize her department at The Town of Hingham. She is in charge of the town's website and over 40 other cities and towns were recognized on March 15th at a ceremony that took place during Sunshine Week, an annual event created to increase awareness about open government issues.

Each municipality was presented with the 2007 E-Government Award by Common Cause Massachusetts Executive Director, Pam Wilmot. Ms. Wilmot said, "Many communities rose to the challenge and significantly improved their websites over the past year. With the growth of the internet, everyone should be able to obtain important information about their local government with the click of a mouse. Through a grassroots outreach, the Massachusetts Campaign for Open Government will work to enable people to do just that by dramatically increasing the number of communities that post key governance records online. This simple and inexpensive action will open local government to more people and will greatly improve everyone's ability to be a responsible, informed citizen."

All of 41 communities out of 351 in the Commonwealth had to provide key information on their website to its residents. The key information, as determined by the Massachusetts Campaign for Open Government, included the following; agendas, minutes, current fiscal year budgets, bylaws, and town meeting warrant and results. Now that Cohasset has a great website, the heavy lifting has been done.

I like to think that that I am articulate and bright and clean and a nice-looking guy, but the more information that is available to voters in a timely, open, and ubiquitous fashion, the less we all have to rely on idiosyncrasies of interpersonal relations.

NEXT WEEK'S QUESTION

For Selectman candidates: It looks as though the "state match" for the Community Preservation Fund is going to be greatly reduced. Has the time come to revisit Cohasset's participation in the Community Preservation Act?

School Committee candidates: How will you, as a school committee member, ensure that the "best and brightest" teacher workforce is recruited, nurtured, and retained given the town's current fiscal landscape and community demands for excellence?

Responses should be brief —no more than 300 words — and should be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

'I really love good design'

FROM GOOD DESIGN, PAGE 8

Israel they are now compulsory in all new bathrooms.

I love good design. I mean, really love good design. So imagine the beat at which my heart fluttered when I found this divine device — an object that meets a most fundamental need, functions consistently, is pleasing to the eye and provides me with a very easy, active way to regularly reduce my footprint on the environment. Renewable bliss, for sure!

So what does green design mean, anyway? When most people think of green products they are thinking about the materials that make-up the product. Are they environmentally safe and healthy? An example being organic fibers and non-toxic dyes used in textile design, and bamboo and low-VOC glues in furniture design. But there are less talked about aspects of green design that are equally as important as the product itself. Are sustainable production methods in place such as using renewable energy for manufacturing and transport? Are the conditions of workers in the workplace just and safe? And is there a plan for reusing or recycling the product after its usefulness is tapped? And finally, there are products that may not meet the above criteria but they encourage and support sustainable practices, like my coveted Toto toilet or well-designed SIGG bottles that keep me from buying single-use plastic water bottles.

A really encouraging step is the "Cradle to Cradle" movement, which is working to credibly certify products that meet environmentally intelligent design metrics such as those mentioned above. As a consumer, I can think of nothing better than knowing that I am making the most informed choices for my well-being and the well-being of my family and the environment.

Lucky for us (meaning we and Mama Earth) the green design market is exploding. As of this writing you'd be hard-pressed to not find a green alternative for most common consumer products. Of course there are some difficult-to-redeem items that might be harder to find: snow mobiles and leaf blowers come to mind. But our choices as consumers are brimming with rich options. And even better, green alternatives are now being chosen for their inherent virtues of good design as opposed to just an environmental justice commentary. At last, green values are becoming an integral and indistinguishable part of our product making process.

And really, design that harms the environment is just bad design. Period.

Happy flushing.

JoAnn Mirise lives and writes in Cohasset. The Toto toilet is available locally through Republic Plumbing in Weymouth. SIGG bottles are available through reusablebags.com.

Six CPC projects to seek Town Meeting approval

makes recommendations to the legislative authority in a town or municipality, (in Cohasset's case, Town Meeting). The CPC is required to make yearly recommendations to Town Meeting, even in the event that they feel the money should be saved rather than spent.

If recommendations are approved through town meeting, the allocated funds are transferred to the town account empowering the Town Manager with oversight of the project and the associated funds. Monies that were allotted to a specific project cannot be used for any other purpose. Any remaining amount will go back to the CPC's accounts.

At the conclusion of fiscal year 2007 (June 30), the CPC anticipates $258,000 in the bank. Expected revenue for the FY08 is approximately $495,000.

All CPC projects must receive a two-thirds vote at Town Meeting to move forward.

• 'Old' Town Hall fix-up plan recommended — David Farrag applied for CPC funds as a private citizen to hire an historic restoration architectural firm to determine the best way to repair the "old" portion of Town Hall. The architect will look at the building as a whole and work with the Town to find the best methods to bring out the historic buildings' character.

The antiquated portion of Town Hall includes the auditorium and some offices on the second floor. The last time it had any significant renovation was in the mid-1920s.

The CPC recommended an allocation of $35,000 to hire the architect and possibly a structural engineer.

On a separate application, put forth by Building Inspector Bob Egan, the CPC recommended $4140 to replace the "Cohasset Town Hall" sign. The current sign is over 20 years old and has peeling letters. The amount will cover the cost of the sign and the labor to install it.

• Housing Trust Fund still up in the air — Tom Callahan, Housing Partnership member, requested the CPC's endorsement of the Housing Partnership's Town Meeting article last Wednesday. The article (Article 20 in the Town Meeting Warrant) seeks to establish an affordable housing trust fund in accordance with a recently passed state statute (Massachusetts General Law Chapter 44, Section 55C).

In addition, the passing of the article at Town Meeting will form a new town agency — Cohasset Affordable Housing Trust. The current Housing Authority would be dissolved. The trust fund, according to Callahan, will enable the Housing Authority to have the money to pursue housing opportunities within Cohasset. He indicated that it's difficult to deal in the private real estate sector if the funding has to be approved through Town Meeting, which only meets twice a year.

According to Callahan, the article, if passed, will give the Housing Partnership a degree of independence while their function and methods would stay the same.

"The fund will be a tool that will help us do our job better," Callahan said.

The CPC has to bank or spend 10 percent of its funding on community housing. If the Affordable Housing Trust Fund is established at Town Meeting then Callahan requested that CPC transfer that percentage to the Housing Trust.

Chairman Stuart Ivimey agreed that the CPC was not the correct group to deal with affordable housing and the Housing Partnership would have the expertise in that area. However, "we need checks and balances," within town organizations, he said.

Member Ralph Dormitzer, also Chairman of the Board of Selectmen, indicated that the "public process is critical" and an organizational change is "way premature."

The Housing Authority will go before the Selectmen again on March 26. They previously approached the Selectmen on March 5. Selectmen have yet to make their Town Meeting recommendation for this article.

"The CPC is a fund that unites, I don't want us to get into a divisive issue," said CPC member, Al Moore. The Housing Partnership was created last year and has proposed one affordable housing project on Ripley Road. Many of the neighbors of the Ripley Road project attended the meeting to share their frustration with not being included from the very start of the project.

Mindy Evans of 36 Sohier Road suggested that increased citizen participation from the beginning of a project was necessary. She also suggested Callahan and the Housing Partnership look at alternative funding and how other states and towns like Cohasset are meeting the need for affordable housing.

"Somewhere in here is a good idea, but I don't think we're there yet," said Ivimey. No endorsement was given. The CPC may convene before Town Meeting to discuss this issue further, but at press time no meeting has been posted.

• Collapsed Border Street Culvert needs rebuilding— The Harbor Health Committee and the Conservation Committee applied jointly for CPC funding to hire an engineer to create designs for the repair of the culvert under Border Street. A culvert, according to the EPA website, is a metal, wooden, plastic, or concrete conduit through which surface water can flow under or across roads. This culvert has collapsed and it is causing environmental problems in both the harbor and the Gulf River Estuary.

The request, presented by Karen Quigley and David Farrag, is part of a larger resource protection, restoration, and pollution mitigation initiative for Cohasset Harbor and the Gulf River Estuary. According to their application, the culvert has collapsed "effectively damming the flow of water into the salt marsh. Without sufficient flow, the marsh is subject to further degradation, and to invasion by phragmites that will eventually crowd out the salt grasses and marine wildlife." Essentially water isn't exchanging and the saltwater is becoming stagnant creating a prime location for bacteria growth that will eventually drive wildlife from the area.

The funds requested will be used for project engineering and permitting. This funding is necessary to leverage grant support from various organizations including Restoring America's Estuaries, Conservation Law Foundation, and NOAA Restoration Partnership.

Additional support for this project will be provided by the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research, the Department of Public Works and efforts from both the Conservation Commission and the Harbor Health Committee.

"This project will lead to a healthier harbor," said Stuart Ivimey, Chairman of the CPC.

The CPC recommended the proposal and an amount $20,000 with the assurance that the remainder of the funding for the project will be in place by the end of 2008. It will take an estimated $60,000 to complete this project.

• CMI proposes a return to building's historic purpose — The Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) requested funds to repair and preserve their boathouse to its historic look and purpose. Their effort for building renovation will replace the asphalt roofing with red cedar shingles since a wooden roof is consistent with the building materials used when the building was originally erected. The request also includes air-sealing, new windows and insulating the building for occasional cold weather use, installing electrical lighting and outlets to code, and erecting a sign to identify the building.

The house, which is town-owned, sits at 40 Parker Ave. on Bailey's Creek at Cohasset Harbor. It is being leased for $1 per year from the town. According to the application, the US Lighthouse Shore Station Reservation erected the building in 1855 on Government Island as a boathouse. The boathouse has been used for several purposes over the years but the Cohasset Maritime Institute has restored it to its former use as a boat storage center.

"We want to restore the boathouse and focus on the maritime history of Cohasset lifesaving boats. We've restored one surf boat so far," said Board Member Jack Buckley, "It's a historic mission to keep the spirit alive in the town of Cohasset."

The Maritime Institute would like to expand its current rowing offerings to classes that center on wooden boats restoration and building. Two wooden boats have been built so far with kids. The insulation would allow classes to occur off-season (with the help of portable heating devices), and the lighting will allow classes into the evenings.

CPC member Ralph Dormitzer did not agree completely with the proposed changes.

"I want to restore, not change the building. I am not going to support changes that are not historically accurate," said Dormitzer. He referred to new windows and insulation as some of the anachronisms of the plan.

Member Nathaniel Palmer disagreed, saying he would prefer to have a modern, usable building for historic use than worry about the actual structure being completely historically accurate.

The CPC recommended a $50,000 allotment for the Cohasset Maritime Institute. All were for the motion, with the exception of Dormitzer. Town Meeting will have the final vote on this allocation.

• Recommended Debt Payoff for Beechwood fields — At the conclusion of the last meeting on March 13, Ivimey brought up the outstanding short term borrowing for the restoration of the Beechwood playing fields. At the fall special town meeting, $300,000 in borrowing was approved for this project. At a previous Town Meeting, the CPC recommended $300,000 cash allocation toward the restoration of the Beechwood fields with upgrades including a reorientation of the field allowing it to be better utilized by both baseball and soccer teams, an update to the basketball court and "tot lot" playground, an installation of public lavatories and a new drainage system. The project was floated with the promise of paying back the mortgage within 5 years. The CPC recommended that $100,000 go toward the loan's principal. The CPC is scheduled to pay $75,000 toward the principal and interest in fiscal year 2008 as well.

The Third Black Rock House with its familiar tower.

Miss Sarah Smith was the proprietor of Cohasset's Second Black Rock House, which was torn down in 1903 when it was bought by summer residents on the opposite side of the street and removed to improve their ocean view. In 1904, Miss Smith built the Third Black Rock House, which she owned and operated until her death in 1914. During her ownership, she was responsible for not only enlarging the resort, but for also adding the familiar tower.

It was the largest of the shoreline hotels and at its peak in the early 1900's was a very fashionable place for the elite to stay. Its attractiveness we are sure was due not only to its spectacular location but to its proprietor of whom it was said, she was a great favorite with her guests because of her genuine kindness and solicitude for their welfare.

Sarah Smith, Proprietor of the Second and Third Black Rock Houses.

Some Town Meeting articles at a glance

• Article 12 – Capital Improvements Bylaw — The Capital Budget Committee seeks "clarify and crystallize definition of capital items," according to Mark Baker, Chairman of the Committee. The Article also further defines the role of the Capital Budget Committee as an advisory body that is charged to review purchases and/or actions that will "materially alter the enduring value of the town's asset base or capital structure." Baker told the Selectman that this article will "help [the Committee] in forecasting, planning and maintenance of capital items within the Town." The article seeks to broaden the definition of capital assets by including natural resources, such as Cohasset Harbor and Lily Pond.

The Selectmen voted to recommend the article, 5-0.

• Article 20 – Housing Trust Fund —Cohasset Housing Authority is seeking to establish its own trust fund in accordance with a recently established state statute (Massachusetts General Law Chapter 44, Section 55C). In addition, the passing of the article at Town Meeting will form a new town agency — Cohasset Affordable Housing Trust. The current Housing Authority would be dissolved. The trust fund, according to Housing Authority member Tom Callahan, will enable the Housing Authority to have the money to pursue housing opportunities within Cohasset.

"We need to be able to get other sources of money and be able to react to the marketplace," Callahan said, "right now, the only way to get appropriation from Town Meeting." The Town Meeting schedule does not always adhere to real estate opportunities and the establishment of the trust will give the organization independence and flexibility, Callahan said.

Selectman Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said he felt the establishment of a trust fund took the Housing Authority away from proper political process, giving the Selectmen little authority or control over their actions.

The Housing Authority formed about a year ago and has pursued one possible affordable housing project on Ripley Road.

The Housing Authority will go before the Selectmen again on Monday, March 26.

• Article 14 – Zoning Bylaw Amendment – Village Business "VB" District — This article will add a new zoning district for Village Business. Currently there are four areas defined as a Downtown Business District: Cohasset Village area, a portion of the Harbor area, the West Corner, and a small area in the Beechwood section. Article 14 seeks to create a separate zoning area for the Cohasset Village, which will be known as the Village Business District or "VB". If the article passes at Town Meeting, the Cohasset Village District will adopt the same notations currently under the Downtown Business District, including the same dimensional, use and parking provisions. The separation of the Village District from the other Downtown Business District will allow specific bylaws to be established for the Village District. The Planning Board recommended the article for approval in a 4-0 vote. The Selectmen voted to recommend the article 5-0.

•Article 13 – Zoning Bylaw Amendment - Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District, Over 55 Age Restriction — The current Senior Multi-Family Residence Overlay District (SMFROD), Over 55 Age Restriction imposes a 14- day limit on visits by persons under the age of 55 years. The amendment would change the restriction so that visitors cannot be present more that six months in a nine-month period. This change allows residents with college-age kids to come home during summers and breaks. The responsibility of enforcement of the by-law will fall on the homeowners association. This bylaw had been "sunseted," or taken from the town's zoning bylaws, in a previous Town Meeting. Cedarmere is the only development constructed under the bylaw. The Selectmen voted to recommend this Article unanimously.

Students knitting dolls for kids in Africa family has been affected by HIV/AIDS.

In Kigali, there is an association of child-headed households called Amahoro (or "peace") was formed by eight young people in their late teens in 2000. The founders had been orphaned by genocide and realized there were more kids, even younger than themselves, were heading households and raising their siblings. Today, there are 412 families and 1500 children participating in the program. The CHABHA funds have enabled many children to return to school. Amahoro is still run by its founders and is an example of how much kids can help each other.

"This will be the only gift a child will receive in his/her lifetime," said Staci Gilbert. The dolls will go to children who have been orphaned by the HIV/AIDS pandemic, specifically to households headed by children.

"I knew the dolls were for kids who don't have anything. And I thought if I can do it, then maybe my friends can do it too."

— Molly Gilbert, sophomore

CHABHA is a non-profit organization founded in 2002, whose mission is to raise awareness in the US about the plight of children in Africa and to support community-based projects in Namibia, South Africa and Rwanda. Last year, they sent 215 duduza dolls and were confronted by over 1000 children who wanted them.

Once Molly, who hadn't knitted in years, realized how simple it was a make one, she wanted to get others involved.

"I knew the dolls were for kids who don't have anything. And I thought if I can do it, then maybe my friends can do it too," she said at the Knitting Club's second meeting last Wednesday, "it's a learning experience too."

She asked her friends if they would be interested in doing something like a knitting club and they seemed enthusiastic. She started the approval process to get a new club off the ground by talking with various administrators. Her favorite teacher English teacher Christine Berman volunteered to be the group's faculty advisor. Molly got the word out further by putting up signs all over the school to let people know about their first meeting.

The majority of the Knitting Club's members have had very little experience with knitting. A few knew the basics from middle school art class when they knit hats for Rosie's Place, a women's homeless shelter in the Boston's South End.

"It's kinda nice to be a part of a club," said sophomore Fiona McBride, "it's fun to knit with other people."

The all female group at last Wednesday's meeting caught on quickly under the instruction of Staci Gilbert who volunteered her knowledge to the club. She also donated colorful (and sparkly) yarn and sets of knitting needles. Kristin Ross, owner of The Creative Stitch, stopped in to show the club some of the dolls that have been knitted and donated.

"It's a learning experience that's fun too," said Molly, "I figured we could start with the dolls because they are simple and maybe start a new project once everyone got the hang of it."

"Knitting the dolls is kinda neat, knitting scarves is kinda boring," said sophomore Jessie Fitts. For experienced knitters the dolls should take about two hours to create. With practice, the high school knitters will get to that point. The result will be a product that they can feel proud of — and know that their handiwork is going toward a good cause. A side benefit is learning a skill that can become a lifelong hobby.

The Knitting Club members have ideas to jazz up their dolls, with cloth flowers for the dolls "hair", patterned yarn and possibly names.

The fact that the dolls the high schoolers are knitting will be going to kids their own age but who are living completely different lives is compelling. The Knitting Club, in the spirit of Amahoro, is a global example of kids helping kids.

The club is likely to start meeting during lunch period due to the beginning of spring sports, but will remain meeting on Wednesdays. Although Molly hasn't set a goal for how many dolls the Knitting Club should make, she hopes that each member will make at least one.

Knitters who would like to participate in this grassroots effort can pick up the pattern at The Creative Stitch on King St. (3A). Already owner Kristin Ross has collected more than 50 duduza dolls. Instructions are also available on the CHABHA website, www.chabha.com.

Christine Berman, faculty advisor to the Knitting Club, shares the same bright smile that the Duduza Doll will hopefully bring to African children who have been orphaned by AIDS.

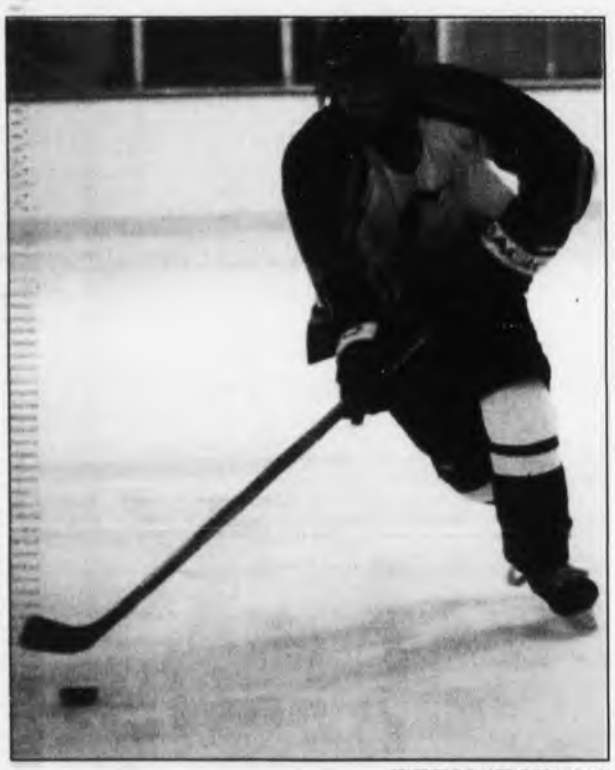
Skaters looking for more in '08

By Mark Goodman
MGOODMAN@CNC.COM

If nothing else, the Cohasset High hockey team has been consistent over the last three seasons.

In this particular case, however, that's not necessarily a good thing. It's not bad, either, but the Skippers will be looking to change things up in 2007-08.

For the last three years, the program has hovered around .500 and gone into the last week of the regular season needing points to qualify for the state tournament. The Skippers fell one win short in 2005, and just made it the last two years. Neither time did Cohasset advance past the first round.



This year saw a preliminary round exit at the hands of Cape Tech/Chatham via a 7-4 score. The loss saw the Skippers' final record drop to 8-9-3 on the year.

What will it take for Cohasset to take the next step? For one, the Skippers will need to find a way to replace some of their veteran defensemen that are graduating this June. Seniors Conor Holway and Zack Murray were the first two blue line options this season, and both brought fast, strong, physical styles to the ice that the team will miss. Fellow senior Ben Massotta also logged some quality minutes when called upon.

Junior defensemen RK Quebec and Frank Wheelwright both saw their share of shifts and showed promise. Both improved as the season went on, and both have established themselves as the prime candidates to take over the top two spots next winter. Sophomore Ian Lyster also figures to be in the picture.

6th Grade boys advance to finals

When the seeds were announced for the Patriot League championship tournament, things did not look promising for the Cohasset sixth grade boys hoop team.

Out of the six teams that qualified for the playoffs, Cohasset was seeded fifth. In order to make it to the championship game they would have to find a way to beat the number four seed, Pembroke, and the number one seed, Abington.

Somehow, they managed to do just that last weekend.

On Saturday the boys played a tremendous game in defeating Pembroke, 32-28. During the regular season the teams split a pair of games, so everyone involved knew this would be a great game. Shane Haggerty played his best game of the season, leading all scorers with nine points, followed by Connor O'Brien with eight and Miles Garbarini with six. This was a true team win with eight players scoring and solid defense leading the way to victory.

On Sunday the boys matched up against the 17-1 Green Wave of Abington. Abington was the number one seed in the tournament and had beaten Cohasset twice during the regular season. If Cohasset had any chance of victory they would need to play near perfect basketball.

Cohasset had difficulties breaking Abington's press and trailed by seven points at half time. The second half saw big men Conor Dooley, Garbarini, Thomas Gilliatt and Haggerty play exceptional defense and pull down countless rebounds on offense to give Cohasset second chance opportunities.

Guard play by Colin Gideon-Murphy, Christian Davis, Trevor Schramm, Nick Tangherlini and O'Brien was tremendous. Sam Asnault and Justin Cobin played solid offense and defense all season long.

In the second half Abington's press became less effective and there were several times when pinpoint passing led to O'Brien splitting the seams of the press for dazzling lay-ups, but Cohasset still trailed by six points with 1:37 left to play. Cohasset would have to rely on its zone press, which was the backbone of their team all season long.

With Cohasset swarming to the ball they were able to get a turnover and Tangherlini drained a long-range 3-pointer to cut Abington's lead in half. With less than 30 seconds left in the game, Tangherlini intercepted a pass at mid-court and hit a streaking Davis for the lay-up to cut the deficit to one.

After an Abington timeout, on the ensuing inbounds pass, the ball was deflected and Haggerty and Tangherlini hit the floor to cause a jump ball. The possession arrow was in Cohasset's favor.

With 12 seconds left in the game, Haggerty inbounded the ball and threw a perfect pass to Davis, who shot a slow motion 3-pointer that was nothing but net giving Cohasset a two-point lead. Abington used its final time out with seven seconds to go to set up its final shot.

Abington quickly got the ball up the court, and Cohasset's sturdy defense bent but it did not break. With Dooley in the shooter's face, Abington put up a last shot that rimmed out and gave Cohasset the victory.

Davis led the scoring with 14 points, followed by O'Brien with nine and Garbarini with eight. Cohasset faces the number two seed, Bridgewater, in the Patriot League's championship game on Saturday at 10 a.m. at Cohasset High School.

All-Scholastic wrestling team

Cohasset's Nick Cambi went 48-4 in his senior season en route to making the New England tournament for the second straight season.

As is always the case with these kinds of things, the selection process with this team was not an easy one.

In the end; however, the sports staff at Community Newspaper Company (CNC) had to make some tough decisions and we do feel secure that we chose the top public school wrestlers for this honor.

It should be noted due to the large number of athletes in the CNC region, we split the athletes into two teams for wrestling: North and South. This is the CNC All-Scholastic North wrestling squad comprised of athletes from the following schools: Hanover, Marshfield, Weymouth, Braintree, Norwell, Scituate, Hingham, Abington, Rockland, Silver Lake, Pembroke, Cohasset and Duxbury.

Nick Cambi – Senior
(Captain)
189 – Cohasset

Another sterling season for the Skippers senior, who went 48–4 on the year en route to making New Englands…Finished fourth at All-States, joining prior Cohasset standouts Ryan Freeman and Matt Baroudi as the only Skipper grapplers to place twice at All-States…Won the Division 3 South sectional and state championships…During the regular season, Cambi won the Cohasset tournament, and finished third at both the Marshfield and North Quincy tourneys…Also a solid performer for the Cohasset football team, Cambi will continue is wrestling career at Roger Williams University

Adam Smith – Senior
145 – Cohasset

Battled through injuries to put together a 30-10 season, and saved his best for last by finishing fourth in the Division 3 state championships to qualify for All-States…In that state competition, Smith lost his first match, but then won the next five to get into the third place bout and assure a spot at All-States…Also placed second in the Division 3 South sectionals in one of the state's most difficult weight classes…Won his weight class at the Cohasset tournament in January…Smith also played soccer for Cohasset

Marcus Mulkerrin – Senior
(Captain)
285 – Braintree

Excelled in his first and only year as a full-time starter…Won the Division 1 State championship, pinning Methuen's Dan Caraballo in the final, and followed that with a third-place showing at All-States to qualify for New Englands…Lost just one match in the All-State competition…Mulkerrin started his season off right with a second place showing in January's Weymouth tournament, and it just got better from there…Voted as a captain by teammates before the season despite a relative lack of varsity experience…Praised by coach Mike Bochman for his combination of strength and agility…Mulkerrin was also a starting lineman for the Braintree football team

Marc Kurzberg – Senior (Captain)
112 – Braintree

This is Kurzberg's second nod to this team after another great season on the mat…Few can argue that, pound for pound, Kurzberg is one of the best in the area…Qualified for New Englands after finishing fifth in All-States…That was just part of Kurzberg's exceptional postseason, as he also won the Division 1 South sectional and took fourth in states…Won the Weymouth tournament in January, and soon thereafter went over the 100-win mark for his high school career

Johnny Heinstadt – Senior
112 pounds – Duxbury

This Patriot League All-star capped his four-year career with a trip to the All-State Championships at 112…Heinstadt qualified after finishing second at the Division 2 State Championships…A week earlier, Heinstadt took fourth at the Division 2 South Sectionals…During the regular season, Heinstadt won the 112-pound title at the Whitman/Hanson Tournament and finished fifth at the Marshfield Holiday Tournament.

John Egan – Senior
125 pounds – Hanover

Egan capped a great wrestling career at Hanover with a trip to the All-State Championships…The four-year grappler won the Division 3 South sectional title at 125 pounds this winter and went onto to take fifth at the Division 3 State championships, advancing to All-States…Egan was a fixture in regular season tournament finals, capturing second at both the Marshfield Holiday Tournament and Whitman/Hanson Tournament… He was one of the best in his weight class in the Patriot League and he earned his third-straight All-Star nomination for his efforts.

Greg Vaughn – Senior
285 pounds – Hingham

This senior finished his career in style with an fourth-place finish at the New England Championships in New Haven, Conn…Vaughn was one of the premier big men on the South Shore this winter, going unbeaten in dual-meet competition at 285 pounds…The senior captain wrestled perhaps his best match of the season at the Division 3 South sectionals, where he outlasted Foxboro's Chris Redd, 3-2, in four overtimes…He was named the Outstanding Wrestler of the Meet…From there, Vaughn took first at the Division 3 State championships and went onto take fifth at the All-States…His performance was instrumental in getting the Harbormen to the Division 3 South team finals, where they were edged by league rivals Rockland…A four-year grappler, Vaughn leaves some big shoes to fill.

Eddie Castillo – Senior
125 pounds – Marshfield

Castillo finished sixth at the All-State Championships this season, advancing to the New England Championships at 125 pounds…One of the most consistent grapplers on the Rams team, Castillo's performance this season was instrumental in Marshfield's run to the Division 2 South team finals…Individually, Castillo took second at the Division 2 South Sectionals and went onto take third at the Division 2 States…"Eddie peaked at the right time," coach Pat Brown said…Castillo pinned his opponent in a showdown with Mansfield in the team semifinals, helping to send the Rams to their first final.

Joe Pronk – Sophomore
112 pounds – Marshfield

This young up-and-comer was arguably the most skilled wrestler on the Rams squad this season…His performance at the 112-pound weight class helped Marshfield finish second in the Atlantic Coast League (5-1, 21-1 overall)…Individually, Pronk finished second at the Division 2 South sectionals and fifth at the Division 2 State championships…The sophomore took fourth at the All-State Championships, sending him to the New Englands in New Haven, Conn…During the season, Pronk took second at the Marshfield Holiday Tournament…A great season after his freshman campaign was cut short due to illness…Just a sophomore, Pronk still has a lot of wrestling to do at Marshfield High School.

Dan Longo – Junior
140 pounds – Pembroke

Making a repeat appearance on these pages, Longo followed up his terrific season a year ago with another fantastic campaign…He won the Division 3 South sectional at 140 pounds, and finished second in the Division 3 state meet…At All-States he earned a fifth place finish that qualified him for the New England meet…During the regular season he helped lift Pembroke to a solid 16-6 record, and earned a spot in the semifinals of the Division 3 South team tournament…He's only a junior and should be a dominant force on the wrestling scene once again next year, and could possibly compete for a state and New England championship next season.

Steve Tressel – Senior
152 pounds – Pembroke

Last season he was the catalyst in the Pembroke sectional championship match, and this year he brought his 'A' game nearly every night to cement his reputation…Tressel finished second at the Division 3 South sectionals this season, while helping the Titans to a strong finish in the Patriot League during the regular season…A standout football player in the fall, he managed to finish third in the Division 3 State tournament, which qualified him for All-States, where he earned a sixth place finish on the brightest stage in Massachusetts wrestling.

Dan Wandell –Senior
160 pounds – Pembroke

Another of the Pembroke standouts that captured a sectional title, Wandell earned his in the 160-pound division for the second straight season…Wandell followed up his South sectional efforts with a second-place finish at the Division 3 State meet…He earned a spot at the All-States meet, but fell short of qualifying for the New England tournament while taking part in a very competitive field…He still had an accomplished career, and was one of the building blocks that helped for the foundation of Pembroke wrestling, that is rapidly becoming one of the dominant local squads, despite only being in existence for three years.

Scott Sayce – Senior
145 pounds – Pembroke

The walls in the new Pembroke gym are somewhat barren, but the way the wrestling team is going they'll fill that up soon…Sayce contributed to the cause this season by capturing his first South sectional title, and for that he earned his first All-Scholastic recognition…He followed up the sectional with an even more prestigious honor, a Division 3 State championship, which he earned over a Southwick wrestler in an 11-4 decision…Sayce fell short in a bid to qualify for the New England tournament, but that state and sectional championship experience is certainly well worth the trade.

John Bellrose – Junior
171 pounds – Rockland

After sharing the Patriot League title with Duxbury and Pembroke last year, the Bulldogs took sole possession of the crown this season and Bellrose was a big reason why…At 171 pounds, the junior was one of the top grapplers in the Patriot League, guiding the Bulldogs to a 17-2 overall record and 8-0 mark in the league…His pin over his Hingham opponent in the Division 3 South team finals helped Rockland come out on top and advance to the state semis…There, he needed just 20 seconds to pin is Southwick-Tolland opponent in the final match of the night…Individually, Bellrose took third at the Division 3 South sectionals and went on to take sixth at the Division 3 State championships, advancing to All-States…Just a junior, Bellrose still has another season to wrestle at Rockland.

Ethan Flood – Sophomore
112 pounds – Scituate

Established himself as the cornerstone for the future of Scituate wrestling with a superlative sophomore season that resulted in qualification for All-States…Took second in the Division 3 state tournament, not allowing his opponents to earn a single point in any match until the championship bout…States performance came on the heels of another dominant showing at the Division 3 South sectional, which Flood won…Also took first in the very competitive Marshfield and Cohasset tournaments during the regular season

Eric Harrison – Freshman
103 pounds – Weymouth

This talented freshman seems ready to take the torch of Weymouth wrestling for the next few years, if he already hasn't…In his first year on the varsity mat Harrison secured the Division 1 South title at 103 pounds…During the regular season he was a consistent winner in helping lead the Wildcats to the Bay State title, and a berth in the Division 1 South final of the team tournament…After winning sectionals Harrison placed fifth at the Division 1 State tournament, and fifth at All-States, which earned him a spot at New Englands…Any way you look at it, this was a wonderful debut season, that leaves many wondering what more can he do.

Jake Harrison – Junior
145 pounds – Weymouth

The older of the Harrison brother duo won over 50 matches this season and managed not to be overshadowed by his brother by simply matching him accomplishment for accomplishment…Harrison won the Division 1 South sectional…He followed that up by finishing third at the Division 1 tournament, and took fifth place in the All-State tournament…Harrison also qualified for New Englands for his postseason efforts…He will return next year, and looks to be one of the top wrestlers in the region, while the Wildcats attempt to take back the sectional title.

TIPS FOR PARENTS ON FINDING A SUMMER CAMP WHEN TIME IS RUNNING OUT!

BY BETTE BUSSEL, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, AMERICAN CAMP ASSOCIATION, NEW ENGLAND

As hard as it is to believe, as you scrape the ice off your windshield this March, the time to enroll your child in summer camp is NOW! Many camps fill up during the winter months…some are even booked up by the end of the last summer session. But, there is hope and there is help.

• Before launching your search, make sure your child is ready for camp! Before attending overnight camp, it's key for the child to have experienced one or more nights away from home and the family. Attending day camp is a great way to prepare for overnight camp. Children are often ready for overnight (resident) camp before their parents are!
• Clarify exactly what your child wants and needs from camp. Is your child athletic and sports-focused? Make sure to say that and look for a camp that meets this criterion. Loves theatre and the arts in general? Doesn't do well in an extremely structured environment? Has a weight problem? There are camps that meet every one of these criteria… Finding one involves first knowing exactly what you're looking for.
• Start immediately - there are still fine camps with some spaces available. Procrastination is no longer an option!
• Contact the camps you are interested in even if you think they might be filled - they may still have an opening for a camper who is the precise sex, age and grade as your child.
• Some camps–primarily agency-owned and operated camps (YMCA, YWCA, Girl Scouts, 4-H, etc…) do not open their registrations until February/March. That gives you an excellent option if you're just beginning to search now.
• You might need to be more flexible regarding your first choice—perhaps enrolling for a different number of weeks than you originally planned for or for different weeks in the month.
• There is no harm placing your name on a camp waiting list - however, you should not bank on it and must continue your search; ask the camp's director the likelihood of getting in based on where you are on the list. While they can make no guarantees, they can usually make estimates based on previous seasons. Some waiting lists move; that's why camps offer you a chance to put your name on the list.
• If you do not get into your first choice camp—find out from the director when you can apply for the next summer. Then, seriously consider the other camps that were "finalists" in your search for this summer. They may turn out to be a good option.

more Andrew Smith was a major bonus for Cohasset. Doonan averaged about a goal a game through the team's first several contests before becoming the focal point of opposing defensemen. Smith, one of the team's best skaters, came on strong from the middle of the season on and has to be considered one of the South Shore League's top young wingers.

Senior Corbin Faber finished as the team's fourth-leading scorer, leaving some significant skates to fill on the Skippers' first line. Seniors Chris Davis, Austin Lanzillotti and TJ Kennedy were also effective players on the forward line that will need to be replaced.

Among the top candidates to step up and produce some offensive firepower are juniors Charlie Czerkawski and Alex Goetz. Sophomore Andrew Bell and Brendan Doonan, Pat's younger brother, both also made an impact at times this season and will likely see more shifts next year.

In net, sophomore Johnny Wade and freshman Andrew McKenna both had the ups-and-downs that can be expected of young goaltenders with limited experience. Wade got almost all the starts and had some moments of brilliance, and will be looking to improve with more consistency next year.

Cohasset Recreation offers USCGA Boating Safety Course

United States Coast Guard Auxiliary and Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a two-session Safe Boating Course, offering certification by both the Coast Guard and the commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The course will be offered to both youth and adults; however, certification in this course is mandatory for those 16 years old and younger who wish to operate any horsepower craft. This course is an initial requirement for the process of obtaining a Launch Operators License. USCGA instructors will teach the two-session course, which will take place on two consecutive Saturdays, May 12 and May 19, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m., at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Ripley Road, Cohasset.

To register, call Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 as soon as possible, as the class will be limited by size, and participants will be enrolled on a first-call basis. There will be a $45 per person fee for this program, which covers the cost of the textbooks and class materials. The fee will be payable at the first class, and checks will be payable to the Coast Guard director.

While the class is designed for children/youth and adults, it is suggested that children age 12 and younger be accompanied by a participating adult. A segment of this class will be devoted to the new laws regulating personal water craft.

State certification cards will be issued and most insurance companies will offer insurance rate discounts to those completing this course.

At the School Committee meeting Wednesday, Conor Ofsthun, a sophomore, received recognition and a proclamation for his heroic actions. Conor rescued a girl that had fallen through the ice on Lily Pond a few weeks ago. His quick thinking saved the girl's life. Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini said that Conor and his actions epitomized the school's mission. Conor is pictured with (from left) School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy, Superintendent Denise Walsh and Principal Antolini.

Time to start thinking about ASP

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

Wednesday was the first day of Spring, so this blustery weather should be dwindling for the next few weeks until we can bust out the windbreakers and even shorts (if you're both bold and daring). With Spring here, immediately thoughts shift to Summer, and the Appalachian Service Project. Cohasset's branch of ASP, founded by Judy and Gary Ritts, is a year-long preparation for a week of hard work, friendship, and memories. Teens and parents meet all year fundraising and learning safety to prepare for the week of service in the summer.

It isn't easy to see the conditions the families are living in, and we do a lot of good work to help improve things for our host families.

Last year, my workgroup did underpinning on our home. Woodrow and Vernie, the elderly couple that lived there, were extremely happy to be involved with ASP, and it was a great experience getting to know the family while we worked on their home. By the end of the week, their middle-aged son Leroy was right there beside us helping get the job done. The insulation we added to the bottom of the trailer would keep the home about ten degrees warmer in the winter.

It's a different way of life down there. It isn't easy to see the conditions the families are living in, and we do a lot of good work to help improve things for our host families. But that is one of two main reasons we travel each year: 1) to make a positive difference in someone's life and 2) to have fun! There are two remarkable satisfactions one gets from participating in ASP: seeing the results of your hard work, and seeing the happy faces of the family you've spent a week with. It's extremely difficult to put that feeling into words.

If you're not traveling with Cohasset ASP this summer, please consider about donating money to this worthy cause, either by purchasing stock from an ASP volunteer or attending an upcoming fundraiser. One share of stock ($25) can paint a room, two ($50) can build an outhouse, four stocks can repair a foundation, six shares will build a new porch, and ten shares will reshingle an entire roof. If you would like to sponsor a teen through stock purchases, forms can be downloaded online.

ASP is a tax-deductible write-off, so go nuts! It's not like we can have too much money, so please consider helping a Cohasset teenager travel down to West Virginia and make a difference. More information can be found online at the Cohasset ASP website, www.cohassetasp.org. I'd be more than happy to talk to you about ASP if you see me on the street, or e-mail me at Spinnaker@cohassetk12.org.

Here is this week's school news!

- Monday-Friday MCAS testing took place. Don't stress over the MCAS, Cohasset's teachers do a phenomenal job preparing their students.
- Spring sports practices started Monday.
- Monday morning the Student Assistance Team met.
- Monday after school the MTA Retirement workshop was held in the library.
- The Athletic Council met Tuesday after school.
- The School Committee meeting was held in the library Wednesday night.
- Yesterday was the annual PSO Telethon! Mr. Rich Ofsthun did an amazing job as host, and we expect no less of him.

The new season of Deadliest Catch on the Discovery Channel starts soon, and you can bet your bottom dollar this reporter will be watching, and wishing to take part in the action. That dream probably won't be realized, at least not anytime soon.

Andrew McKenna, a guitarist and member of Cohasset High School band, recently became an ambassador to "No Strings Attached."

Old guitars make beautiful music

The No Strings Attached Web site has received requests for guitars needed as far away as a school in northern Iraq.

Is there an unused guitar in the attic or basement? If so, Cohasset's Andy McKenna would like to put it to good use.

McKenna, a guitarist and member of Cohasset High School band, recently became an ambassador to "No Strings Attached," a Medfield-based program started by two high school musicians whose passion for music moved them to collect, restore and donate old guitars to needy youngsters.

No Strings Attached began when Bill and Mike Stanton of Medfield noticed old guitars were too often sitting idle in friends' basements. The two decided to refurbish and donate them to those who wanted to play but couldn't afford an instrument. McKenna learned of the program and offered to do his part to help budding musicians who otherwise couldn't afford to play.

One of the greatest guitarists of all time, according to these charitable musicians, was Jimmy Hendrix, who was self-taught. The boys believe that quite often the only thing that stands between a strong love of music and a future musician is an instrument.

The first local delivery of donated acoustic guitars was made this month to an elementary school in Worcester. The No Strings Attached Web site has received requests for guitars needed as far away as a school in northern Iraq. Last week, the group shipped guitars to a US military officer who will be using the guitars to start music classes for children in an orphanage in Afghanistan.

McKenna will pick up guitars that aren't being used, ensure it is properly refurbished, and, together with No Strings Attached, deliver or ship it to a child in need. The group will follow up with donors to let them know how a young musician or school program benefited from the donation.

To donate a used guitar or for more information, call McKenna at 781-383-8028. More information about the program can also be found at nostringsattached.us.

Gift certificates and other stringed acoustic instruments are also accepted.

Read-a-thon goes the distance

Raises more than $17K for schools

Fourth-graders at the Deer Hill School, including top finishers Jack Chamberlain, Harry Seraikas, Charlie Blackington and Patrick Federele (in front), show off the special gel bracelets that were given to students who participated in the school-wide reading marathon.

The third annual Cohasset PSO Read-a-thon, the Dream Big Reading Marathon, has officially come to a close. This year's Read-a-thon ran in tandem with the One Book One Cohasset initiative. The goal of One Book One Cohasset, sponsored by the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, is to foster a love of reading and a sense of community for all ages.

Money raised by the Read-a-thon will support and maintain school enrichment and curriculum programs.

The three participating schools in the 2007 Cohasset PSO Dream Big Reading Marathon raised more than $16,000. The Joseph Osgood School students recorded more than 100,000 minutes of reading and raised $10,000. The Deer Hill School logged an astounding 162,000 minutes and raised $5,000, and the Middle School logged nearly 47,300 minutes reading and raised $2,000.

Students received gel bracelets embossed with "Dream Big" acknowledging their participation, and various other motivational incentives were offered to outstanding participants. Buttonwood Books &Toys has generously donated a gift certificate to each class that read the most minutes for each grade to purchase books for their school libraries.

The town-wide book selection, "The Last Pick," by David J. McGillivray and Linda Glass Fechter, includes messages of goal setting, aiming high and never limiting what is possible. The theme of "striving for your own personal best" is what ties this year's Read-a-thon to the One Book One Cohasset program. The month long Read-a-thon kicked off on Feb. 12 at the Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill schools with McGillivray speaking to the students about how important it is to focus on their strengths, set goals, plan carefully, and work hard.

Osgood and Deer Hill students also celebrated World Book Day on March 1 when guest readers visited their classrooms from the Cohasset community. The students enjoyed listening to favorite books read by local business owners, teachers, police officers and town officials.

"The Read-a-thon fosters an appreciation for books and can only improve reading skills at all levels."

— Janet Sheehan, Osgood principal

Osgood Principal Janet Sheehan said the children truly have developed a sense of pride in keeping track of their reading and receiving recognition for their accomplishments.

"While we appreciate the support of our parents in this fundraising effort, the primary benefit of the Read-a-thon is that it increases opportunities for children to read or to enjoy being read to," she said. "The Read-a-thon fosters an appreciation for books and can only improve reading skills at all levels."

This is the second year that the Middle School has participated in the Read-a-thon. "Competition really drives the Read-a-thon fundraiser at the middle school," said Assistant Principal Beth McCoy. "Students checked the marathon bulletin board daily to see which homeroom's sneaker was in the lead. It is great when we can use a bit of competitive spirit to raise money that will positively and directly affect the education of our students."

Deer Hill participated for the third year in a row and the enthusiasm shown by the students was tremendous, as well as the support of the parents and school, says Principal Keith Gauley.

"This year's Read-a-thon was clearly the best yet. The combination of the One Book One Cohasset theme,,the involvement of Dave McGillivray and Linda Glass Fechter, the coordination of Tracy Thomas and Suzanne Jackisch, and the theme, 'Dream Big Reading Marathon' provided a focus for the students' efforts," he said. "In addition, our guest readers who took part during World Book Day added to the excitement and motivation as students completed their own marathon in school on that day. As a school system, we truly appreciate the time and energy invested by the PSO, by Mr. McGillivray and Mrs. Fechter, by Mrs. Thomas and Mrs. Jackisch, and by the parents to make this a tremendous success for the students.'

The students at Deer Hill School who participated in the Dream Big Reading Marathon tallied their minutes for the 26 days of the program (consistent with the 26 miles in a marathon), and the top three classes based upon number of minutes read were: 3rd highest – Ms. Hanson's third-grade class with 15,280 minutes; 2nd highest – Mrs. Corkhum's fourth-grade class with 15,579 minutes; and the most minutes were read by Ms. Jordan's fifth-grade class – with a total of 33,093 minutes." Overall, the schools combined read more than 300,000 minutes.

SCHOOLS

Advanced driver training for teens

In Control Advanced Driver Training will partner with the not-for-profit Massachusetts Automobile Dealers Charitable Foundation to train nearly 700 South Shore teens in 2007 in SkidSchool, an advanced driver training program emphasizing the art of accident avoidance.

The Charitable Foundation subsidizes $50 of the cost of each teen's registration fee, making ICADT's class, taught at the Naval Air Base in South Weymouth, more affordable to local teens.

The Charitable Foundation's next classes with ICADT will be offered Sunday, March 25, and Saturday, April 7. Classes take place from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 1 to 5:30 p.m.

In one four-hour course, certified instructors teach teens how to make panic stops and emergency lane changes, how to avoid tailgating accidents and how to handle a car in dangerous conditions such as ice and snow.

SkidSchool was launched in 2001 by Sandy Stevens of Stevens Advanced Driver Training and the Charitable Foundation, a nonprofit funded by Massachusetts auto dealers committed to giving back to their community. The Foundation now works with In Control Advanced Driver Training to offer classes.

The Charitable Foundation subsidizes a portion of the cost of SkidSchool for each student, and is currently enrolling students in classes across the commonwealth. For more information, call 617-451-1051, visit skidschool.org of email driving@msada.org.

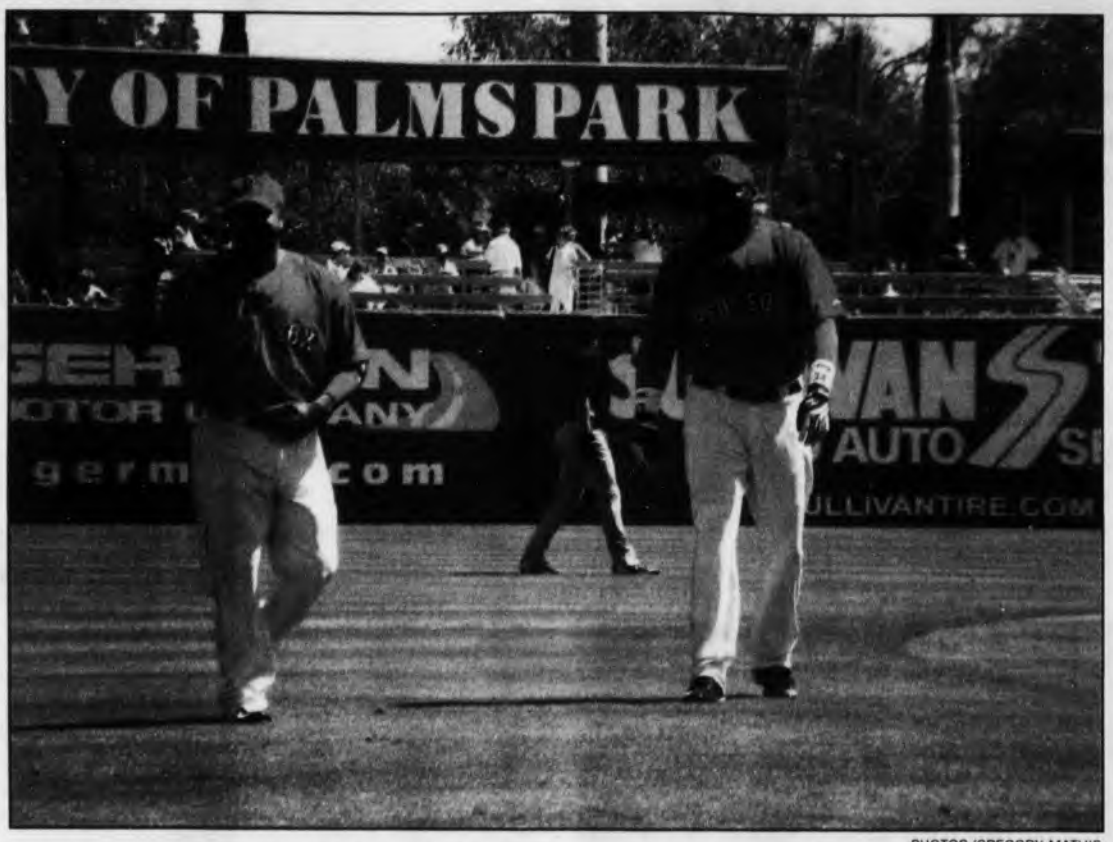
DESTINATIONS

Flying south with Red Sox Nation

By Gregory Mathis
GMATHIS@CNC.COM



FORT MYERS, Fla. — As is tradition at the start of a ballgame, the public address announcer informed the fans that the temperature at game time was 79 degrees. There was a slight pause in the announcer's voice, then he continued… "it's 24 in Boston… with a chance of snow."

The cheer that went up at City of Palms Park in Fort Myers seemed to be of both relief and joy. For many northerners making the trek south, it was relief that they had escaped the blast of frigid New England weather that had barreled in at the beginning of March. For all, it was the pure joy that comes with basking in the warm sun and taking in a spring training ballgame in southwest Florida.

Surely, spring training games can be hit or miss in terms of on-field entertainment. Split squads and limited action by star players oftentimes leave fans flipping through their program to find out the name of number 87, which of course is not a traditional baseball player's number. It can tend to be a crapshoot in terms of who you'll get to see play this time of year.

It was just our luck that this was the place to be on this gorgeous early March day. Sure Schilling was dueling Santana just a few short miles away in the Minnesota Twins' home ballpark, also in Fort Myers. But they weren't going to go deep enough into that game to make it worth the price of admission.

Our price of admission came early in the day. When we arrived at City of Palms Park shortly after the gates opened 2 1/2 hours before game time (yeah I was a little eager to check things out), players were lined up along the third base line signing autographs and Sox legend Johnny Pesky was posing for photographs with adoring fans and doing what he does best — talking baseball.

Superstars Manny Ramirez and David Ortiz take time to mug for the camera as they go through their pre-game workout, but they didn't have time to sign autographs for eager fans.

A couple of players were tucked away down in the left field corner wearing warm-up shirts that covered their uniform numbers, so it wasn't too clear who they were. But as one of the players worked his way farther down the third base line, it became very apparent who it was. Daisuke Matsuzaka, the Sox' $103-million-dollar man, was patiently and graciously signing autographs and word spread like wildfire that the man known as Dice-K was in the house.

Fortunately my wife had already staked out a prime autograph-seekers spot along the chain-link fence that guaranteed the Dice man's signature on a souvenir ball we purchased at the ballpark upon our arrival at City of Palms Park. The $8 investment was about to pay big dividends. Unfortunately, that prime location also put her directly in harms way as overzealous fans tried to squeeze their way into an already tight area.

When my wife finally emerged from the pile, she had successfully scored Dice-K's signature, as well as a few bruises from being pinned against the fence. But it was a small price to pay (easy for me to say since I was out of harm's way taking pictures) for an autograph that could be worth something if Dice-K lives up to the unbelievable hype (By the way, the online auction site eBay has Dice K autographed balls currently going for well over $100). Even if he doesn't live up to those lofty expectations we have a nice memento for our spring training excursion and a great story to tell family and friends.

That was our first victory of the day. The second came when we saw the starting lineup for the game, which included Big Papi, Manny, Coco Crisp, the newly acquired JD Drew, and a couple of other solid role players, Eric Hinske, Alex Cora and Joe McEwing. All in all, not a bad lineup to throw out there against the Toronto Blue Jays.

Starter Kyle Snyder, who is no Curt Schilling, got rocked for two early solo home runs, but the pitching staff settled down and the Red Sox came back later in the game to tie it at 2-2. While the mood was more relaxed and somewhat subdued at City of Palms Park, it did have a little taste of being at Friendly Fenway, complete with a recording of Neil Diamond singing "Sweet Caroline" in the eighth inning.

The one thing that was missing was the patented Red Sox chant that can be heard echoing through Fenway throughout the summer. So in the bottom of the ninth inning with the score tied and the Sox mounting an attack, I began the "Let's go Red Sox" chant. Soon 7,000 others in the ballpark joined in as the Sox pushed across the winning run for a 3-2 victory.

Sure it was only spring training, but it doesn't get much better than this for a Red Sox fan. Especially in early March.

Next week: Sanibel Island, just a short drive from Fort Myers, but miles from ordinary.

The Red Sox' $103-million man, Daisuke Matsuzaka, was the man of the hour as he patiently obliges autograph-seekers before a spring training game at City of Palms Park in Fort Myers in early March.

When in Fort Myers…

Pinchers Crab Shack serves up some tasty local fare, although this time of year it is busy, buzzing with Red Sox fans. With four locations in the area, we headed north to the Fort Myers Waterfront Hotel. Turns out the manager is from Lynn, Mass. and a huge Red Sox fan himself.

The other prime eating spots in the area can be found along Fort Myers Beach.

City of Palms Park

Year opened: 1992
Seating capacity: 6,990
Ticket prices: Ranging from $44 for home plate box seats to $10 for standing room

DAR honors good citizens

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools.

Col. Thomas Lothrop/Old Colony Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution met March 11 at the Lighteeper's Residence in Cohasset to honor local recipients of the DAR Good Citizens Award. Sponsored through the local chapter, the winners recognized were Caren Garber of Cohasset High School, Jenine DiLorenzo of Weymouth High School, Anna Rose Cerilli of Whitman-Hanson Regional High School and Rebecca Damon of Rockland High School.

The DAR Good Citizen Award is given annually to members of the senior class of accredited high schools. Three students are selected by the faculty, based on the qualities of dependability, service, leadership and patriotism. The members of the senior class then vote for the recipient of the award. This program is also recognized by the National Association of Secondary School Principals.

Caren Garber of Cohasset High School is the daughter of Helene and the late Gary Garber. She is president of the National Honor Society and is involved in chorus and drama at the school, and plays both soccer and lacrosse. She has worked with other students at the Center for Student Coastal Research on a project that studies the pollution in Cohasset Harbor. She has traveled to Trinidad to participate in a research project sponsored by Earthwatch and has gone to Kentucky with the Appalachian Service Project. She has captained four teams at Cohasset's Relay for Life and raised more than $15,000 from her teams. As a member of the Social Awareness Organization and the Environmental Club at school, she has participated in beach clean-ups and a school wide recycling project. Graber works as a nanny and tutor. She will be attending Tufts University in the fall and hopes to study medicine and/or environmental subjects.

Each student was presented with a certificate and wallet card stating they are local Good Citizen recipients. Their families came forward to help pin on the Good Citizen pins and were congratulated for their outstanding young adults. A small gift and a flag were also given to each Good Citizen.

John Durant to be featured on 'Echoes' broadcast

Jon Durant, a guitarist and composer from Cohasset, will be featured in a "living room concert" for the nationally syndicated program "Echoes" later this month. On the program, Durant will play three pieces live, be interviewed before and after each piece. "Echoes" is broadcast over 130 NPR affiliate stations nation wide, as well as on XM satellite radio and on the Internet. Another syndicated show, "Hearts of Space," which is syndicated on 220 NPR affiliates, is playing two tracks from the CD on their "Space Guitars" program.

"Echoes" is broadcast over 130 NPR affiliate stations nation wide, as well as on XM satellite radio and on the Internet.

Guitarist and composer Jon Durant of Cohasset.

Durant has just released a new CD titled "Flood," which is receiving rave reviews in national guitar and music related publications, and has attracted considerable radio play on new age, jazz fusion and progressive rock radio programs.

"Flood" balances some of the hardest-edged work of Durant's career alongside some beautiful soundscapes. Aided once again by the percussive magic of Vinny Sabatino and bass legend Tony Levin, Durant's guitar work is at an all-time high on "Flood." Stand-out tracks include "When in Doubt, Strain," which features Durant playing slide and taking a solo on his Les Paul, and the jazz-tinged take on Peter Gabriel's "Here Comes the Flood," the first cover song Durant has ever recorded, and is Durant's homage to his guitarist friends Leni Stern and Wayne Krantz.

"I really wanted to go somewhere different this time around," Durant said. "A 12-string was the first step for me. It had been over 30 years since I last had an acoustic guitar, and never have I had a 12-string. That opened up an enormous set of possibilities.

"Add to that the fact that my sons and I have been exploring some new music that has brought back memories of my old metal band Mannakin Hand, and I came upon some new ways of looking at things. The results are immediately obvious, with tracks like 'Thinly Veiled Threat' and 'Invisible Dragons Abound.'"

The lengthy "Untitled (part 1)" was the beginning part of an extended piece Durant had created for a live solo show, and he deconstructed and rearranged it for ensemble.

"The other thing that was fun for me on this record was that I ended up keeping many of my fretless bass parts. I really enjoyed the process of building those parts and they seemed to fit the vibe of the pieces nicely. Tony did his incredible thing on four pieces, and he was just amazing to work with as always. His creative ideas really fueled 'Invisible Dragons Abound.'"

Durant is also the founder and president of Alchemy Records, which also released CDs by Michael Manring, Gary Willis, Michael Whalen, Caryn Lin, Kingsley Durant and many other recording artists. For information, call Alchemy at 781-383-0086, or email at jd@alchemyrecords.com.

'Respect' for a new role

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Actress and singer Mary Callanan has played everything from nuns to prison matrons, but her new role as writer Dorothy Marcic in "Respect, A Musical Journey" at Boston's Stuart Street Playhouse marks Callanan's debut as a real-life person.

"Except for playing Rosie Clooney in the cabaret show 'Hey There: The Music of Rosemary Clooney,' this is my first time playing a non-fictional character," Callanan explained recently by telephone from her Weymouth home. "I admire Dorothy and the life she has led. She is an incredibly weil-traveled, interesting woman. She's charming and much fun, because she has so many great stories to tell. Last summer, I had the good fortune to meet Dorothy in person, but now that I am playing her I don't know what I would do if she came to the see the show."

A professor at Vanderbilt University and a prolific author, Marcic adapted her book, "Respect: Women and Popular Music," for the musical revue, which takes a high-energy look at the many milestones of women's lives through 20th-century music. Marcic uses stories from her own life, including her grandmother's trials and triumphs and her own Wisconsin upbringing, and sets them to popular music like "Can't Help Lovin' that Man of Mine," "I Am Woman," and "Dedicated to the One I Love."

In Boston, a cast of three — Kareema Castro, Salomi Hoffman, and Quincy's Tianna Checchia — bring a variety of 20th-century women to life, including Coco Chanel, Ida B. Wells, and Rosa Parks. As Marcic, Callanan narrates the piece and occasionally joins the cast in song.

"In reality, you're the bus driver when you play Dorothy. You have to be relaxed with the audience, because there is no fourth wall between them and Dorothy. It is up to me to make sure the audience is having a good time."

Callanan has considerable experience doing just that in sit-down runs of "Nunsense" at the now-defunct Theatre Lobby in Boston's North End and, more recently, in "Menopause: The Musical" which preceded "Respect" at the Stuart Street Playhouse.

In the latter show, Callanan's co-stars included Kathy St. George. The longtime friends, both favorites on the Boston theater scene, were reunited in "Respect" when St. George originated the role of Marcic in the Boston company and Callanan was chosen as her understudy. St. George left "Respect" earlier this month to go into pre-production on a new show about Judy Garland, being produced by former Quincy resident Tony McLean, which is rumored to be going into the Stuart Street Playhouse when "Respect" completes its currently open-ended run.

Mary Callanan

Callanan not only enjoys her new assignment, but she says she also understands what has made the show so popular.

"To work with Kathy is always a treat. I was very sad to see her go," says Callanan, who also understudied the role of Eden. "I liked both of the parts that I understudied in this show, but Dorothy is the bigger acting role so I'm really liking this opportunity."

Callanan not only enjoys her new assignment, but she says she also understands what has made the show so popular.

"Although the show is about Dorothy's life, it is really about women and our holding up the mirror to Top 40 music and seeing just how far women have come since the start of the 20th century. The question is whether the music changed us or we changed the music. The answer varies depending on the day. What the music does, however, is really build the excitement, especially as the recognition value of the songs increases. Each and every night, people sing along to 'These Boots are Made for Walkin' and 'I Will Survive.' The audience is always a part of the show, which I just love."

While Callanan is clearly enjoying the acting challenge of her new role, she is quick to acknowledge that her background as a singer has been a big help in her adjustment to the part.

"For me to step into the role of Dorothy has been a real challenge. What has made it easier for me, however, is that Dorothy is first and foremost a professor and a lecturer. Fortunately, I have a lot of experience speaking directly to an audience. I do it all the time in my cabaret act."

And, even with a full-time job on a downtown stage, Callanan still finds time for regular cabaret gigs. Indeed, she and longtime accompanist and Hanson native Brian Patton spend each Thursday night — immediately following 'Respect' — doing their act in Boston's Encore Lounge at the Marriott Hotel in the Theater District, and, on April 3, will again present their cabaret act at Norwell's Company Theatre.

("Respect, A Musical Journey" is at the Stuart Street Playhouse, 200 Stuart St., Boston. For tickets and information, call 800-447-7400 or visit www.respectamusicaljourney.com. Mary Callanan and Brian Patton are at the Encore Lounge, 270 Tremont St., Boston, Thursdays from 9:30 p.m. to 1 a.m., with no cover charge. On April 3, Callanan and Patton will present their cabaret act at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell. For tickets and information, call 781-871-2787 or visit www.companytheatre.com.)

Movie review

Ashima (Tabu) prepares to apply traditional Indian makeup, even though she's trying to be a modern American.

Know thy 'Namesake'

The Namesake (A)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Memo to movie lovers: Your winter of discontent just thawed out.

Based upon the Pulitzer Prize-winning 2003 bestseller by Jhumpa Lahiri, Mira Nair's marvelous family chronicle "The Namesake" is further evidence that the more specific a fictional family is, the more universal its story seems.

Meet the Gangulis. Indians of Bengali descent, they include Ashoke (Irfan Khan), a benevolent patriarch, his beautiful, devoted wife Ashima (former model Tabu), rebellious son Gogol (Kal Penn of "Harold & Kumar Go to White Castle") and similarly untraditional daughter Sonia (Sahira Nair).

Their story begins in 1968 when Ashoke survives a nightmarish train wreck in India as a young man. While onboard the doomed train, Ashoke was reading a collection of stories by the great Russian author Nikolai Gogol and talking to a man who encouraged him to see the world.

Next stop, the United States. Ashoke, a promising, university professor in a strange land, then returns to his Calcutta neighborhood to find a wife. Before you know it, he and Ashima, virtual strangers to one another, are trying to survive a New York City winter in the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge. (Nair transplanted the action from the novel's Boston.)

The characters in "The Namesake" are on the horns of a dilemma. Do they follow the traditions of the Old World or become assimilated by the new culture they have adopted?

The answer appears to be relative and involve compromise. For example, to raise her children and be a wife to Ashoke, Ashima gives up a budding career back home as a singer-musician.

Western literature is a motif in the tale of the Gangulis. Ashima wins Ashoke's heart by reciting Wordsworth's "I Wandered Lonely As a Cloud." The story charts Gogol's decision to court Maxine (Jacinda Barrett), a blonde, blue-eyed American from an affluent family, a variation on a theme of "Romeo and Juliet." When that doesn't work out, he marries a dusky Bengali beauty (Zuleikha Robinson) he met when they were adolescents.

A central thread in the film is Gogol's classic short story "The Overcoat." To his son, Ashoke repeats the phrase attributed to the great Russian authors who followed Gogol: "We all came out of Gogol's 'Overcoat.' " But how does he mean it?

Perhaps, for Ashoke and his family, the "overcoat" is India itself, its traditions, culture, religion and history, and he means that he and his family have all sprung from them.

Nair ("Salaam Bombay," "Monsoon Wedding") repeatedly cuts to an effigy of a Hindu goddess, a reminder of the power of the feminine, a recurring motif in her work. Of course, the goddess in the Ganguli story is Ashima herself, and Tabu, in her American film debut, makes her unforgettable.

Boasting beautiful polychromatic imagery by cinematographer Frederick Elmes ("Blue Velvet") and a richly polyphonic, decades-spanning soundtrack, the film is a vibrant, deeply humane reminder of why we go to the movies in the first place.

Rated PG-13. "The Namesake" contains sexually suggestive scenes and profanity.

Fleeing suspect steals Cohasset car

Local officers assist State police in pursuit

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Wednesday night, just before 11p.m., Cohasset police were key players in a state police pursuit. The car chase began in Milton after the driver of the vehicle allegedly fired a shot at a state police trooper as he was trying to stop him.

The Boston Herald reported that the suspect stole a PlayStation 3 from the Best Buy in the South Bay Center in Dorchester. State Police were searching for the suspect(s) and spotted their green Chrysler Pacifica in Milton. In the State Police's attempt to stop the suspect's vehicle at least one of the suspects fired shots at the trooper's vehicle.

The pursuit then passed through several communities – Quincy, Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset. According to Police Chief James Hussey, Cohasset Police made the determination that it was a safe time to use "stop sticks," as the suspect traveled south on 3A from Hingham to Cohasset. Stop sticks are strips that are placed across the road to deflate a vehicle's tires. Officers placed the stop sticks across 3A, just inside the Cohasset border from Hingham.

The stop sticks successfully flattened the tires, however the suspect continued to drive on the rims. The vehicle went into the woods on the north side of 3A, just before Pond Street. The suspect then fled the vehicle.

State, Cohasset, Hingham, Quincy, Scituate and others set up a perimeter where the suspect was last seen. The State Police mobilized its Airwing Unit, K-9 Units, STOP Team and numerous patrols to help with the search.

The suspect eventually stole a 2001 Lincoln LS from a Pleasant Street resident. According to Chief Hussey, the

MBTA, town reach accord

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A two-year MBTA dispute over village parking spots is nearing a resolution thanks to cooperation between local and state government. State Rep. Garrett Bradley attended Monday's Board of Selectmen meeting to confirm — that in addition to a $110,000 dispute settlement from the MBTA — $310,000 additional funds has been awarded to Cohasset's Public Works Economic Development (PWED) grant to improve the Village area. Together, the funds will cover the more than $200,000 estimated cost to add additional parking spaces as well as improve the aesthetics and landscaping of the village parking lot.

The settlement of $110,000 is under review by Town Counsel, but will likely be signed by the Selectmen in the next week or so.

The town previously received a $1.5 million PWED grant to revitalize the downtown village area, which was completed last year with new sidewalks, paved streets, trees, and enhanced pocket parks.

If the town and the MBTA were unable to reach a resolution, the next step would be litigation, which Bradley said would likely cost both sides more than the cost of the project.

"This is an example of local and state government working together. We all

Match made in heaven

Rev. Gary Ritts celebrates 20 years

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A match made in heaven.

That is how Reverend Gary Ritts of the Second Congregation Church at 43 Highland Ave. sums up his 20 years in Cohasset. In 1986, he was "called" to the service of the Cohasset church because both he and the congregation thought the match felt right. Twenty years later, he describes his ministry as fulfilling and, if all goes well, he could become Second Congregation Church's longest serving minister before he retires.

Ritts came to Cohasset from an associate minister position in Fairfield, Conn. where he was in charge of the youth program for over four years. From his youth ministry experience in Connecticut he became involved in the Appalachia Service Project (ASP). The ecumenical volunteer effort involves teenagers in a home building and repair ministry in central Appalachia.

Ritts was named the Mariner's Citizen of the Year in 1996 for being a positive force for good through his work with the ASP. He has grown the program to involve the majority of Cohasset high school students in this town-wide, year-long effort. Teens sign up in the fall and work the remainder of the year to raise money, learn basic construction, and get a sense of the culture and people who live in Appalachia. The trip typically occurs at the end of June.

His Cohasset service initiative had humble but well-intentioned beginnings. He and his wife, Judy, traveled

Single session Town Meeting could be a slam-dunk

But water articles could create waves

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Make sure to have coffee in hand when heading over to Cohasset High School for Town Meeting this Saturday, as it is set to promptly start at 9a.m., a full hour earlier than past years. Staying "well hydrated" may prove difficult, as the Water Commission's six articles, which include proposed water rate increases and selling water, may be hard for some citizens to swallow.

At the fall special Town Meeting, voters approved an article giving the Board of Selectmen authority to begin the Annual Town Meeting at their discretion. Board of Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer said that the reasoning behind the extra hour is to hopefully finish Town Meeting on Saturday.

At this earlier hour, voters will be asked their collective opinion on a total of 26 articles, or items of business, covering a wide range of topics and town issues.

A quorum of 100 registered voters is required before Town Meeting can be called to session. Once a quorum is determined at the start of the meeting, it is assumed a quorum is present unless challenged. If challenged the number of voters will be counted, and if a quorum does not exist, the meeting will be adjourned.

Town Manager Bill Griffin does not foresee a problem with a quorum to start, "but it might be a challenge to get one after lunch if it is a nice day."

If a quorum is sustained, Griffin said that he believes voters could get through all the articles in one day.

The Post-Prom Committee will be selling concessions during Town Meeting, including coffee, bagels, water and even meatball subs and hot dogs for lunch.

The 26 articles presented in the Warrant, or Town Meeting agenda, will be tackled in the order they appear, unless otherwise directed by Moderator Daniel Evans or Town Meeting. Warrants were mailed out to households last week and extras will be available on Saturday. Four of the articles printed in the warrant may be indefinitely postponed and will not require a town meeting vote (see sidebar).

Griffin and Dormitzer agreed that the Water Commission's articles, particularly the increase in rates (article 4) and the sale of water (articles 17 and 18) to other towns, might cause the most waves. The Selectmen recommended the water rate increase unanimously, while the water sale articles received a 4-1 vote of disapproval. The Advisory Committee recommended approval of all three articles.

People say we will be giving away our precious resource, well, now it is going out to sea."
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt is aware that the water articles will spark much discussion but says the rate increase is necessary to continue implementing a master plan of improving and updating the water system. He sees the rate increase and the authority to sell water as going hand in hand.

"We want to sell more [water], it will bring us more revenue. People say we will be giving away our precious resource, well, now it is going out to sea," Pratt said, "[more revenue] helps to keep the cost to the Cohasset customers down."

POLICE BEAT

Leaving scene after parking mishaps

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

At 4:10 p.m., on Monday (March 19), the owner of a 1995 Ford Mustang reported damage to the rear, driver's side quarter panel apparently caused by a car that had tried to park in the next space.

Chief Hussey said a witness at the Stop & Shop parking lot provided a plate number for the 1996 Buick Roadmaster, which was registered to a Scituate resident. Scituate police made contact with owner who said he had no idea that he his car had struck another vehicle. He then returned to the parking lot and exchanged papers with the Mustang's owner.

Hit and run

Police are looking for the motorist responsible for hitting a 2003 BMW that was parked at St. Stephen's Church on Tuesday morning (March 20), There was some damage to the rear driver's side door. There were some reddish-colored paint chips that may have some from the other car. There were no witnesses. Anyone with information, should contact the police.

Erratic operation

Last Wednesday (March 21) at about 9:46 p.m., Norwell police but out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) for a black 1999 Lincoln Town Car that a cell caller reported was being driven all over Route 123.

The vehicle was registered to a South Main Street resident, Cohasset police said. Cohasset police saw the car at 3A and Beechwood and made observations as the Lincoln went down Beechwood Street. Police said the Lincoln was speeding as it went toward South Main Street and was crossing over the centerlines. Police pulled the car over and spoke to the operator who appeared to be under the influence. The 33-year-old operator failed field sobriety tests and was subsequently placed under arrest. Further investigation revealed some drugs on his person and in the vehicle. The man was charged with operating under the influence of drugs, negligent operation of a MV, and possession of Class C (valium) and Class E (Subutex), which are both narcotics.

Pit bull

A Highland Court resident reported that her dogs were lunged at by a pit bull last Thursday (March 22) at about 2:17 p.m. The caller said a female was walking by the house with a pit bull off its leash. Police officers talked to the resident who had not seen the female or the pit bull before. Chief Hussey said Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy will try to locate the dog's owner and give her a warning.

Gift card

Although no crime was committed, a man who tried to cash a gift card that was apparently stolen is not welcome back at Stop & Shop, police said.

The incident occurred last Thursday (March 22) at about 5:15 p.m. A man presented a gift card to a cashier but the card had not been programmed with any amount. As it turned out, the customer had a receipt. But further investigation revealed the receipt was for a different $50 gift card. Gift cards each have their own unique code. Police believe the man may have stolen the second gift card and was then trying to pass it off as the one he had purchased by saying the clerk had forgotten to run it through.

OUI arrest

A Quincy woman has been charged with drunk driving following a traffic stop last Friday (March 23) on Route 3A at about 9:11 p.m.. A Cohasset officer was on patrol when he observed the female operator slam on her brakes at the red light, sliding into the intersection. When the light turned green, she took off at a high rate of speed. The officer followed the vehicle, clocking it on radar as going 60 mph. He pulled the car over near Jonathan Livingston Seagull Plaza on King Street. The officer could smell alcohol when speaking to the operator. She subsequently failed field sobriety tests and was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol. She was also cited for failure to use care when starting and stopping.

Pole hit

A 1998 Mercedes backed into a utility pole on Hull Street after the operator had an apparent confrontation with several youths last Saturday (March 24) at about 4:47 p.m. A witness called police to report seeing the operator get out of the car and chase the kids. However, the caller had not seen what may have transpired to cause the situation.

The operator of the Mercedes did not put the car in park when he exited the vehicle and it rolled backwards and hit the pole. He then got back into the car and left, heading toward Hull. Police ran the plate, which came back to a Cohasset resident and arrived at his house about the same time he did. The operator said he had planned to notify police about the accident that caused some damage to his car. He explained that the kids had shouted at him when he rolled down his window and he had thought they were going to throw something at him, so he jumped out of the car to scare them.

Police explained that when there is property damage in an accident, the motorist should call police and remain at the scene until they arrive.

Warrant

Police arrested a Weymouth man on an outstanding warrant for larceny following a traffic stop last Sunday (March 25) at about 11 a.m. on CJC Hwy. The officer observed a white Ford with its front windshield cracked and front plate missing. The officer ran the plate and the report came back that the registered owner was wanted on a warrant. He pulled the car over and confirmed the identity of the driver as the man with the warrant, police said

Protecting pets against rabies

Hull offering low cost rabies shots, April 7th

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Rabies is a continuing threat to animals — both wild and domestic. In the past 15 years, more than 5,000 of them have tested positive for rabies. In the past year, 200 household pets have been reportedly exposed to the rabies virus in Massachusetts.

April is the Massachusetts Rabies Awareness Month, which strives to promote rabies knowledge and prevention through encouraging pet owners to get their pets vaccinated.

"We have a superb program of rabies vaccination in the US," says Cohasset's Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy. Other countries, such as Brazil and China, are far behind and hundreds of people die each year from rabies. In Massachusetts, 90 percent of domestic animals are vaccinated, according to Murphy. But vaccinations must be kept up to date every three years.

Rabies is a personality altering infection that is, without immediate medical care, fatal in all mammals, according to Board of Health agent, Dr. Joseph Godzik. The viral infection affects the central nervous system.

It typically transferred by an animal bite. The virus can also be transmitted through saliva, if the animal or human has an open cut on the skin.

Domestic animals are typically the bridge between wild animals and humans. Human exposure to rabies can occur while feeding and petting wild animals, breaking up fights between pets and wild animals, handling stray animals or cleaning wounds on pets exposed to wild animals.

The telltale symptom is a foaming at the mouth is because rabies makes it very painful to swallow so saliva builds up in the mouth. Murphy explained that just because a wild animal, like a raccoon, is out in the daytime, does not mean the animal is rabid. However, he suggests that the animal be monitored and if it is staggering, walking in circles, coughing, foaming at the mouth, sneezing or extremely lethargic — it's time to call Animal Control or police dispatch.

He says in recent years Cohasset has had about one instance of rabies in a wild animal per year.

Another infection, raccoon distemper, can have similar symptoms to rabies. But citizens should always use proper precautions by monitoring the animal, keeping pets inside, staying away from the animal and calling the proper authorities if needed.

Rabies can take on two forms, says Godzik, "furious" or "dumb."

Animals with the furious type will try to bite everything and become aggressive and/or disoriented. The dumb form is where the animal will become anti-social.

"Sometimes dogs will lean their head against the wall in an attempt to dull the pain," said Godzik, the virus causes an inflammation of the brain, although the animals can't tell us, is likely very painful.

Rabies is a newcomer to the New England area, there were no cases reported previous to the early 1980s, says Murphy.

"We thought we were protected by the natural boundaries of the Hudson River and the Atlantic Ocean," he said.

Rabies was rampant in the Carolinas, Virginia and West Virginia during that time. It turns out the virus was introduced to New England through interstate trash disposal, Murphy explained. Raccoons infected with rabies were inadvertently transported in trash receptacles to New Hampshire. The virus then traveled southward into Massachusetts.

The most important thing a pet owner can do to protect their dog or cat (even indoor cats) from rabies is to get him/her immunized on a regular basis.

According to the Massachusetts Rabies Control Plan, vaccination of pets is required by six months of age or within 30 days of acquisition if the animal is older than 6 months and still unvaccinated. Regardless of the age at initial vaccination, a second vaccination must be given 9-12 months later. After that, vaccinations can be given using a USDA approved three-year vaccine every three years.

The Town of Hull is hosting a tri-town — Cohasset, Hingham and Hull — rabies clinic on Saturday, April 7th, 2 to 4p.m. behind the Hull Police headquarters on 1 School St. A vaccination will cost $10. All dogs must be leashed, all unpredictable or aggressive dogs must be muzzled, and all cats must be crated. Veterinarian Dr. Grace Strake will administer the vaccinations.

Junior operator's law changes take effect

Junior operators — meaning those between the ages of 16-1/2 and 18— are going to face stiffer penalties for speeding. And junior operators who have had their licenses for less than six months will face tougher penalties for driving with other kids in the car.

Starting Saturday (March 31), a junior operator could lose his license for up to 90 days for speeding (first offense). After 90 days, the teen would have to pay a $500 reinstatement fee to get his license back. If the teen gets another speeding ticket before he turns 18, he would automatically lose his license for a year and must pay the $500 reinstatement car was left unlocked and the keys were left in the car. At about 1:45a.m, police attempted to stop the vehicle but it failed to yield. The vehicle was pursued, by way of North Main and Route 228, into Hull where it collided with police cruisers and became disabled on Nantasket Avenue. Neither the suspect nor police personnel were injured. Cohasset cruisers were not damaged in the incident, police said.

The operator, Rico Perry, 19, of Boston was taken into custody and transported to the State Police Barracks in Norwell. On Thursday morning, he was arraigned in Quincy District Court on multiple charges, including failure to stop for a police officer, unlicensed operation of a vehicle, larceny of a motor vehicle, assault with a dangerous (2 counts).

The stop sticks successfully flattened the tires, however the suspect continued to drive on the rims.

Jen Piepenbrink, 622 Chief Justice Highway, witnessed part of the pursuit right outside her windows. She heard sirens and saw two helicopters.

"We watched out the window as police cars continued to drive by," she said, "I've never seen so many police cruisers in my life."

Piepenbrink was concerned and even called the Cohasset Police Department. She was told to brief details that the police were looking for a suspect and to stay inside.

"It was very sketchy as to what was going on," she said, "But the police seemed to handle the situation well."

Many residents were awakened from a message from Cohasset's reverse 911 message system, dubbed Connect CTY, used to alert residents of a situation that the police feel the town should be aware. Last night's message, according to Piepenbrink, told residents brief details of the situation and to only call the police department if they notice suspicious activity.

Police said the message was only sent to the sector of Cohasset where the suspect was located.

Parking lot settlement to be a blast sat down at a table and cooler heads prevailed," said Rep. Bradley at Monday's meeting. Bradley, along with state Senator Robert Hedlund, has mitigated the dispute between the MBTA and the Town of Cohasset.

"This is an example of local and state government working together. We all sat down at a table and cooler heads prevailed."

— State Rep. Garrett Bradley

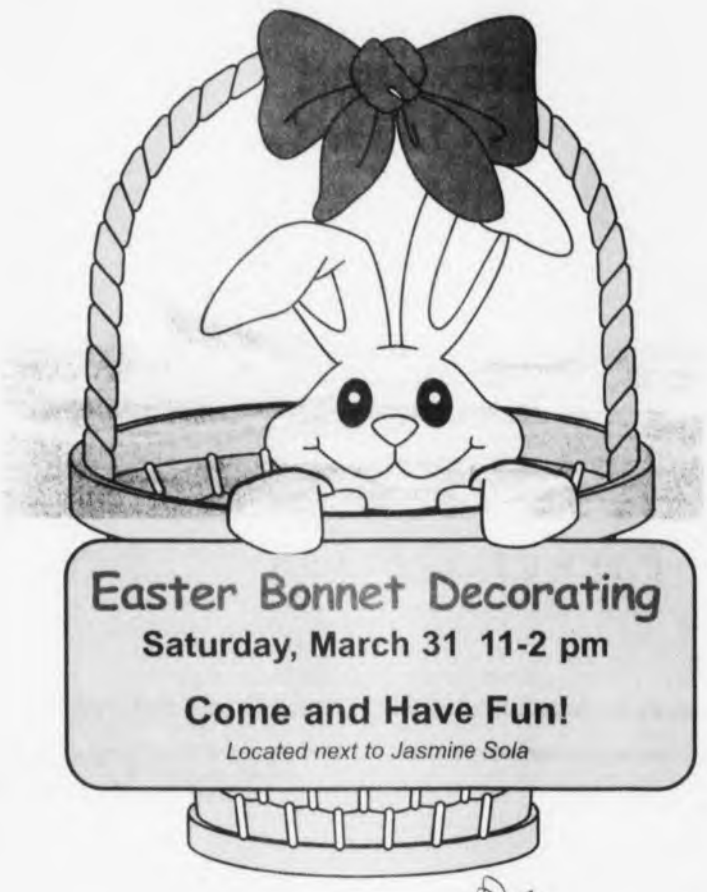
"The settlement resolves the issue and avoids litigation," says Chairman Ralph Dormitzer and thanked the legislators for their efforts to bring the dispute to a resolution.

The original mitigation agreement between the town and the MBTA stipulated that 182 parking spaces were to be provided. Thus far, the MBTA has installed 161, which is 21 spaces short of the contract.

The problem first arose when Cohasset bylaws necessitated that parking spaces had to be larger than the statewide MBTA standard parking space. The increased size of individual spaces changed the total amount of parking spots allowed in the lot behind the village.

The MBTA, which is building the Greenbush Line through town, claimed that a letter from the then Town Manager Mark Haddad indicated that parking along the former ABB Optical building, now James Brook Crossing shops, could be used to make up the spaces.

Haddad's letter was apparently sent without the selectmen's knowledge or approval.



A plan, which will come to fruition with the resolution, was put forth to create additional parking on a town-owned acre of land behind the Red Lion Inn. The parking spaces will be adjacent to the current town lot. The project will require blasting ledge, a costly endeavor, and the entire project could cost between $200,000 and $300,000, according to Town Manager Bill Griffin. The $110,000 settlement will go toward the creation of the additional spaces while the PWED grant will subsidize the remaining costs.

Adequate parking is seen as a critical component to the continued vitality of Cohasset Village.

Dormitzer envisions the remainder of the PWED grant to pay for aesthetic enhancements to the parking lot. The original parking lot drawings showed trees, sidewalks, islands and other amenities. Most of those elements were not installed upon completion of the project.

If used in this way, the PWED grant money will keep in with its initial purpose of village revitalization, says Dormitzer, when reached on Tuesday.

"We really appreciate all you have done, it makes a huge difference," said Dormitzer said to both Bradley and Hedlund on Monday.

Sewer expansion on TM agenda

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Sewer Commission wants to be on the safe side. In article 22, they are requesting an additional $2 million in funding for the Little Harbor/Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road sewer expansion project. The project was approved for $13.2 million at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, which took into account a 3.5 percent inflation rate and a 15 percent contingency monies.

Since that estimate, the Sewer Commission says there have been two unanticipated costs that have significantly driven up the project total. First, there has been an across-the-board increase in energy costs, particularly oil, resulting in a 7.5 increase in the construction cost of the project.

Second, the EPA has recently established greater regulations on the amount of nitrogen in the treated sewage. These new, increased guidelines have resulted in the need for doubling the number of filtering membranes in the Wastewater Treatment Plant. The original estimate of $880,000 only accounted for a 50 percent increase of filtering membranes due to the added volume — the new estimate is $2.1 million.

In short, the contingency and inflation anticipated has already been accounted for in actual cost. The requested two million will reestablish the inflation and contingency percentages in the project budget.

The sewer expansion project will add 485 homes in the Little Harbor district to the town sewer system. The project's cost does not burden the town taxpayers or all sewer users; instead it will be allocated to the new users in the Little Harbor district over a period of 20 years. The cost to the new users will be assessed on those users' sewer bill as a "new user betterment cost."

The requested increase, if passed at Town Meeting, will not be spent if it is not needed. If the contingency $2 million is used then households will pay $1,567 per year for the next 20 years, a $206 per year increase. A total of $31,340 will be paid after 20 years with this increased authorization.

The project is set to begin by the end of June. A state permit is still in process and as soon as the Sewer Commission receives it, they will begin the bidding process. The bidding process allows for a four-week window in which firms can submit their bids, says Sewer Commission Chairman Sean Cunning. He estimates that the project will be completed in early 2009.

If the additional funds are not authorized at Town Meeting and the bids come in over the currently allocated amount ($13.2 million) the project will either be scaled down or (more likely) hold back on paving some streets, says Cunning.

Article 26 ties into the sewer expansion project. It proposes that drainage improvements be installed during this sewer expansion project since the roads will already be torn up. The article additionally requests a $1 million appropriation.

fee. He would also have to complete the State Courts Against Road Rage Course and have to retake his driving test.

Also effective this Saturday, if a junior operator violates the passenger restriction, he would lose his license for 60 days and for the second offense, 180 days. Junior operators are not allowed to have passengers under 18, unless accompanied by another licensed driver 21 or older, who is occupying front passenger seat and has one year or more driving experience. The passenger restriction is not applicable to junior operator's immediate family members (siblings). The license reinstatement fee of $500 would also be required at the end of the penalty period.

Junior operators are not allowed to have under-age passengers because of the distraction. Police Chief James Hussey noted that teens who have just obtained a driver's license often cannot wait to drive their friends around. The law is intended to give teens more experience before introducing other youths into the car.

Hussey said strengthening the law is a good idea. "In today's world there are many more cars on the road," he said. "And a high percentage of 16-18 year-olds are involved in an accident during their first year to year-and-a-half of driving.

"Hopefully these changes will go a long way toward reducing the number of accidents and potential for injuries and death," he said.

Taking effect Sept. 1 are new Driver's Education regulations. Twelve hours of on-road driving (up from six hours under previous regulations) will be required. Also parental participation in two hours of classroom instruction with their son or daughter will also be required.

ROAD RULES

Hey Cohasset. Springtime is really starting to show its colors as I have seen flowers in town starting to pop up. It is exciting but still pretty cool at times. Come on warm, we are ready! As we get warmer with the longer days, more and more kids and adults alike are out riding bikes, walking and running galore. Please make sure to remember all the road rules on both sides, as the drivers and the pedestrians and bike riders. We want all to stay safe. Also remember to slow down when going over the train crossings and all. They can do quite a number on us all, especially the bike riders.

WHALER NEEDED

OK, Cohasset. Here is a request that is being made to the community with fingers crossed. The Cohasset Sailing Club is in need of a 17-ft. Whaler to use as a launch for free sailing, kids and racing programs. The existing one is so old no one can remember when the club acquired it, which is surprising given all of the Old Salts around. It's pretty tired and ready for replacing. The club would greatly appreciate a new or ship-shape used one and a 50-hp motor. With this gift members can help keep the club strong and the "Best Value in Cohasset." The Sailing Club is truly grateful for all donations. Interested contributors can call Rich Ofsthun at 781-383-9396. Anyone out there who can help a great club?

EXETER HONORS

Jared Dick, a 12th-grader at Phillips Exeter Academy, earned honors for fall term. Jared is in his third year at the independent secondary school in Exeter, NH. Keep up the great work Jared.

HIGH HONORS

Congratulations to Daniel Sullivan, postgraduate student at New Hampton School in New Hampton, N.H., who has been placed on the high honor roll for the winter term. TABOR NEWS

Gina Giuggio, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Giuggio, is on the commended list at Tabor Academy for Semester One. Students earn commendation by achieving an overall average of 80 or above, with no grade below 75 and no more than one grade between 75 and 80. Super news Gina, keep it up.

TOP ASU STUDENT

Congratulations go out to Casey Coleman from his family and friends as he recently became recognized as a member of Sigma Alpha Lambda, National Leadership and Honors Organization at the Arizona State University. Casey is a sophomore at ASU majoring in Aeronautics Management at the Polytech Campus where he received a 4.0 fall semester with a cum 3.6 generating this recognition. Coleman also just obtained his private pilot's license as part of the flight-training program and is now studying towards his commercial license. Coleman, this is fantastic news to write about and report to the community. Super work.

DEAN'S LIST

Here are some more hard working students. Kelsey Bell and Joseph Rosano, both of Cohasset, have been named to the dean's list at Tufts University for the fall semester. Deans' list status at Tufts requires a semester grade point average of 3.4 or better.

This news is great to hear. Brenna O'Donnell of Cohasset has been named to the dean's list for the fall semester at the University of Vermont. Brenna is junior and an English major in the College of Education and Social Services.

DIALOG NEEDED

The Social Service League of Cohasset invites all parents Tuesday, April 10th at 7 pm to the video presentation "Choices" to educate parents and high school students about important life lessons learned by the Steverman family after the death of their son, P.J. in an alcohol-related tragedy. Lynda Steverman will make a separate presentation to seniors on April 11th. Please attend so that you can start a dialogue with your family about how one bad choice can change lives forever.

JAMMIE TIME!

Hey Cohasset, get on your coziest jammies, jump in the car with your friends and come to the Cohasset Town Hall. You'll be sleeping right when you sleep in Sleep-Tite Pajamas as The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents "The Pajama Game". RELAY CORNER

Evening of Irish Music is April 28

The Relay For Life in Cohasset, which includes Hingham, Scituate and Hull, is taking place on June 15 and 16 at Alumni Field at the Cohasset Middle/High School. Organizers have created this "Relay Corner" for all teams and heads of committees to announce meetings, events and fundraisers as well as talk about and share stories and tidbits from the people involved. This week, some of the Planning Committee members' reasons for Relaying are included as well as news about a fundraiser that is sure to be a wonderful night for all. To submit information for this corner, please send it by email to aroundtowncohasset@yahoo.com with "Relay Corner" in the subject line. To check out the website go to:

www.acsevents.org/faf/home/default.asp?ievent

The Relay for Life in Cohasset presents an Evening of Irish Music with the Makem and Spain Brothers on Saturday, April 28th at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School Auditorium. With comparisons to the Clancy Brothers and Tommy Makem, and the Corries, The Makem and Spain Brothers know their musical history. And with an energy not witnessed in some time, they are ready to take the Irish song tradition to a new generation. Their songwriting contains the timeless qualities of folk classics, songs of the worker, songs of the sea and Irish culture. They tell the tale of Ireland and its people – a culture that has undergone terrible strife, but remains strong. In the five years that they have been performing together, they have shared the stage with The Wolfe Tones, the Makem Brothers, and the Dublin City Ramblers, as well as countless others. They have performed in hundreds of venues along the eastern seaboard and have recorded a debut CD, "Heroes and Rogues," that is receiving critical acclaim as well as crossover radio play on Bluegrass, Irish, and Folk stations across North America. The Makem and Spain Brothers are driving Irish folk songs into the 21st century internationally. Tickets are $25 and can be purchased at Nobles Camera stores and Scituate Federal Savings Banks. For more information, please call 781.383.9457

"Maybe with the money we raise, we can find help find a cure for this terrible disease."
— Betsy Pinkus, Relay For Life

Why do you Relay?

"I joined the Relay For Life Committee in Cohasset nine years ago. My grandfather Owen Fryling, God bless him, chose to fight the battle after being diagnosed. He survived for more than a decade and those years were the best in our relationship. He had the courage to fight and all of those around him benefited. I believe this battle with cancer can be won and will continue to support the cause until it has." — Craig G. Bleicken

"When my children were very young I was diagnosed with breast cancer. A year after a lumpectomy and radiation treatments, the cancer returned. I then went through a mastectomy and chemotherapy. While I was undergoing treatment, one of my friends died from breast cancer. She was the mother of friends of my children. She never told anyone she had found a lump in her breast and was afraid to go to the doctor. By the time she finally saw a doctor, her cancer was stage 4 and she died a short time later. My children were very aware I had the same disease that had taken her life. When my oldest son was 5 he asked me if I was going to die. My youngest son held my hand during chemo treatments. My daughter always took care of me. I was focused and determined to beat cancer. I didn't think about how my illness affected my children.

"As my daughter got older, she got very involved in the Relay For Life. She walked with a purpose — she walked for her mother. I also joined a team and walked for my niece, diagnosed with leukemia at age 11, and my friends — another one dying a few years after I finished treatment. However, I couldn't bring myself to enter the Survivor's Tent and register. I knew I had won the battle with cancer, but I didn't want to go back and relive the journey. I wanted to forget what I had been through and what my family had been through and get on with my life.

"The first time I entered the Survivor's Tent to register, I learned that my daughter had already completed the registration form. That's when I realized how deeply my children were affected by my illness and how fearful they must have been that I would die — something a 3, 5, and 7 year old should never have to think about or experience. My daughter, Danielle, had convinced me that by letting others know what I had been through, I might be able to help someone else. Maybe there was someone else that was afraid what a doctor might say and not realize the sooner you see that doctor, the better your chances for survival. Maybe other children would not have to worry about their mother being sick. Maybe one less mother might die. Maybe my children will never have to worry about being diagnosed with cancer. Maybe with the money we raise, we can find help find a cure for this terrible disease." — Betsy Pinkus

"I started to Relay because my parents died of cancer, I had a friend with cancer and I wanted to make a difference. I got more involved because I became a cancer survivor and I didn't want my children or grand children to have to go through what I did. I am still involved because of the enormous dedication, enthusiasm and support all Relayers bring to the event. I am now just part of a larger group that together is making a significant difference by raising money, creating awareness and offering support to all involved." — Harry St.Onge

Stormwater issue not going down drain

Committee hopes to move forward with grant match article

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Stormwater management is not a washed away issue, although the Stormwater Committee will not be calling for a vote on their bylaw at Saturday's town meeting session. After receiving a Board of Selectmen majority vote to indefinitely postpone "article 24" outlining their stormwater management bylaw, the committee collectively decided that additional time spent honing the bylaw would be worthwhile.

"We're taking this as a positive," says Stormwater Chairman Martin Nee, "we plan to use the next few months to draft regulations and get more great input from the public."

The bylaw would create a new Stormwater Management Commission, set up a stormwater permit program and establish a stormwater capital improvement plan. Currently, there is no established group charged with addressing stormwater and flooding issues. The bylaw will establish regulations that coincide with the federal Clean Water Act. According to Nee, an amended bylaw will be put forth at the fall special town meeting.

"We plan to use the next few months to draft regulations and get more great input from the public."
— Martin Nee, Stormwater Committee

"We have a great bylaw that's come a long way in a short time," says Nee, but he would like to take the additional time to make sure the public fully understands the bylaw. Many substantial changes were made leading up to the printing of the warrant, and many people who were involved in the first public hearing in February weren't able to review the changes made.

In addition to ensuring that citizens have a thorough understanding of the lengthy bylaw, the Committee hopes to draft stormwater regulations, which are currently absent from the bylaw.

The Stormwater Committee plans to hold a second public hearing to gather additional public feedback during the coming months.

"It is a good thing for Cohasset," he said.

Despite the bylaw being put temporarily on hold, the Stormwater Committee hopes to still move forward with requesting a town match of a state stormwater grant, says Nee. Article 23 requests a town match of approximately $100,000 to a Section 319 grant, either by monies or an "in kind" match that would allow town resources to be utilized. The grant allows the town to study stormwater issues in Cohasset and implement "state of the art" solutions, according to Nee.

Nee said that there are projects that the town is already planning on doing that could fall under this town/state grant match. The state funds could help to subsidize the associated costs. The Stormwater Committee is providing additional information to the Board of Selectmen, Nee said when interviewed on Wednesday. On Monday evening the Selectmen recommended an indefinite postponement of this article.

DEMOCRATIC TOWN MEETING

Immigration subject of political forum

US immigration policy — Cohasset Democratic Town Committee will host a session of the Cohasset Political Forum Saturday, April 7, 10 a.m., at Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset to discuss the complexities surrounding U.S. immigration policy and reform. Topics may include: What the immigration policy should be; what should be done with undocumented workers already here; and what are the reform proposals pending in Congress. Also to be discussed is the role, if any, of state and municipal governments in making or enforcing immigration policy.

The Forum is sponsored by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee as a separate, officially non-partisan entity and welcomes and encourages fellow citizens of all political views to join in interesting, spirited discussion. For more information, visit the Web site at cohassetdems.org or call Agnes McCann at 383-0222.

Yard sale — Spring is here, and it's time to check the basement, garage or attic to find something to donate to the annual yard sale hosted by the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee to benefit the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship Fund. This year, the yard sale will take place May 5. The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee has awarded the Joseph F. Walsh III Memorial Scholarship to graduating Cohasset seniors since 1978.

Anyone with items to donate should call Donna McGee at 383-9114, Agnes McCann at 383-0222, or Susan Kent at 383-2490 for delivery or pick-up information.

The Rev. Gary Ritts was named the Mariner's Citizen of the Year in 1996 for being a positive force for good through his work with the ASP.

Ritts celebrates 20 years at Second Congregational Church to Presque Isle, on the northern tip of Maine, with seven teenagers to work with a group of Native Americans.

The annual service trip has grown beyond the church walls and this year he will lead 130 high school students and 60 adults to West Virginia. His delegation will break into 27 groups and will likely work on 27 homes and affect the lives of 27 families.

"The goal is to leave the families with warmer, safer and drier homes," Ritts says is the main objective of each crew. The teens and adults repair and/or add small additions to the homes.

Although he's hesitant to say bringing ASP and growing the project is his "greatest accomplishment," he does say it has touched the most people — from the more than 500 volunteers to the families in Appalachia.

He may have touched the most people through his involvement with the ASP, but the people who have been touched the most is likely his congregation.

"We are a church that's like a family. We work together and we play together. We've had our challenges over the years, but we've always overcome them," said Ritts. He says one of the most trying times was meeting the financial need to construct an addition to the church in 1989.

"I see myself as an enabler. The congregation runs its own programs. We set goals and all work together."

He fondly remembers an event the church has put on three or four times over the years called "Congo Capers" – an amateur talent show with dancing and singing.

"We would get on stage and just let her rip," he says of the performance, "the program was designed to have fun and create a community. We wanted to work together and entertain folks."

He said that type of program helps him get to know the parishioners (and vice versa) in a different light. It forges a bond that goes beyond Sunday mornings, he says.

Through the years he has seen many changes in Cohasset, but the most striking of them all he says is the lives have gotten busier.

"Free time and family time are a sacrifice of busier lives," he said, "in some ways it's a good thing – Cohasset is an active town. I just hope people are able to find time to be together."

He and other religious leaders got together with the recreation department and sports program coordinators to see if a time could be set aside during the week for families. The result was games and programs were not scheduled for Sunday mornings. He says, with disappointment, that it was impossible to get a whole day.

Although he's hesitant to say bringing ASP and growing the project is his "greatest accomplishment," he does say it has touched the most people...

Ritts himself will be taking some time off to relax from his busy life and "recharge the batteries" this summer.

"It helps me get a sense of where I am in my ministry, what areas I would like to grow in and it's something that I can bring back to the congregation."

He will embark on a three-month, bi-continental trip that will take him to New Mexico and England. Each sabbatical journey (one every seven years) has a theme, designed in part by the minister. Ritts' theme is "kindling for the spiritual flame." He will attend workshops and gain perspective on his spiritual goals.

"Ministering is not a physically draining job but it is an emotionally and spiritually draining job," he sees the sabbatical as his church's answer to "who ministers to the minister?"

His other "match made in heaven", his wife of over 30 years will accompany him on his trip.

Ritts hopes the Second Congregational Church will allow him to continue serving them until he is able to retire.

"We've all grown and learned from each other, it's been very rewarding."

COHASSET COTTAGER.

COHASSET, MASS., SATURDAY, JUNE 10, 1882.

What Women are Doing.

Dr. Anna Warren, of Emporia, Kansas, has a practice of $5000 a year.

Mrs. L. G. Coburn, a lady of San Antonio, Texas, has 40,000 silk worms at work in her yard.

Miss Lula Marsh is Secretary of an exchange for woman's work, recently established in Detroit, which has met with decided success.

Miss Lizzie Sargent, the younger daughter to the Minister to Germany, intends to pursue her medical studies at a German university. She is already a qualified physician, having graduated at the Pacific Medical College.

Mr. W. E. Kolbeck, of Madison, Wis., has four daughters. The two oldest are well-educated physicians with large practice; the third is a successful and popular minister of a church in a Chicago suburb; the fourth is a successful dentist at Chicago.

Several ladies are employed on the staff of computers in the astronomical observatory of Harvard College. We believe that women have shown themselves specially competent in the ordinary reductions of observations in more than one European observatory.

Mrs. H. F. Crocker and Mrs. H. A. Johns were appointed April 17, as Police Matrons to look after women prisoners in police stations and courts through the action of the First Brooklyn Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which furnishes the money for the purpose.

Judge Brady has written opinion in support [illegible] which holds legal possession, holding that a wife not a right to sue her husband for damages from assault and battery. The cases of wife beating and wife murder has become intolerably long and offensive—Christian Union.

It is worthy of notice that [illegible] which admit women to practice courts of law, was passed without a word of debate. Some voted for and voted against suffrage. Will some of these explain why it is not unseemly" to vote than to practice the law—[Maine Observer.

The Connecticut State law has been amended by the House of Representatives that women as well may vote on the election of trustees of Methodist churches. Meetings for elections are to be held in June instead of September hereafter. The reason alleged is the insufficient number of male voters.

Five women graduates in medicine of several reputable medical colleges recently, to be admitted to membership in the Philadelphia County Medical society, and were black balled although the society had previously voted that women should be admitted to membership on the same terms

For the final week of Women's History month, we have chosen to highlight the column from the "Cohasset Cottager" to show what women were doing in 1882. From going to medical school to practicing law to working with the earliest "computers", women's roles in society were expanding and they were finding themselves with more opportunities — and perhaps more opposition.

Whatever paths have been chosen, we honor these women of history, not only during the month of March, but all year long.

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

Cookie matters

Girl Scout cookie sales are a big deal. Here at the Mariner, there are a lot of former Girl Scouts, including the Cohasset editor. Knowing the effort that goes into it, we are always impressed with the number of boxes that so many enthusiastic scouts sell.

Therefore, we were excited at the prospect of being part of a surprise for Cohasset scout Alyssa Lum who won a four-foot bunny – a reward for being a top seller.

Since plans included surprising Alyssa at her house with the bunny, we had to coordinate with the Patriots Trail Council. The initial date of the surprise was changed, which meant reorganizing with our photographer and keeping the secret. Amid all the excitement, we neglected to go back to the original press release and read it carefully.

Here is what the Patriots Trail Council press release stated: Girl Scouts can be awarded prizes based on the number of boxes of cookies they sell. This year one of the prizes that only three Girl Scouts in the council could receive was a four-foot bunny named Blossom. Girls, who sold more than 75 boxes in their initial order, were entered into a drawing held recently by the Council.

Last week we wrote that Alyssa was one of only 3 girls in the Council to sell more than 75 boxes. Alyssa still very much deserves our congratulations for being among the top sellers both locally and in the 23,000-member Council and for winning the bunny in the drawing! (According to the Scouts, Alyssa ended up selling well over 100 boxes!).

We are proud to have honored her in last week's issue and only wish that we had paid more attention to detail and gotten all our facts right. (Editor Mary Ford composed last week's write-up and added it to Jen Piepenbrink's Around Town column).

Our hats go off to Alyssa and all Girl Scouts, who did a great job selling cookies.

In this week's "Picture This" feature on page 2, we highlight Olivia Brash, Catherine Gilman and Victoria Ross, who tallied the biggest cookie sales this year.

Junior operators

Starting Saturday, teens holding a Junior Operator's License will face stiffer penalties for speeding and for violating the passenger restriction (see story, page 3).

The change in the Junior Operator Law is an effort to try and make teenagers safer on the road.

According to the Registry of Motor Vehicles, three of every 10 16-year-old drivers, almost one out of every five 17-year-old drivers, and more than one of every 10 18-year-old drivers will be in a serious crash.

There is a lot of information on the RMV website: www.mass.gov/rmv. If you have a child that is about to get his or her learner's permit or driver's license, we suggest you sit down together and go over the rules of the road and why they are important.

$50K for boathouse over the top

COMMENTARY

FILE PHOTO

The CMI boathouse on the former Hagerty Property off Parker Avenue.

At Saturday's Town Meeting the Community Preservation Committee is proposing to spend CPC funds on the boathouse at Mariner's Park at the end of Parker Ave.

The CPC has approved giving the Cohasset Maritime Institute $50,000 to rehab the boathouse. The Board of Selectmen approved the recommendation by a 3 – 1 vote at their meeting Monday.

The Cohasset Maritime Institute is a private rowing club that rents the Town-owned boathouse for $1 a year. As part of its proposal to rent the boathouse CMI agreed to fix-up the property at its expense. CMI was awarded a lease on the property based on that agreement as well as some other stipulations. CMI is closely affiliated with the Center for Student Coastal Research, which uses what was the Hagerty furniture company office. The lease for that building had the same provision regarding repairs to the property, including the construction of a handicap accessible public bathroom.

At the 2003 Town Meeting the CPC gave $36,000 to CSCR for "historic preservation" including the construction of handicapped access to the building, public bathrooms, replacement of exterior windows, and bringing the HVAC system up to code. At the same time, the Selectmen voted to take $25,000 from funds voted by a previous Town Meeting to go to developing the park at the property. This money was also to be used for the public restroom at the property. Both sums of money have been disbursed in their entirety.

It is now four years later, and the bathrooms themselves have been finished and according to the Building Inspector are "substantially compliant". There is a slight ramp at the entrance to the bathrooms. There is absolutely no handicapped accessible path to that ramp however. Only a stone dust path that has grown over with grass or eroded which would be impossible for a person dependent on a wheelchair to navigate. Even if they could get to the ramp, there is a 2-plus-inch rise from the gravel path to the ramp, which would be difficult to negotiate. I have brought this to the attention of the Town twice over the last two years and these conditions still exist. There is also no handicapped parking space for the building.

It is obvious that there was little or no oversight exercised by either the Town or the CPC.

The proposed $50,000 is to be used to replace the windows, and put a cedar shake roof on the building. The roof on the building, as well as the windows was replaced within the last 4 to 5 years, and should still be fine. The rest of the money will be used to make the building airtight, as well as installing electrical service, and insulation. There will also be "historically appropriate" siding (I would think the existing cedar shingles would fit that bill).

$50,000 – that's a lot of money for such a small building.

Spending another $50,000 to renovate the boathouse brings the combined total of both Town & CPC money to $111,000 for repairs that were to have been borne by the lessee of the property.

The Lighthouse Keepers building, the Sailing Center, and the Legion are also in Town-owned buildings. The maintenance and repairs to these properties were done without the use of Town funds. In the case of the Lighthouse Keepers, the individual members signed personal notes for the renovation of the building. They also pay a fee in lieu of taxes to the town each year, as I assume does the Legion, due to its having a liquor license. Town funds aren't used on those properties, and shouldn't be used to renovate a building for a private group.

Should this article prevail at Town Meeting, it is incumbent on both the Town and the CPC to exercise judicious oversight on the bids, renovations, and disbursement of CPC funds.

I am urging people to vote NO on this article.

Regardless of your view on this matter, I hope people will attend Town Meeting on Saturday; far too few people participate in this basic form of Democracy, and don't forget – Town Meeting starts at 9 a.m. this time around.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dangerous myth

TO THE EDITOR:

I know nothing about the new Senate President Therese Murray but there was a remark attributed to her, last week, that I would like to correct because it contained some dangerous misinformation.

For the first time in years I read, and she unearthed, the hoary old canard that I thought was safely dead and buried – the apocryphal "senior citizen who had to choose between buying prescription drugs or food."

National and regional newspapers, heads of world renown hospitals and clinics, manufacturers associations and nationally elected public officials all attest that seniors, or anyone else for that matter, whose resources have been overburdened can, through their physician, secure their medication from the pharmaceutical manufacturer at no cost.

I wish there were some way to drive a stake through the heart of this dangerous myth but, at least, the readers of this will be disabused of its error.

Complete Forest Ave. sidewalk

TO THE EDITOR:

I have heard today that a protest has been lodged against the construction of the sidewalk along Forest Avenue. That is very disappointing news, since my family moved to Cohasset in 1988, I have been alternately excited and discouraged over the prospect of a sidewalk for our street and so I guess I shouldn't be surprised. But the question is, "Why this time?" I understand that the money is available, the contractors are lined up, the engineers are ready to go and now we have to have a design review? Enough is enough!

I urge anyone living on Forest Avenue in favor of making this sidewalk a reality to contact the Selectmen and attend the public meeting at town hall on Monday, April 2. Get this project completed before the train station opens, before someone gets hit on the speedway known as Forest Avenue. Smart growth here means a sidewalk to the train station, let's complete it now!

'Ground Truth' editorial praised

TO THE EDITOR:

Bravo for your incisive editorial countering the "Ground Truth" propaganda film. The prattling about "supporting our troops but not the war" reminds me of Lenin's comment about the contribution of the "useful idiots" to his plans. Admittedly, the innocents who hold candles at peace rallies while concentrating on looking solemn and noble are well-meaning, but haven't done serious thinking about the long term interests of the nation and of its citizens, current and future. That the war may have been initiated by distorted intelligence, simplistic thinking, and ideologically-inspired wrong-headedness, and its prosecution badly managed, is far less important than the consequences of leaving the area in festering disarray rather than establishing order and balance.

Hermits may feel noble but aren't an influence in making a society just or in fostering justice and order in the societies whose behavior impinges on us. Neither does isolationism, and its cousin defeatism when the going gets tough. Our future security is sabotaged by not maintaining strong influence on the stability and lawfulness on the otherwise dangerous regimes (or ruins of regimes).

The servicemen who allowed their anguish to be appropriated in this foolish film are unlikely to be much respected by the many thousands of service personnel serving now or in earlier wars. Most realize that they are instruments of a nation that intends to be a constructive force in world affairs, and accept the disadvantages of serving their country..

Not only do we owe than our respect, we owe them mature and informed understanding of the reasons they must be in harm's way. We owe them more than sympathy and dewy-eyed sentimentality; we owe them awareness of the complex issues that our leaders must confront, sometimes with demonstrations of military forcefulness.

Turning off water faucet for a while

COMMENTARY

RICHARD BROOKS

The Warrant proposals concerning our municipal water system, including quite large price increases — up to 40 percent — merit much discussion at Town Meeting, particularly in view of the very large price increases just 2 years ago.

Our Water Commissioners are perhaps the most active, dedicated Commission in Town, with obviously many, many hours of personal time spent on the water quality improvement and protection projects, such as land purchases and the like. However, Rome was not built in a day and my sense is that the Commission is moving faster than the ability of our residents to foot the bills.

I feel we need a hiatus, for a year or two, on some of these well intentioned endeavors, especially given the rapidly increasing debt level, well over $20 million, the interest on which is overwhelming the Commission's budget and forcing price increases that many residents, especially seniors and families with lots of children, simply cannot afford.

Current and proposed water rate price increases discriminate substantially against Curbing Forest Ave. sidewalk?

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As most residents of Forest Avenue know, this paving project has been talked about for more years than anyone can count.

Critical Notice – Forest Avenue Paving – In last week's article we mentioned the Tree Hearing that was required to be held before the Town could remove trees in preparation for adding sidewalks to and paving Forest Avenue. Since there was a written objection to the tree removal, the Tree Hearing was continued at the Board of Selectmen's meeting this past Monday, as required in the Massachusetts statutes. At that meeting, the Selectmen had the option of approving the tree removal or of taking some other action. The objector presented his case, which really dealt with the overall design of the sidewalk rather than the trees. After listening to the design objection, the Selectmen decided that it would be wise to hold a Public Meeting on the sidewalk design. This meeting will be held Monday, April 2 in the Selectmen's room at Town Hall. (If the Town Meeting overflows to Monday evening, this meeting will be postponed. Check with the Town Manager's office at 781-383-4105.)

As most residents of the Forest Avenue know, this paving project has been talked about for more years than anyone can count. The engineering is complete and the project construction is ready to get under way, but faces a possible reset to ground zero. The current design is for a sidewalk separated from the street by either granite curbing, or where space permits, an asphalt curb and a grass strip. As we understand the opponent's position, he would prefer a wider roadway with a white line along the edge of the roadway separating the pedestrian/biker/jogger pathway from the traffic. We don't think that a white line is an adequate safety separation for strollers or children on tricycles or bikes. But, that's up to you to decide at Monday's meeting.

The Norfolk County Engineers provided the engineering at no cost to the Town. Norfolk County Engineering will not support the proposed new design. So there will be a cost for a new design. And, we will need to go out to bid for the engineering design services. This can only be done after the Town finds a way to pay for the redesign. Given the Town's current financial situation, it may cause a 1 to 2 year delay before Forest Avenue can be paved. In the meantime we will need to pour more money into temporary short-lived patches.

Rocky Lane residents surprised – This past Monday morning the MBTA's contractor installed the long awaited guardrail on the new portion of Rocky Lane on both sides of the bridge. The appearance was not what the residents generally expected. We are all used to the bright shiny galvanized steel guardrail that we see everywhere. Instead, we were treated to a very spotty, rusted guardrail. As installed, it looked like the reject from another job.

Well, like all things we seem to get involved with there is always a story behind the story. Here's what's up. Quite a few years ago, the Greenbush project went through a hearing process with the Army Corps of Engineers (ACOE) dealing with Section 106. We have mentioned Section 106 before. It deals with the protection of historic resources. The basic idea is that any major project like the Greenbush should be designed to minimize the visual and aesthetic impact on historic settings. To do this, all of the areas with historic structures or settings were identified. In these specific areas the MBTA was directed to use dark colored fence or other fixtures so that they would not visually detract from the historic setting. (Note, "historic" is not necessarily confined to buildings constructed in the 1700's or 1800's. A neighborhood of similar early or even mid-1900's homes could also be deemed to be of historic significance and important to the area's developmental history.) The homes on the Main Street side of the new bridge were deemed to be just such an area.

So, bright shiny guardrail could not be used in this area. In its place the ACOE permitted the MBTA to use a very special material called Corten steel. Corten was developed about 40 years ago and is a very special expensive steel. It develops a rust patina that darkens to a relatively uniform dark brown color as it ages. When Corten is first installed is appearance is really ugly and blotchy. However, in time after exposure to the elements the color will even out. The dark brown coating, unlike other steels, forms a protective coating and prevents the steel from further oxidation.

Corten has been used for bridges, outdoor works of sculpture, and buildings. It blends in particularly well in outdoor settings and never needs painting. So, that's the story behind the story. We tried to take photos of the new guardrail but the present shades of color are lost when we convert from a color photo to black & white. You will just have to drive by and see what we are talking about.

Contractors are disassembling the old harbor wall.

Harbor wall construction – This week construction began in earnest on the harbor wall. The contractor's instructions are to disassemble the old wall, pour a new concrete footer, and rebuild the wall with mortared joints on the new footer. Drainage will be placed behind the wall so that water will not build up behind the wall.

Sure as shooting, the first section that the contractor took down was an exception to their plans. Ledge was found at the base of the wall so that it was impossible to excavate and pour a new concrete footer. The engineer for the job came up with a suitable design alternative. Clearly, the ledge would be as good as a concrete footer in providing a stable base for the new wall. So, the lower layers of wall granite blocks were pinned to the ledge with heavy steel rods. Then cement was poured between the blocks and behind the granite blocks, locking the entire mass together and anchoring it to the ledge. A neat solution!

Supersizing in a downsizing trend

TALES FROM THE FAR SIDE OF PERFECT

DIANE K. DANIELSON

... as families get smaller, houses get larger. Although, how else would we fit our 50-inch screen TVs into our living rooms?

Recently my son and I watched "Miracle," the Disney movie about the 1980 U.S. Olympic hockey team's victory over the Russians. That game was a defining moment of my youth: the ultimate David and Goliath story where America took on the big, bad bully and won. While my son enjoyed it, what struck me was that he couldn't comprehend the "miracle." Why? Because he's only ever lived in a supersized America where the US portrays itself as the biggest, baddest and sometimes, yes, the bully on the block.

Since 1980, whether it's literal — like serving portions, cars, and McMansions — or philosophical, we've supersized ourselves into believing that size matters. Twenty-five years ago, 7-Eleven introduced the Big Gulp at a whopping 32 ounces of soda. That's since been dwarfed by drink sizes measuring 44, 52, and 64 ounces. Popcorn buckets at movies could now feed an entire third-world country. Even the coffee cups from our grandmother's china set are enjoying a second life — as espresso cups in a Venti Grande world.

In the 1980s, I navigated my Honda Civic hatchback around a snowy, upstate New York college campus (with the help of sandbags in the back and the occasional push from a hockey player). Today, despite global warming trends, the students all drive Jeep Grand Cherokees, Escalades, and, yes, I even saw a handful of Hummers on my last visit.

But sometimes our "supersizing" conflicts with "downsizing" trends. Companies grow globally, yet trim workforces locally. Nanotechnology develops tinier components, yet we put them in bigger appliances. And, as families get smaller, houses get larger. Although, how else would we fit our 50-inch screen TVs into our living rooms?

Then there are clothing sizes. On a recent trip to LA, I discovered that they had basically downsized the clothing racks to carry only four sizes: 0, 00, bulimic and anorexic. All made for women with minimal or no body fat. Yet, with breast implants up 37 percent since the year 2000, clearly we want certain things bigger.

This juxtaposition is having some funny results over in Paris, where the centuries-old couture houses are in conniptions because their standard pattern no longer fits the American undersized/supersized physique. Sacre bleu! This is costing them countless valuable man-hours retrofitting garments that were never designed to be worn on a size-00, double-D body.

I hadn't realized how greatly American women differed from the rest of the world in this area, until a visit to a St. Tropez beach club. To my surprise, I was often mistaken for a local, not due to my fluency with the French language (which is minimal at best), but due to my, apparently, un-American physique. The fact that Pamela Anderson was getting married on a yacht just off-shore probably skewed their reference point a bit. But, as my European friends helped me play "pick out the Americans," at the bar, I had to admit it became quite obvious which nationality felt that size really did matter.

So when does the supersizing stop? Probably not in the near future. With China and India cutting us down to size demographically and technologically, we'll likely feel the need to puff out our chests (literally in some cases), just to make sure the world knows we're still a supersized nation.

In the meantime, I'll leave the supersizing to others, and introduce my son to another favorite Disney movie about the Olympics: "Cool Runnings." Perhaps the Jamaican bobsled team will help him understand that it's not always about winning, being the best or even the biggest, but sometimes it's a supersized achievement simply to finish a race that you started.

Speaking of races, Diane K. Danielson is a Cohasset resident who participated in the One Book, One Cohasset reading event. She applauds Dave McGillivary for showing us that even "The Last Pick" can have a huge impact on a supersized world. For more of Diane's random musings, visit her blog at www.womensDISH.com.

HEALTH NOTES

Med-D is good but not perfect

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

...there is some evidence that the system is having growing pains.

Understanding our relationships with those responsible for our health care is as important as the advice and care given. One thing one needs to consider in dealing with health care providers is the status of the entire industry with respect to its clientele. Take, for example, the Medicare part D prescription drug program that became effective in 2006. According to the publication "Medical Affairs," 10 organizations captured 72 percent of Part D enrollment, primarily in low-premium plans and those with name recognition. More than 12 million Part D enrollees without low-income subsidies enrolled in plans with limited or no gap coverage in 2006. The plan has just begun and the complete picture of its success or failure is yet to appear. Nevertheless there is some evidence that the system is having growing pains.

According to a Kaiser Foundation survey, an overwhelming majority of pharmacists (81 percent) report that their patients have had problems getting prescriptions filled under Part D, with nearly one-fifth reporting that most of their patients have had problems filling their prescriptions. Nevertheless, despite the roadblocks reported by pharmacists and doctors, the survey found that many believe that Part D is doing well in lowering beneficiaries' out-of-pocket costs and providing access to prescription drugs. About 80 percent of pharmacists and about 50 percent of doctors agree that Part D is helpful or somewhat helpful. However, many beneficiaries are just now reaching the so-called donut hole, or gap in coverage, in which they must pay the full cost for the drugs. Given the gap in coverage and the ability of plans to change drug pricing, it is not yet possible to know if a beneficiary has saved money.

There have been numerous communications with the Board of Health and also Elder Affairs at the Community Center about Med-D and the consensus is that it's going well, but not without incident. For example, one recipient talked to me complaining that she had been offered the opportunity to have Social Security pay for the premiums of her Med-D benefits. She filed the appropriate forms and the monthly record showed that the first premium was deducted. Subsequently, she received a letter telling her that Social Security would no longer pay the $16 monthly premium. She then also received notice that she was seven months in arrears on her Med-D premiums, in spite of the fact that she hadn't been sent a bill. The advice given was taken from Dr. Groopman's book "Second Opinions: Don't just do something; stand there." In other words, wait and see what happens.

In the case cited above, Social Security cannot process a request for automatic premium deduction for new plans until the premium deduction for the previous plan is stopped. It's necessary for you to get the provider to contact Medicare to find out why the new action won't take effect. There's time, so writing will be less aggravating than sitting on the telephone for hours listening to a recording. Remember, there are 12 million applications to be processed, and some large fraction of them will have problems.

After you contact your plan, verify what your record shows about your method of payment. If you want Social Security to withhold premiums, you may need to pay the first few months of your premium directly to your plan. Ask your plan to withhold premiums for the future. If there is any question about whether your premium is being withheld, your plan can check with Medicare. Remember, it generally takes two months after you enroll and choose a payment option for the premium withhold to take effect.

In both dealing with the medical community and dealing with your own use of its facilities and capabilities, it's always a good idea to think a situation over, take some time to collect all the data, study it and then decide what to do. If it's an administrative problem such as the one described above, it's best to wait until you've cooled down, reset the angst valve, and then planned what to do. If it's a medical problem, frequently where pain is involved quick action may be necessary. However, there is seldom a case where immediate action cannot be preceded by some rational deliberation. Nevertheless, some symptoms, such as those for stroke require immediate action and 911 is always there for Cohasset residents.

Politics on the Internet

HENSHAW

TOM HENSHAW

The story is told in the hills of North Carolina of the man who ran for county sheriff while his wife was active on stage in the community theater.

"Aha, did you know that his wife is a practicing thespian?" said the opposition (wink, wink).

He lost.

Perhaps we can expect the same thing, only on a wider scale, in the 2008 presidential election, now that the Internet is here to spread the word, whether it be true, half-true, or outright false, from coast to coast on the cheap.

We got our first taste of it the other day when "Hilary 1984," showing Bill's wife as George Orwell's Big Sister addressing her zonked-out constituents, appeared on YouTube, then the Drudge Report, then for anybody with a television channel.

It cost practically nothing and its creator was unknown until the Huffington Post, another Internet blog, outed Phil DeVellis, who formerly worked for a consulting firm that worked for Barack Obama, Hilary's nemesis.

Of course, negative campaigning is nothing new. It's the method of delivery.

Obama's campaign kept denying it was involved, but it is axiomatic that the denial or the explanation never catches up with the original. Ask a sheriff in the hills of North Carolina who kept defining the word "thespian" about that.

Indeed, as Micah Sifry of Techpresident.com told the Boston Herald: "The Internet is word of mouth on steroids."

Whaddya bet there aren't several hundred out-of-work advertising men and women at the drawing board right now devising videos for YouTube, MySpace or TMZ.com that pillory Rudy Giuliani or Mitt Romney?

Let one of them make a slip of the tongue, like George Allen did when he described a supporter of his opponent in the Virginia senate race as a 'macaca," and the blogosphere will keep repeating it, in and out of context, until it costs him the election.

"When everybody can set up their own editing studio, you're going to have people stealing footage and reshaping it to affect the race," said Evan Tracey of Campaign Media Analysis Group.

Of course, negative campaigning is nothing new. It's the method of delivery. But where such advertising in the press, radio and television has been brought under a certain amount of control, the Internet is a throwback to the old days of political campaigning.

Who knows, with the Internet on board, the 2008 campaign may yet equal that of 1884 for organized negativism.

The Republican candidate, James Blaine of Maine, who was popularly believed to have profited from railroad interests while a Congressman, was castigated as: "Blaine! Blaine! James G. Blaine! Continental liar from the state of Maine!"

The Democratic candidate, Grove Cleveland, who admitted to fathering a child out of wedlock, was greeted with the chant: "Ma! Ma! Where's my Pa? Gone to the White House, Ha, Ha, Ha!"

But the cry that tipped the scales was the declaration by the Rev. Scott D. Burchard that "We are Republicans and don't propose to leave our party and identify ourselves with the party whose antecedents have been Rum, Romanism and Rebellion."

The Irish Catholic vote in New York City alone didn't need the Internet to spread that around, and Blaine lost by 37 electoral votes.

Single session Town Meeting could be a slam-dunk

As far as the budget is concerned, Dormitzer is optimistic that voters will be satisfied with the numbers.

"Everything balances, there's no override. Voters don't want to complain about that kind of budget," Dormitzer said in a recent interview.

Each article will be taken up one at a time, a motion will be made, and votes will typically be taken on a voice basis. Article 1 requests Town Meeting to accept the reports of the Town Officers that are printed in the Annual Town Report for calendar year 2006. Copies are available in the Town Clerk's office and the Office of the Board of Selectmen.

Article 2 is an opportunity for town boards and committees to present a report directly to the voters at Town Meeting. As of the printing of the Town Warrant, the Board of Selectmen did not request any specific reports. Any recommended reports will take place at the Annual Town Meeting.

The Town Budget will be reviewed in Article 3. A tax levy of $25,472,131 is projected for fiscal year 2008, or an increase of 4.38 percent. Of special note is that this is a no override budget. This is the first proposed budget with no override of Proposition 2-1/2 since 2002. The percent increase for an average tax bill (based on a property value of $825,000) will be 2.29 percent, or a $198 dollar increase. Griffin will propose an operating budget of $35,340,212, a 6.32 percent increase over fiscal 2007 while the estimated revenue is 36,804,899, a 1.48 percent increase.

Articles 4 and article 5 are two of the Water Commission's six articles. Article 4 proposed a rate increase that will directly impact the households served by Cohasset Water. The reasoning behind the increase is two-fold. First, the rate increase will build in the $150,000 hydrant rental fee. Currently, this cost is coming directly from the Town's budget; however, in recent years the Water Department has not received the full amount. Important to note is the fiscal year 2008 budget (Article 3) does not include a line item for $150,000 hydrant fee. Second, the rates will generate additional revenue for needed water system improvements including updates to the aging Lily Pond Treatment facility, replacement of undersized water mains, and installation of an improved water pretreatment system. A typical annual water bill will be $624, if this article passes.

Article 5 addresses the term of contract for water operations. The Water Commission is requesting authority to contract the operation and maintenance of the Water Department for terms longer than three years. An affirmative vote will allow the Water Commission to continue contract operations without having to rebid every three years.

The Board of Selectmen, advised by the Capital Budget Committee, will request funding on Article 6 for various capital projects and equipment across all town departments. Specific recommendations had not been voted on at the printing of the Warrant and will be outlined at Town Meeting. On Monday night's meeting of the Board of Selectmen, the Capital Budget Committee presented a priority list of projects. Town Manager Bill Griffin has set aside recommended $150,000 of Free Cash to be devoted to capital projects. The Capital Budget Committee has recommended allocation for four capital investments, $54,000 for the High School library windows and flashing for repairs; $5000 for Middle-High School track repair; $66,000 to replace a DPW dump truck; and $30,000 for a construction and demolition scale.

Article 7 sets forth this year's recommendations for Community Preservation Committee projects. The CPC has recommended allocating $49,500 each to the historical resources sub-account, the open space sub-account and the community housing sub-account. It has also recommended allocating a total to $319,265 to six projects. Each will be voted on separately: $4,120 for the purchase and installation of a new "Cohasset Town Hall" sign; $20,000 for a feasibility study, engineering work, permitting and other related costs associated with the restoration of the culvert running between the Gulf River and Cohasset Harbor; $70,125 for Cohasset Historical Society's continuing work on the Maritime Museum and archival restoration; $40,000 for the purchase of a lot on Beechwood Street in conjunction with the Cohasset Land Foundation; $50,000 for the rehabilitation and renovation of the Cohasset Maritime Institute; $35,000 for hiring a historical preservation architect and other engineers to prepare drawings and plans for the "old' portion of Town Hall; and lastly, $100,000 to retire a portion of the Town's debt incurred in the rehabilitation of the Beechwood playing fields.

Supplemental appropriations for fiscal 2007 are requested in Article 9. This article requests Town Meeting to provide additional funding to various departmental budgets. This year there is only request, an additional $60,000 for the Legal Services budget.

Article 11 proposes that one, the Board of Assessors increase all property tax exemptions by 100 percent and two, to further assist seniors, allow an increase of 100 percent to applicants who qualify under Clause 41C (Seniors).

The Board of Selectmen on behalf of the Capital Budget Committee put forth an amended capital improvements bylaw in Article 12. The purpose is to further clarify the role of the Capital Budget Committee and define what constitutes a capital project or equipment request.

The next four articles request changes to the zoning bylaws. Article 13, if approved, will amend the senior multi-family residence overlay district (SMFROD) over 55 age restriction. The current bylaw imposes a 14-day limit on visits by persons under the age of 55 years. The amendment would change the restriction so that visitors cannot visit more that six months in a nine-month period. The responsibility of enforcement of the by-law will fall on the homeowners association and will not put excessive demands on municipal services (i.e. visiting children cannot attend Cohasset schools).

Article 14 requested by the Planning Board will create a new zoning district – the Village Business "VB" district. Currently, this proposed district falls under the Downtown Business district, which includes four areas of town – the Cohasset Village area, a portion of the harbor area, the West Corner, and a small area in the Beechwood section. This new district will still carry all the same dimensional, use and parking provisions currently imposed under the Downtown business district. If approved by Town Meeting voters, the creation of a separate zoning district for the village area will allow future bylaws to be crafted specifically for the village area.

A second article concerning the village area is proposed, Article 15 will allow dwellings for more than one family in combination with stores by special permit. Presently, dwellings are allowed "by right use," which precludes a zoning board review. With or without the change to special permit, the bylaw will still have the 40,000 square foot lot size zoning restriction limiting where apartments could be built.

According to Al Moore, Chairman of the Planning Board, both village zoning changes will "set the stage" for future bylaw changes for the village area. The request for proposal (RFP) for a village consultant who will take a close look at zoning, retail, parking, affordable housing, open space, and historical issues was due last Friday.

The next zoning bylaw amendment is requested by the Water Commissioners. Article 16 updates the Water Resource District Zoning Bylaw (established in 1986) to the most current regulatory language required by the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection (DEP). Currently, there are two specific deficiencies identified by the DEP as to the storage of deicing chemicals and animal manure. The Water Commission is likely to make a motion amending the article to include only the language addressing deicing chemicals. Town Counsel will further review the second part regarding animal manure.

Article 17 and article 18 both address the sale of water. Article 17 changes the Water Commissioner's legislation and Article 18 changes the General Bylaws of the Town. Both must be approved to enable the Water Commission to seek outside buyers. The Water Department's existing legislation allows for the sale of water to private parties, the proposed legislation/bylaw will allow the sale of water to other cities, towns and water companies. Contracts would be up to 20 years and the sum of the contracts would not be greater than 50 percent of Water Department's safe yield, which is 4.06 million gallons per day. Through the sale of roughly an additional million gallons of water per day, the Water Commission will be able to subsidize water costs, lessening the burden on the water users.

Article 19 rounds out the Water Commissioners six warrant articles. The Water Commission seeks authorization from Town Meeting to purchase a parcel of land in the Lily Pond watershed. No additional funds need to be appropriated by Town Meeting. The lots, identified on the assessors plan number 56-58, abuts land recently acquired by the Water Commission.

Article 21 requests the sum of approximately $45,000 to undertake environmental monitoring of the closed and capped Cedar Street Landfill as required by DEP regulations.

Article 22, if passed, will authorize $2 million in additional contingency funds for the previously approved sewer expansion projects. Higher than anticipated inflation over the last few years in petroleum based products and other construction materials has necessitated this request. Work is expected to begin in June 2007. The appropriation, if utilized, would have not impact on tax rates.

Article 23, put forth on behalf of the Stormwater Committee, requests Town Meeting to appropriate funds to serve as a town match for a $100,000 grant to undertake stormwater management related projects. The match could come as funds and/or "in kind" services provided by the town.

"The sense of the committee is we are hoping to move forward with this motion at Town Meeting," said Stormwater Chairman Martin Nee when reached on Wednesday, "we are working with the Selectmen to provide more information to them." The Selectmen voted to indefinitely postpone this article on Monday night.

Article 25 authorizes the Board of Selectmen to grant temporary and permanent easements to the Massachusetts Highway Department to allow the state to proceed with the West Corner Replacement project, a joint project of Cohasset, Hull and Hingham.

The last article, article 26, to be addressed at the 2007 Town Meeting requests one million in funding for drainage improvements to coincide with the paving of several streets during the sewer expansion project. Specifically, the appropriation will provide funding for drainage improvements from Deep Run, through Haystack and down Jerusalem Road; along Jerusalem Road between Nichols Road and Richardson's Brook and various cross culvert upgrades along Beach Street.

The Annual Town Meeting will be held tomorrow, Saturday, March 31 at 9a.m. in the Cohasset High School Sullivan Gymnasium. Warrants have been mailed to every household, and extras will be available at the meeting.

Indefinitely postponed

These articles will likely not come to a vote on Saturday. A recommendation of indefinite postponement could mean either the article requires no action by Town Meeting (in the cases of articles 8 and 10) or that the Selectmen and/or the submitting Committee has decided the article is not ready for a Town Meeting vote.

- Article 8 – Calls for the payment of unpaid bills from previous years. No outstanding bills at the printing of the warrant.
- Article 10 – The annual town meeting in 2006 voted to set an interest rate of 4 percent for deferred property taxes for eligible seniors. It is recommended that the rate remain at 4 percent, requiring no further town meeting action.
- Article 20 — The Housing Partnership Committee has withdrawn its article seeking to establish its own trust fund in accordance with a recently established state statute (Massachusetts General Law Chapter 44, Section 55C).
- Article 24 — The Stormwater Committee has decided to not challenge the Selectmen's vote of indefinite postponement. The Committee will use the time from now until the fall special town meeting to strengthen the bylaw and incorporate additional public feedback (see related story).

ADVISORY COMMITTEE RECOMMENDATIONS

- Article 1: Annual Town Meeting: No action required.
- Article 2: Reports of Committees: No action required.
- Article 3: Operating Budget: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by vote of 7-2.
- Article 4: Water Rate Increase & Restructuring: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee's recommendation is limited to supporting the purpose and direction of the Water Departments proposed maintenance and improvement of the Water Treatment Plant, water distribution system and overall quality of the Town's drinking water.

Special Comment: Re: Town Enterprise Funds / Sewer Department & Water Department

Town Enterprise Funds were adopted, in part, to insulate specific departments from the "rob Peter to pay Paul" demands of municipal budgeting. By virtue of this separate accounting practice their income and expenses exist outside of the Town's normal taxing and budgeting process.

With this special status comes a responsibility to rate payers. Once utilizing these department's services, the rate payer does not have a choice of alternative source for service. There is no free and open market. While technically speaking, rates are not a tax, they should be viewed as such by the Departments with all decisions respecting rates and spending being made in an open and transparent environment.

Accordingly, The Advisory Committee has adopted (March 3, 2007) the following position with respect to both the Water Department and Sewer Department:

The Water Department and Sewer Department should advertise public hearings prior to making any decision on rate increases. It would be expected that a full justification of the necessity for a rate increase would be made available to the rate payers at such public hearing.

- Article 5: Contract for Water Operation: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee believes the proposed awarding of a contract for a period of more than 3 years allows the Water Department the flexibility to enter into contracts under more advantageous terms while still preserving the necessity of periodically testing contracts to market conditions.
- Article 6: Capital Improvements Budget: The Advisory Committee recommends approval of Part (A) - Facilities Management by a vote of 9-0; and Part (B) - Public Works by a vote of 7-1 with 1 abstaining.
- Article 7: Community Preservation Committee: The Advisory Committee recommends approval (all subsections) by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee believes the proposed uses and appropriations of funds by the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) are in keeping with the provisions of the Act and of benefit to the community at large.
- Article 8: Unpaid Bills from Previous Years: No action required.

Comment:

The Advisory Committee commends the Town Manager for reversing the trend of recent years of carrying forward unpaid bills from the prior fiscal year as standard operating procedure. The Advisory Committee recognizes that in the future it may be necessary from time to time to fund unpaid bills incurred for unforeseen or emergency purposes.

- Article 9: Supplemental Appropriations for Fiscal 2007: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee notes that the Legal Services budget was anticipated to require an additional appropriation beyond the amount approved at last year's annual Town Meeting. The Advisory Committee notes that the TM and Selectman have implemented a process over that last year of tracking and identifying departments' use of legal services with the intent of better understanding and controlling future legal service expenses.
- Article 10: Rate of Interest for Tax Deferrals: The Advisory Committee recommends indefinite postponement by a vote of 6-0.
- Article 11: Tax Exemptions: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 7-0. The Advisory Committee supports the practice of exempting qualified seniors from payment of real estate taxes.
- Article 12: Capital Improvements Bylaw: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 9-0. The Advisory Committee supports the joint efforts of the Town Manager and Capital Budget Committee to better define the purpose and scope of the Capital Budget Committee's duties and recommendations.
- Article 13: Zoning Bylaw amendment – Senior Multi-Family Residential Overlay District Over 55 Age Restriction: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee supports the proposed modification of the visitation provisions to a more reasonable time period while balancing the concern of the Town to avoid any abuse of the age restriction provisions the SMROD.
- Article 14: Zoning Bylaw Amendment – Village Business "VB" District: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee supports the creation of a separate zoning district entitled the "Village Business District" with the same provisions of the current "Downtown Business District". The Advisory Committee notes this is a change in name only. This change will facilitate the Town's consideration of future bylaws intended to impact only that portion of the Town defined as the Village Business District.
- Article 15:Zoning Bylaw Amendment – DB and VB District Dwellings for more than One Family Allowed by Special Permit: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 3-2 with 1 abstaining. A majority of the Advisory Committee supports the proposed Bylaw amendment.
- Article 16: Zoning Bylaw – Amend Water Resource District Bylaw: The Advisory Committee recommends indefinite postponement by a vote of 5-0.
- Article 17: Special Legislation for Sale of Water: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee supports the Water Departments proposed expansion of its authority to sell water on a wholesale basis to another town or water company. The Water Department has agreed to impose a limitation on the amount of water (as a percentage of capacity) available for sale, thereby addressing the Advisory Committee's concern that the town's most valuable resource always be available to the Town and not otherwise become overly encumbered.

Article 18: Bylaw Amendment for Sale of Water: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee supports the Water Departments proposed expansion of its authority to sell water on a wholesale basis to another town or water company. The Water Department has agreed to impose a limitation on the amount of water (as a percentage of capacity) available for sale, thereby addressing the Advisory Committee's concern that the town's most valuable resource always be available to the Town and not otherwise become overly encumbered.

- Article 19: Land Acquisition by Water Department: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee supports the Water Departments continued efforts, in conformity with prior Town Meeting approvals, to acquire parcels of property within or abutting the Lily Pond watershed to protect the Town's drinking water.
- Article 20: Affordable Housing Trust Fund. The Advisory Committee recommends indefinite postponement by a vote of 6-0.
- Article 21: Landfill Monitoring Services. The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committees supports the proposed appropriation of funds for environmental monitoring of the capped and closed Cedar Street Landfill. The Advisory Committee recognizes that the Town is required to conduct said monitoring in accordance with DEP regulations.

Article 22: Supplemental Funding for Sewer Expansion Projects. The Advisory Committee recommends approval by a vote of 9-0. The Advisory Committee recognizes this appropriation as reasonable and necessary to the implementation of the sewer expansion project that was authorized by the 2006 Annual Town Meeting.

Article 23: Funding for Storm-water Management Grant Match: Action deferred until Town Meeting. The Advisory believes this Article will be subject to a motion for indefinite postponement.

Article 24: Storm-water Management Bylaw: The Advisory Committee recommends indefinite postponement by vote of 9-0.

Article 25: Easements for West Corner Culvert Replacement Project: The Advisory Committee recommends approval by vote of 6-0. The Advisory Committee is satisfied that the proposed grants of temporary and/or permanent easements are limited to those which are reasonable and necessary for the completion and future maintenance of the project.

Article 26: Funding for Drainage Improvements: Action deferred until Town Meeting. The Advisory Committee has been advised that this Article may be subject to modification at Town Meeting.

Question of the week

It looks as though the "state match" for the Community Preservation Fund is going to be greatly reduced. Has the time come to revisit Cohasset's participation in the Community Preservation Act?

SELECTMAN/ Ralph Dornitzer

In 2001 Cohasset adopted the Community Preservation Act (CPA) and authorized an annual property tax surcharge of 1-1/2 percent. Every year since, the State has matched dollar for dollar the local appropriation. In fiscal '07, the current year, State and local contributions amounted to $600,000. Under the Act, uses for the money are: the acquisition, creation and preservation of open space; the acquisition, preservation, rehabilitation and restoration of historic resources; the acquisition, creation and preservation of land for recreational use; and for the rehabilitation or restoration of open space, land for recreational use and community housing that is acquired or created as provided in the act.

For Cohasset, the dollar for dollar State match has been a significant incentive to fund the CPA with a local surtax. Moreover, the purposes for which the CPA funds are authorized have been and continue to be worthwhile. There are two risks to continued local support for a CPA surtax, however. First, the State match is projected to decline to between 50 and 75 percent of the local appropriation in fiscal '08 and there is uncertainty of the match in future years. At some percentage below 50 percent the incentive vanishes. Second, and more importantly, the authorized uses defined in the Act arrayed against and prioritized with other important Town needs are no longer as compelling as they were in 2001. For example, having just participated in a review of both the capital and the CPA spending for the Town for fiscal '08 one has to ask whether, if given a choice, one would under fund the capital projects at $150,000 (15 percent of requests) but 100 percent fund all the CPA projects at $433,000? We are not, in my view, ready for the debate today but should the Town need overrides to fund basic services the appropriateness of a stand-alone CPA surtax will be up for consideration.

Watch bullets

SELECTMAN/ Paul Carlson

Cohasset's Community Preservation Committee (CPC) is funded outside the town budget. About $330,000 comes from local sources, the balance from the state. Since the Community Preservation Act was enacted, the state has made a 100 percent match of local source revenues. The new state administration is contemplating reducing the match to 50 percent to 75 percent for all towns. At a 50 percent match, the total CPC budget for 2008 will be about $500,000.

The committee must fund projects covering open space, community housing and historic preservation — all areas that need attention to maintain Cohasset's quality of life. In the past the CPC has funded many valuable projects including:

- re-siding the 60 Elm Street complex,
- acquiring the Barnes Wildlife Sanctuary, protecting it from future development,
- assisting the restoration of the downtown museums, and
- buying acreage in the Lily Pond watershed area to protect the town water supply.

While spending a small amount of money, the CPC has had a very positive impact on the town without impacting the tax base. Their projects have been completed on time and under budget. This year the Annual Town Meeting will address proposals to create a plan to fix-up the old Town Hall, fund the Housing Trust Fund, repair the Border Street Culvert and other town projects. CPC projects can only proceed after being approved at one of the two town meetings — a real citizen managed effort.

The question of whether to continue our participation must revolve around the performance of the CPC as well as the benefits the town has received and will continue to receive. The committee's performance has been excellent and there is no reason to forego the state funding. We have a good deal here, let's keep it.

How will you, as a school committee member, ensure that the "best and brightest" teacher workforce is recruited, nurtured, and retained given the town's current fiscal landscape, teacher contract negotiations, and community demands for excellence?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Adrienne MacCarthy

With any good team, the recruiting, nurturing and retaining of your team starts in the "front office" with the management team. Fortunately, Cohasset Public Schools have one of the finest management teams. Prior to my arrival on the School Committee, past members of the School Committee hired our current Superintendent, Dr. Denise Walsh. Our district has benefited greatly from this initial recruitment. Dr. Walsh has brought our district the sense of professionalism it was in need of.

Recruitment of teachers, begins with the Principals of each school. The Principal recruits the number of certified teachers needed to fulfill the specific needs of their school. Each of our Principals has created a culture within their schools and they know who will be the right fit for their school.

Nurturing begins at the individual school level and is supported by our district wide Curriculum Coordinator, Nancy Mrzyglod. During the past three years, I have observed significant changes in how our district handles the nurturing and/or professional development of our staff and the positive impact that has made in the classroom.

Retaining of our staff is done by support mechanisms throughout the system. From mentoring and professional development opportunities to PSO appreciation lunches; our staff needs to feel valued. This, coupled with a new teachers contract where compensation for professional status is competitive with surrounding districts, will help ensure we retain the "best and brightest".

Carrying out our business of ensuring public educational opportunities for ALL of our children and "preparing the youth of the community to take their places as educated and responsible citizens" will require our community to acknowledge that we want excellence in our schools; then, as a community, we will need to be willing to make the financial commitment which will be needed to "continue the commitment to excellence."

Turning off water faucet for a while

families with children and against senior citizens who still reside, perhaps alone, in larger homes but use much less water than the size of their water meter used to provide!

My life's experiences also tell me that expanding the water operation to vastly increase outside, third party sales, such as the Linden Ponds contract already in place, look attractive on paper(or does it?) but not the direction Cohasset should move. The reality may very well be that such sales will not, for many, many years to come, subsidize the cost of water to Cohasset residents. In fact, the prices being paid by residents will, in my financial experience, be subsidizing the very low prices obtainable from such sales. There certainly cannot be 27 percent-40 percent increases in the contractual prices for water to Linden Ponds, which is already, by market necessity, well below the cost charged to Cohasset residents. Also, if we are not very careful and alert, much of any such future sales may only be viable by tanker trucks! Unintended consequences and costs for the Town and residents.

Surface water, which is the plentiful source of Cohasset's raw water, is at the bottom of the ranking in terms of desirable municipal water sources. The best source of water, if available, is well water. We should continually assess if we are using well water for our municipal needs as much as we could be — both the Town and perhaps individuals. Bottled water sales at Shaw's and Stop& Shop are huge!! Good quality well water generally needs no "treatment", such as chlorination, dissolved organics removal and particulates filtration. Marshfield, which is about 3 times the population of Cohasset, uses 100 percent well water for the Town's needs and the cost to residents is low and fairly stable for such excellent tasting water — chlorine free.

I feel we need a hiatus, for a year or two, on some of these well intentioned endeavors, especially given the rapidly increasing debt level...

Chlorination of water with high dissolved organics, such as surface water, is, unfortunately, the source of the toxic byproducts that the EPA mandates must be reduced to the low PPB levels. Hence the new, $5 million plant treatment addition.

I do not know to what extent we have evaluated this well water source, if only as supplemental. I have heard we have some wells that are idle. Perhaps the fact that we have an existing, older treatment plant that has much more basic capacity than Cohasset will ever need is a mental barrier to exploring the well water topic further.

In summary, I sense a real, economic-driven need to slow down or take a breather on the continuing large capital expenditures and resulting large increases in water prices to residents. We all appreciate the energy and dedication of our well-known Water Commissioners but we need a break— the water prices are too high, increasing too fast, with no end in sight as yet. The rates also need some examination relative too the apparent water meter size and other cost/price allocation biases.

A trio of aces

Hill, DeGiacomo, Snowdale aim to lead CHS baseball to postseason

By Eric MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

A fastball, a changeup and a curveball are the three pitches Cohasset High baseball coach Al Gallotta will hope to see a lot of this year.

They are the three "out" pitches of the three juniors heading the Skippers' rotation: Brian Hill, Sam DeGiacomo and Dave Snowdale.

All three will bring something to the table this year as Cohasset looks to go far with this talented rotation. For the first time in Gallotta's five-year tenure as coach of the varsity baseball team at Cohasset, he will have no seniors to begin the year in his starting rotation.

Hill will be entering his third year on varsity after being called up within the first week of his freshman year, when Gallota saw something special in him. With his blazing fastball, Hill loves to throw hitters off with his changeup, which can be very effective after hitters see the heat.

Hill brings lots of experience, not only as a pitcher, but as a varsity player. Other than also starting on varsity football for Cohasset, Hill plays AAU baseball in the off-season, giving him experience against elite players with a rigorous schedule of 70-80 games per year, if not more.

With all of this playing time comes great confidence that won't allow for Hill to be fazed by any team in the South Shore League. As a freshman, Hill led the team in wins with four as a number-three starter and relief pitcher behind Cohasset great Teddy Straughn.

"This could potentially be the best pitching staff, depth-wise, since I've been here."
Cohasset baseball coach Al Gallotta

As a number-two starter last year, Hill had both his ups and downs as he finished with a 2-4 record. This year it appears Hill will be the number-one or two starter and is prepared for the responsibility that comes with it.

"I look forward to the challenge of being a number one," Hill said. "I'd like to be a lot more consistent."

DeGiacomo is going to be entering his second year on varsity after being the number-three starting pitcher for the Skippers last year. With a magnificently strong arm, DeGiacomo loves to throw his fastball to get batters out. With some AAU experience under his belt and a year on varsity, he too brings experience to the team as a very strong and gifted athlete.

The thing about DeGiacomo that stands out to Gallotta the most, though, is when he isn't pitching, but rather playing the outfield.

"I very much enjoy watching him in the outfield because he has a great arm, and watching him try and peg runners out on the base paths is fun," Gallotta said.

Unlike Hill, who doesn't play very often on his off days, DeGiacomo plays the outfield when he is not pitching and covers ground quickly and flawlessly. His time as a starter on the varsity football team has also helped him to become a stronger thrower, both in the field and on the mound.

Like Hill, DeGiacomo has big goals for both himself and the team.

"I'd just like to continue where I left off last year because I felt I ended the season good last year," said DeGiacomo. "And our main goal is to go to the state tournament; it's been a while since we got there."

Like the other two, Snowdale is also coming to the table with experience as a varsity player. Although it will be his first true season as a starting pitcher on the varsity level, Snowdale pitched a lot of relief last year, mixing up hitters with his hard breaking ball that he has come to perfect over the past few years. This curveball is what Snowdale will have to rely on in order to get the job done.

Gallotta said Snowdale, as a

31st annual Road Race by the Sea in Cohasset takes place Sunday

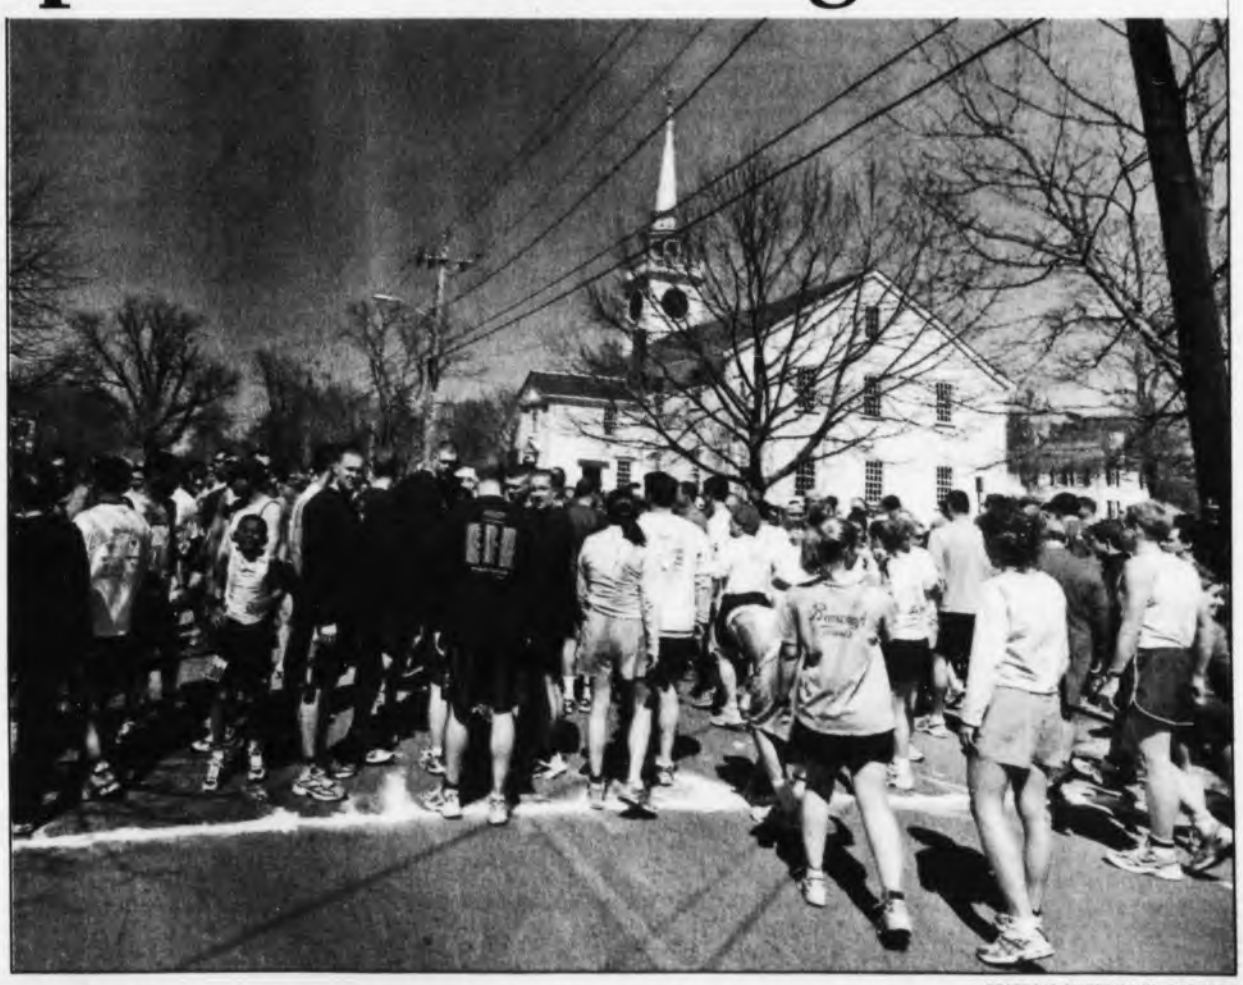
Start time: 1 p.m.

One thousand. That's how many registered runners race director Brad Goodwin is hoping to see for Sunday's 31st annual Road Race by the Sea in Cohasset. Last year 977 athletes registered for the race. Goodwin said Wednesday that this year's pre-registration numbers are ahead of last year's pace. Goodwin said that in the 12 years of official race records currently available, the 1,000-runner mark has not been topped.

"I think we have a good chance of doing it this year," Goodwin said. "I would guess it would probably be the first time that has happened in this race in over 20 years."



While many of the pre-registered runners are from Massachusetts, Goodwin said there have been others from every state in New England (except Vermont), New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Ohio and California. There are even a couple runners from Costa Rica signed up.

One of the runners this year is David McGillivray, race director for the Boston Marathon. McGillivray and Cohasset resident Linda Glass Fechter cowrote "The Last Pick," which is part of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library's "One Book, One Cohasset" program designed to foster and encourage a love of reading among all generations and bring the community together with a common goal.

"We're very excited to have people of Dave McGillivray's caliber, including members of the Greater Boston Track Club," Goodwin said. "We have some pretty big-name people showing up, and that's pretty exciting."

Goodwin added that one likely reason for the increased interest is that USA Track and Field, the nation's governing body for the sport, recently certified the race's 10K course. The race begins and ends at Cohasset Common, and along the way traverses Atlantic

A look inside the boys and girls Skipper varsity lacrosse teams

Junior Mike Grimm scores a goal during Cohasset's semifinal victory over Scituate last year. Grimm, whose 2006 playing time was limited to the state tournament due to knee surgery, is back at full strength and will move from midfield to attack.

Senior Lindsay Durkin congratulates Kara Wilcox after she scored against Nantucket in the tournament last season. Durkin, an All-American candidate, has the potential to graduate as the school's all-time leading scorer, and could be the first girl to approach the 200-career goal mark. Wilcox scored 25 points after moving to the front line a year ago.

BOYS

The Skippers, under head coach Stew Curran, are the defending 2006 Division 3 state champions. The 2007 squad is looking to improve on last year's 17-3 record and repeat as state champions. Gene Binda (former Boston College High School standout, who played at Avon Old Farms and Salve Regina College) will coach the junior varsity team and provide help with the varsity defensive schemes.

Although the boys lost some key players to graduation, including Cohasset's all-time leading scorer, Aidan Buick, the team should be very strong again. The squad will be led by its defense, which is big, strong, tough and very deep. Senior co-captain and Pilgrim Conference All-Star Jeff Brown is a legitimate high school All-American candidate and an excellent coverage and take-away defender who should dominate the opposing attack again. Brown (who will play at Division I University of Denver next year) literally took over last year's state championship game and never let the Dover- Sherborn offense get untracked. Brown will have plenty of defensive support from senior co-captain Ryan Kucinski, who will also see time at long stick middie; seniors Conor Holway, Anthony DiPaulo and Bobby Meikelham and the "big man," junior Jake Cuneo. Opposing offenses will find it very difficult to get good shooting opportunities through this formidable group. Given Cohasset's size and aggressive defensive style, staying out of the penalty box will be key.

Junior Nate Porter will take over in goal in 2007 and look to continue his outstanding play in the limited action he saw last year. Porter positions himself well in the goal and is very smart with his passing in the clearing game.

Senior co-captain Dan Trendowicz, and senior Chris Davis will lead the midfield. Trendowicz has outstanding shooting skills and defensively will put the clamps on the opponent's top offensive midfielder. Davis should provide still more scoring punch and quickness with his strong slashes to the goal without the ball. Juniors P.J. McCaw, Peter Ernst, Charles Czerkawski and Greg Gallagher will carry a substantial load at midfield. With Czerkawski taking most of the faceoffs, Cohasset should have the ball often.

Coach Curran's attack trio of senior co-captain Mike Bunstein and juniors Mark Flibotte and Mike Grimm should be among the best on the South Shore. Bunstein was exceptional behind the cage last year finding the open man and with his unselfish play led the team in assists. Flibotte, a Pilgrim Conference All-Star, led the 2006 squad in scoring with over 100 points and should put up big numbers again this year. Grimm, whose 2006 playing time was limited to the state tournament due to knee surgery, is back at full strength and will move from midfield to attack. Grimm can break down defenses with his dodging and quickness and will be expected to fill the substantial scoring void left by Buick's graduation. Junior attackers Chris Mills and Matt Burgess should earn some playing time as well.

The boys open the regular season Wednesday, April 4, at St. Sebastians in Needham. The Skippers first home game is Saturday, April 7, against Hamilton-Wenham. The schedule is a tough one with games against several very strong programs including Duxbury, Hingham, Marshfield, Tabor Academy and archrival Scituate.

GIRLS

It wasn't just the state champion boys lacrosse team that posted its best season ever in 2006. The girls squad ended the season with a 14-3-1 record, compiling more wins than any team in school history and earning the top seed in the MIAA Division 2 South tournament. While the team got upset by Walpole in the quarterfinals, there is good reason to hope for even better results in 2007, as second-year head coach Chuck Jaffe returns the nucleus of a team that knows his system and that has a short learning curve to take their game to the "next level." Jennifer Palmer, Jaffe's longtime assistant coach in the Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program, joins Jaffe at the high school, assisting with varsity and coaching the girls junior varsity team.

One storyline throughout the season will be pre-season All-American candidate senior Lindsay Durkin, who tied for the team lead in scoring in 2006 with 78 points. Durkin, who earned All-League, Patriot-Ledger All-Scholastic and Eastern Mass Coaches All-Star recognition a year ago, has the potential to graduate as the school's all-time leading scorer, and could be the first girl to approach the 200-career goal mark.

Joining Durkin at attack will be co-captains Kara Wilcox and Tessa Leahy. Wilcox scored 25 points after moving to the front line a year ago, and Leahy is coming forward after playing most of her career at defense. Rounding out the attack is a trio of promising sophomores in Caitlin Mahoney, Kayla Farren or Katie Gaumer, who led the junior varsity team in scoring a year ago.

At midfield, Cohasset suffered major losses - including last year's freshman sensation Gabriella Flibotte, who moved to private school - but returns a talented line-up. Expect seniors Caren Garber to increase her point-a-game output from last year, Emily Coggins to spearhead the transition game, and Lara Novak to become the midfield's shutdown defender. Juniors Jen Silvia and Grace Steele and sophomores Madeline Leahy, Katelyn Ryan and Grace Clougherty all have the potential to play major roles. Isabelle Franklin – the only player besides Flibotte to surpass 100 points during her youth career – and Amy Meikleham lead a deep, talented freshman class.

On defense, sophomore Lindsay Hill started every game a year ago and is expected to be one of the top defenders in the league, and complements the steady play of three-year letter winner senior Colleen Richardson, junior Sara Brown and senior Haley Haracz - back from a year spent playing basketball - to provide an experienced defense. Expect junior Amanda Hurd and freshman Mimi Mahoney to help protect goalie Aisling Guinee, who saw crucial minutes as a reserve last year, and who stopped more than 60 percent of the shots she faced.

The girls open their season at Cape Cod Academy Wednesday, April 4, and start their home season Saturday, April 7, against Weston.

Stars C4 team wins playoff finals at Hobomock

The Coastal Stars C4 team played its final playoff game of the season against the Pembroke Pythons at the Hobomock Arena. Billy Fitzgerald made some great saves in the first period. Cole Gangi along with Brendan Bertone took fantastic shots on net. Shane Rose and Andrew Julian's defense was like a wall the Pythons could not penetrate.

The Pythons jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the second period. The Stars have not been a team to give up this year and their play picked up a notch with help from Matt Gorman, Haley Mullen, Alexa Henriksen and Kathy Moore. All four turned in very strong performances today.

Duncan Latta made the defensive play of the day, using his speed to break up two Pembroke players. Kyle Donahue made a nice breakaway showing his new moves, but the Python goalie came up with a huge save as he did on Bertone's rebound shot.

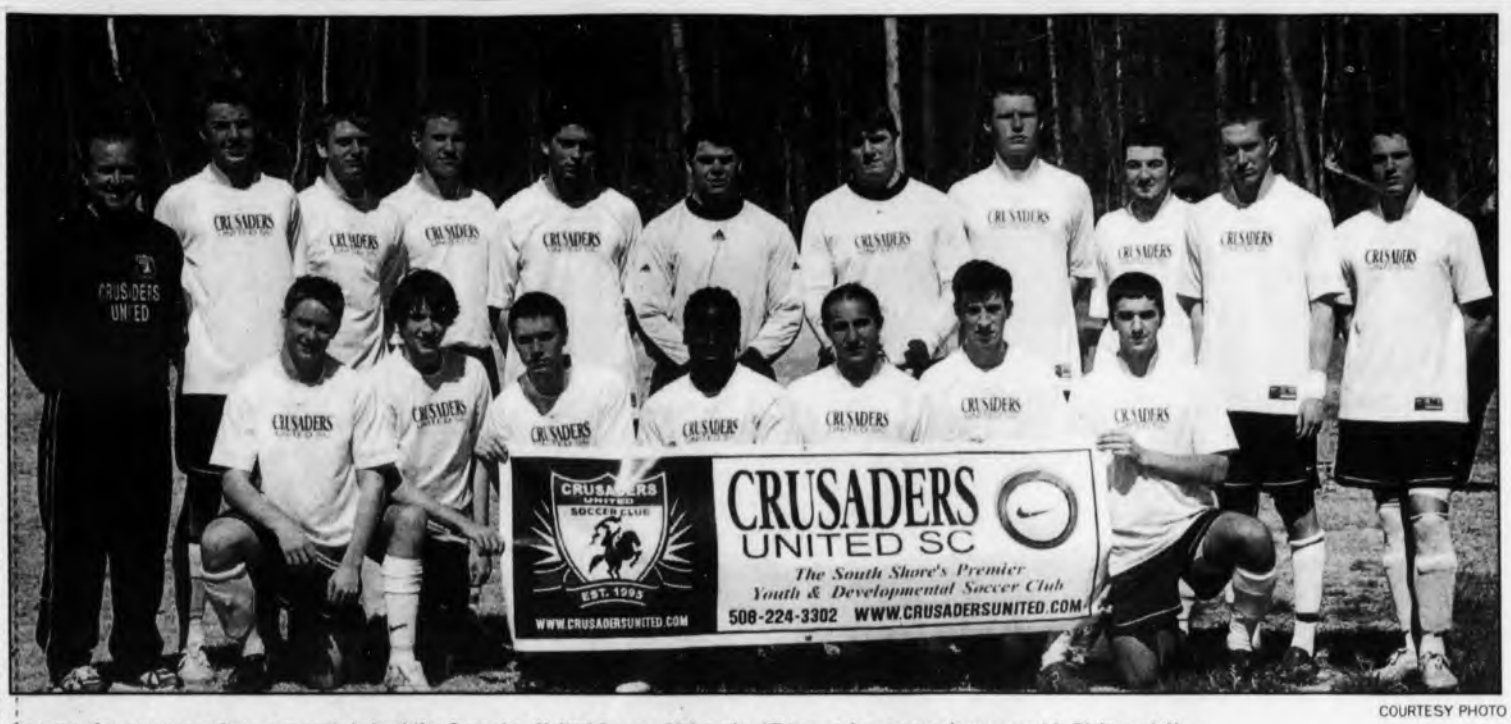
Henry Decoste put the Stars on the board with an amazing goal from an assist from Jacob Latta, placing the puck above the goalies right shoulder. The Pythons took a 2-1 lead into the third period.

Patrick Sullivan showed off his magnificent stick handling in the third frame moving the puck up the ice while playing great defense. Daniel Tobin along with Marshall Feeney kept the play in the Python's zone with a lot of hustle and determination.

The coaches decided to pull goalie Billy Fitzgerald with one minute remaining in the game. Quick thinking Billy; however, sees the other team approaching and decides to stay in the net. In doing so, he made a tremendous save, which kept the Stars in the game. Pat Sullivan, Marshall Feeney and Andrew Julian Play turned up the pressure deep in the Python's zone.

The Pythons get called for a penalty after a Pembroke player takes down Jacob Latta while breaking for the net. With the fans and the bench nervously waiting to see how the game would end; Feeney with some help from Tobin got the puck out of the corner and passed it out front to Henry Decoste. Decoste put it in the net with two seconds left to send the game to overtime tied at 2-2.

Overtime starts with 5-on-5, eliminating one player every minute until someone scores. The line of Marshall Feeney, Pat Sullivan, Daniel Tobin, Henry Decoste and Jacob Latta start overtime in what can only be described as the most exciting game of the season for both the players and their fans.



After three overtimes neither team can score the winning goal, thus forcing a fourth overtime with each team only sending two players on the ice. Henry Decoste and Jacob Latta got the call for the Stars. Play went back and forth before Billy Fitzgerald (goalie), Henry Decoste and Jacob Latta's hard work paid off with one minute remaining in the overtime. Decoste passed it to Latta, who put the puck in the net to win the game, causing the crowd to erupt with joy.

The team came along way this season and all the players should be very proud of themselves, it's turned out to be a picture-perfect way to end the season. Each player improved dramatically and consistently all season.

Without the help of volunteers Carol Mullen and Billy Fitzgerald each week along with coaches Mike Mullen and Steve Feeney the Stars would not have had such a great season filled with fun and laughter. Thank you.

A group of area soccer players recently helped the Crusaders United Soccer Club under-17 team win a soccer tournament in Richmond, Va.

Crusaders come home champions

Under-17 squad takes tournament in Virginia

"They were steady, consistent, and organized defensively, and played an attractive style of soccer offensively. They were fun to coach and fun to watch."

Jason Tassinari (head coach)

PLYMOUTH - The Crusaders United Soccer Club's Boys Under-17 team won the championship at the Chesterfield Ice-Breaker Outdoor Soccer Tournament the weekend of March 11th in Richmond, Va. The Crusaders Boys 17 team was one of eight teams from the club that competed at the tournament.

The Boys 17 team won its two round-robin games (2-0 over Chesterfield Elite, and 1-0 over the Richmond Strikers), won its semifinal game by a score of 4-1 over the Elmont (NY) Rascals, and once again defeated the Richmond Strikers in the finals 1-0.

Head Coach Jason Tassinari of Plymouth, who is also the Head Women's Coach at Emerson College, has coached this team since they were Under-9, several of the current players are still on the team.

"I am very proud of the team," Tassinari said. "They set a goal for themselves early on that they wanted to win the tournament, and they were able to realize that goal by displaying a solid work-rate and true character. They were steady, consistent, and organized defensively, and played an attractive style of soccer offensively. They were fun to coach and fun to watch.

"They represented themselves, their teammates, their families, the coaching staff, and, most of all, the Crusaders United Soccer Club with class and pride," he said. "It will hopefully lead to bigger and better things going forward."

The team was led by leading goal scorers Tucker Fairbanks of Plympton (Silver Lake Regional High School) and Robbie Smith-MacDonald of Mansfield (Mansfield High School). Smith-MacDonald and Matt Bruninghaus (Plymouth) split time in the goal and combined to give up only one goal in four games. Matt Bruninghaus was the goalkeeper in the finals and posted a shutout playing in all 80 minutes of the game.

The team will competing in the Massachusetts Premier League Boys Under 17 Division 2 starting Sunday, April 1.

The team's coaching staff and administration includes Jason Tassinari (head coach), Matt Dion (assistant coach), Marie Fairbanks (team manager) and club president Tim Dunn.

Players for the team are Stephen Johnson (Middleboro), Cam MacFarlane (Marshfield), Cory Hendrickson (Duxbury), Robbie Canning (Marshfield), Robbie MacDonald (Mansfield), Matt Bruninghaus (Plymouth), Jeff Taylor (Edgar Town), Kevin Gomes (Halifax), Ryan Chambers (Mansfield), Alex Bukoski (Sandwich), Justin Pugliese (Pembroke), Tyler Creedan (Middleboro), Brian Empoliti (Pembroke), Kereith Pinnock (Carver), Alex Hartley (Sandwich), Sam Roth (Cohasset) and Fairbanks.

After the race, there will be an awards ceremony, emceed by Anthony Everett, a Cohasset resident and anchor for WCVB Channel 5's news magazine, "Chronicle." Awards will be given for the top male and female finisher from Cohasset, as well as for top-three finishes in the various age categories.

"We're very excited to have people of Dave McGillivray's caliber."

Brad Goodwin, director

While the pre-registration period is over, anyone interested in running the Road Race by the Sea may still do so by signing up at the South Shore Community Center on South Main Street - Saturday from 9 a.m. to noon or the day of the race from 9 a.m. until it begins at 1 p.m. Registration costs $20, $10 for those over the age of 60 or under 14.

There will also be a Fun Walk, beginning at 10 a.m. Sunday. Cost is $15 ($10 for those over 60 or younger than 14). Proceeds from the road race, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, will go to various local and international causes supported by the club. Last year, those causes included digging water wells in the Philippines, supporting a dentist who works at a children's hospital in Cambodia, and beginning a scholarship program in Foneducar, Colombia.

sophomore, was, "skinny and not big enough to throw hard." This year Snowdale comes back bulked up and ready to show his stuff, with a lot of that owing to the fact that he got a chance to show his skills on the football field this past fall when he was named the starting quarterback midway through the season.

"Last year was more of a transition year for me from the JV level to the varsity level," Snowdale said. "But now I have the experience and a lot more confidence in myself."

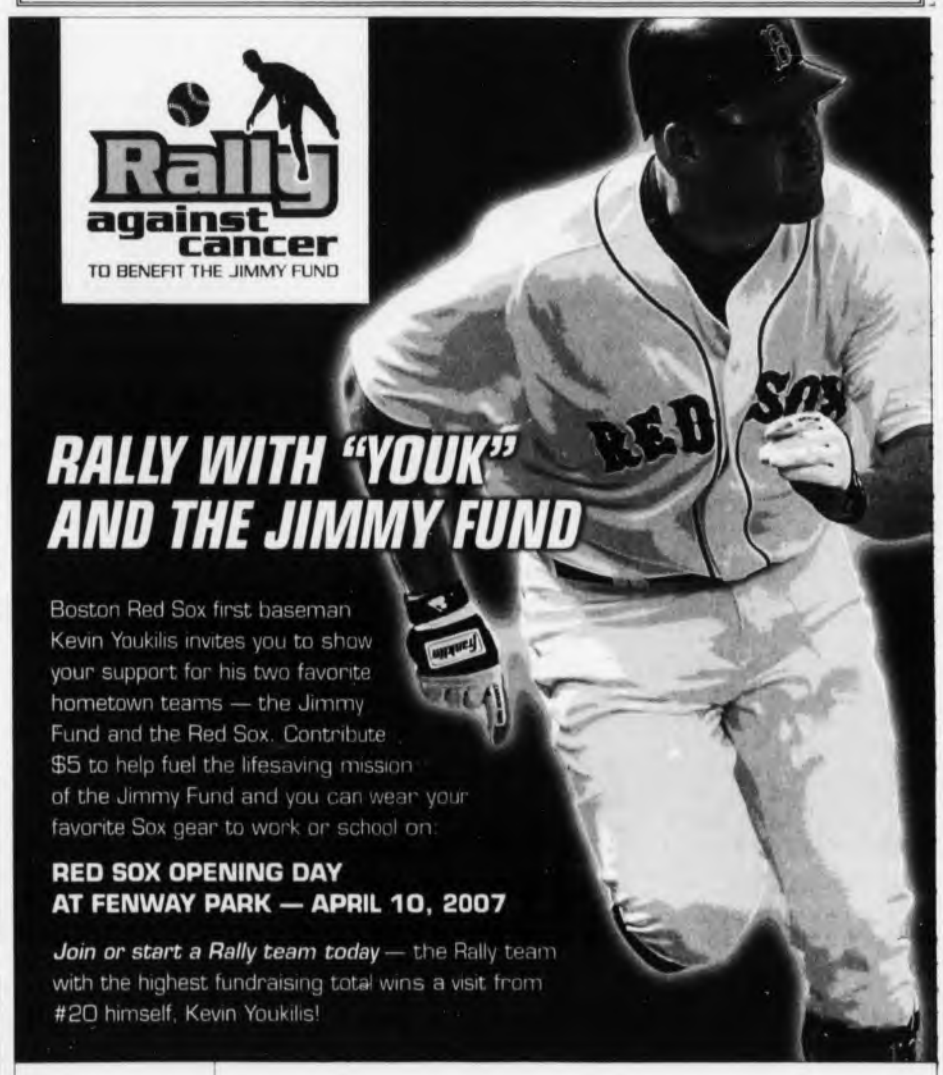
Snowdale also hopes the team can make it to the tournament this year, but his main goal is, "to have a winning record as a pitcher." Snowdale is also the lone player on the baseball team that starts for three varsity teams: football, basketball and baseball.

One huge similarity between the three pitchers is the fact that all three start on the varsity football team at Cohasset High School. All three are used to the pressure and spotlight of playing at the varsity level and all three respond to the pressure very well. Head football coach Pete Afanasiw, who also serves as the junior varsity baseball coach, spoke highly of all three as both football players and also baseball players.

"They are all overall good athletes that shine on the field, are very competitive, and bring intensity," Afanasiw said. "They're good kids that enjoy the competition but also enjoy themselves on the field."

Afanasiw also mentioned all of three athletes are very humble and know when they make a mistake, saying, "They know when they mess up. We don't have to yell at them for it, and they all have the internal drive to correct it."

Gallotta is looking forward to this new experience with all junior pitchers, especially the fact they all already have prior varsity experience. This, along with the fact they will all be back again next year as seniors, makes for a double bonus.



"This could potentially be the best pitching staff, depth-wise, since I've been here," Gallotta said.

Gallotta has high hopes for Hill, DeGiacomo and Snowdale, and hopes for a successful season. Gallotta also knows, though, that while the success of a baseball team lies in its pitching staff, the success of the pitchers depends on the defense behind them. Gallotta hopes that his defense, which was shaky at times last season, can make plays to back up his pitchers in what he thinks is the most competitive sport in the South Shore League.

"It has the most balance and is very competitive; all the teams are very strong," Gallotta said of the league.

All three will be able to show their true pitching potential and why they are the starters. For this year and next, they will be the motor that runs this Cohasset ship. Hill, DeGiacomo and Snowdale will need to perform at their highest level to steer these Skippers to success and their ultimate goal: the state tournament.

Cohasset's Pinewood Derby goes hi-tech

Cohasset Cub Scout Pack #38 held their annual Pinewood Derby at Deer Hill School on Monday, March 12. Cohasset Boy Scout Troop #28, over the past two years, has purchased a track with an automatic start and a computer program to record the times and speed of each car. Sixty Cub Scouts from grades one through five participated in the races. As each car sped down the track, their time was recorded to the one-ten thousandth of a second and speed calculated, as in true drag car racing style. The times were then displayed on a scoreboard for everyone to see.

The boys received their blocks of wood in December and over the past three months, the boys and their families carved them into race cars. The cars varied in style from stock cars, Formula One cars, and a corkscrew car. The decorations included identifiable NASCAR racers, Patriots logo, fancy decals and detailing, Legos, a cheese car and a Cohasset Police cruiser. With race director Cub Master Jeff Forsdick, coordinator Brian Pratt, Troop #28 adult, and track stager, Merle Brown, Troop #28 committee member, and Scouts Graham Sinclaire and Robbie Hillman, each car ran four races at their respective Cub level. The winners and their composite score by Cub level were:

Tiger Cubs – grade one:

First place: Joshua Liberty, 10.1709 seconds, 194.4 mph.

Second place: Alexander Arnold, 10.2057 seconds, 193.7 mph.

Third place: Thomas Coffey, 10.2351 seconds, 193.2 mph.

Wolves – grade two:

First place: Charles Slanetz, 10.0972 seconds, 195.8 mph.

Second place: Zachery Herman, 10.1422 seconds, 195.0 mph.

Third place: Matthew Doyle, 10.1791 seconds, 194.2 mph.

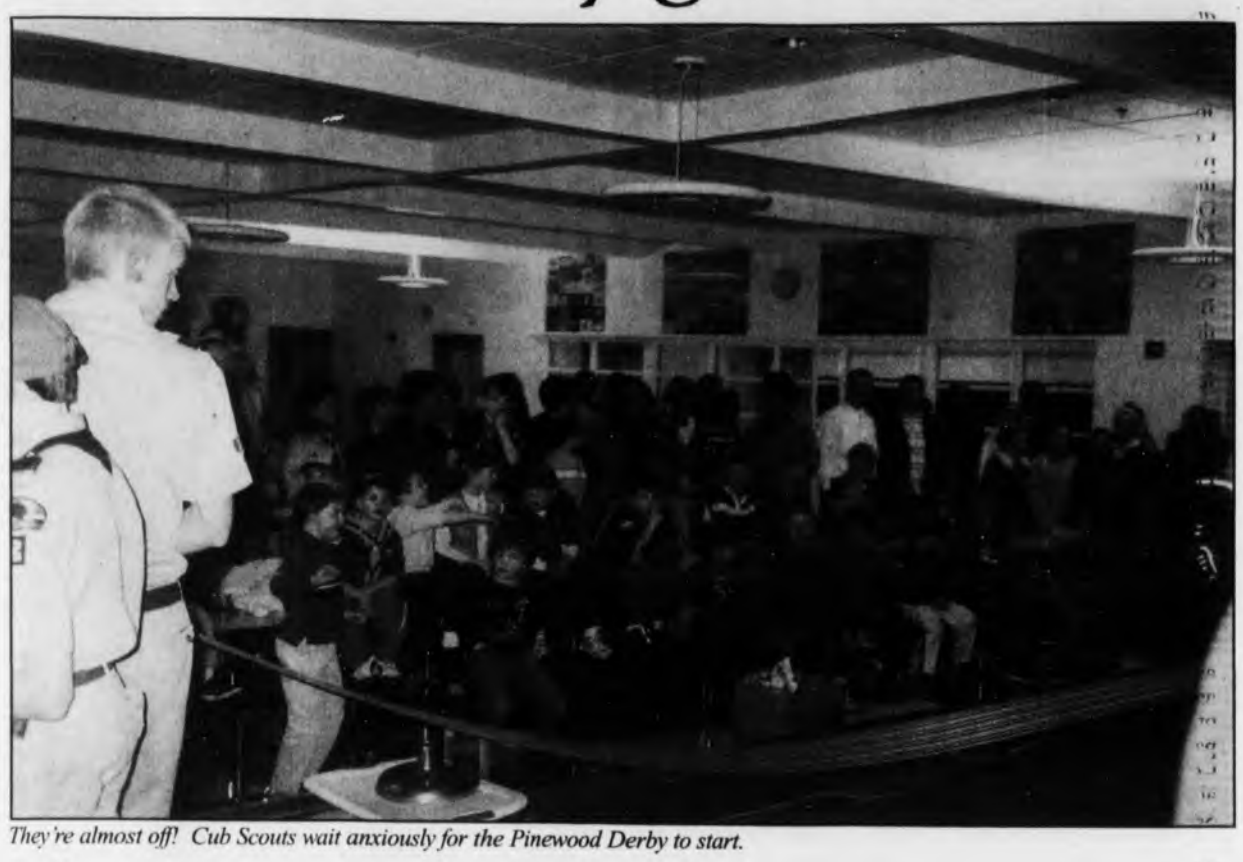
Bears – grade three:

First place: Dylan Marat, 9.9476 seconds, 198.8 mph – track record.

Second place: Reagan Butler, 10.3597 seconds, 190.9 mph.

Third place: Levente Haber, 10.3663 seconds, 190.7 mph.

Webelos – grade five:



First place: Derek Benson, 10.1614 seconds, 194.6 mph.

Second place: Jake Masci, 10.2660 seconds, 192.6 mph.

Third place: Clark Indek, 10.5729 seconds, 187.0 mph.

In a final race between the first place winners of each level, the overall winner was Dylan Marat with a time of 10.0260 seconds.

All of the boys that entered cars received a participation ribbon. The top three winners in each level were awarded a trophy and their cars will go on to competition at the District Level in Plymouth April 7. Congratulations to everyone.

They're almost off! Cub Scouts wait anxiously for the Pinewood Derby to start.

Wow! What a trophy. Joshua Liberty proudly displays his first-place award with his dad, Paige.

Levente Haber and his dad, Carston, are all smiles at the event. Levente won a third-place ribbon!

Reed Park's car was a totally awesome miniature Cohasset police cruiser.

Cub master Jeff Forsdick mans the controls.

Track stager Merle Brown sets the cars up for the race.

"Color and light are the favored elements for me as an artist. The beauty of the natural world around me and my emotional response to it are what I seek to express through my painting. I will often do a scene several times, trying to capture different light effects, seasonal color or mood. I especially love the light and mood of the early morning or late afternoon, or the light when there is a storm coming or just passing. I paint with pastels and acrylics and have been painting about 10 years," said Rousseau.

In search of the Sanibel sunset

A travel diary

By Alice Coyle
ACOYLE@CNC.COM

PHOTOS BY ALICE COYLE

The sunrise paints the skies over Sanibel Island in hues of pink and orange.

They talk a lot about the sunsets on Sanibel Island. Any number of boat charter companies invite visitors to drink in the scenery by taking a sunset cruise. And you can do so literally by imbibing a Sanibel Sunset — the name given to a delightfully fruity tropical rum concoction I thoroughly enjoyed.

In reading up on this island gem off the coast of southwest Florida in the Gulf of Mexico, I discovered that in addition to its vast array of colorful seashells, Sanibel is renowned for its spectacular sunsets. As our brief trip involved a two-day stop in Fort Myers to catch the Red Sox in spring training prior to our island stay, I had a limited amount of time to chase down and enjoy sunsets on Sanibel.

On the first night I discovered that our charming resort, Song of the Sea, was situated on an east-facing beach. When looking out over the cool, white expanse of sand and the vast blue gulf in front of me, I couldn't help notice the sun was setting behind me — just over my right shoulder.

But on that night, I was content to sit on the porch of our gulf-view suite, sip my merlot and watch the sky to the west turn shades of orange and pink.

'We'll catch the sunset cruise tomorrow night,' I told my husband, who seemed relieved we didn't have to rush off to Captiva — Sanibel's sister island just over the causeway — or anywhere else to catch a boat. This part of the trip was supposed to be relaxing for him. He savored the chance to sit by the pool or lounge in a beach chair and doze off to the sound of lapping waves or me reading off the menu selections at a variety of island eateries. Trying to balance his need for R & R and my need to explore Sanibel and get the most out of our time there, proved challenging — but I think we accomplished it.

We enjoyed dining out at Red Fish, Blu Fish, an artsy, tapas or small-plate café where we laughed when we saw the minuscule portion of crème brulee I told the waitress we'd share. The food was delicious if diminutive but we were grateful for the extra basket of bread. After dinner we grooved to live jazz music — I requested the band play one of our wedding songs — at Ellington's restaurant and jazz bar located at the Sanibel Inn.

Sanibel Lighthouse has been a familiar beacon for mariners since 1884.

A lover of lighthouses, I took advantage of the complementary bikes our resort offered and armed with a crude map and my camera we pedaled out the two miles to Sanibel Lighthouse the next morning. The large brown structure standing on four spindly metal legs at the tip of the island stood in stark contrast to the beauty that surrounded it — the tranquil gulf waters, the swaying palms and mangroves, and hibiscus growing wild.

When it came to the J.N. 'Ding' Darling Wildlife Refuge at the center of Sanibel, we opted to drive rather than pedal our way there.

The sanctuary, we found, is for the birds.

For a $5 charge you can drive, (it's $1 on a bike) along the paved roadway cutting through the refuge, which is full of scenic overlooks where you can bird watch to your heart's delight. Osprey, great blue heron, pelicans and many other sea birds I cannot begin to identify, enjoy feeding on fish in the shallow waters, oblivious to the tourists snapping their pictures or gazing at them through high-powered binoculars. You can stop wherever you like along the way to enjoy the views, museum exhibits and other attractions —we saw several local anglers vying with the birds for the estuaries' bounty.

Our appetite for nature sated, we decided to feed our mid-afternoon hunger at Captiva's famous Bubble Room. It was a short, but breathtaking drive to Captiva along the coast where beautifully landscaped, pastel-colored mansions rise above the palms and overlook the gulf. We stepped back in time inside the Bubble Room, a quirky café cluttered with a vast collection of antique toys, photographs and gimcracks of all varieties. A life-sized Betty Boop greets those entering the ladies room and a selection of delicious homemade desserts is a sweet compliment to a dizzying array of pop culture artifacts on display throughout the restaurant.

After a quick shopping spree through Perwinkle Place, a charming outdoor mall, to pick up the required souvenir T-shirts and other "tshatshkes" for family members, it was time to kick back and enjoy the beach. My husband stretched out on a beach chair and I lathered up with SPF 55 sunscreen and took the warm gulf water, wading waist deep, in search of the perfect, unbroken, conch shell.

In the end, it eluded me. My theory is the staff of Sanibel's shell museum gets to all the best shells before the tourists. Of course there are plenty of shell shops that sell the treasure you've sought in vain, but where's the sport in that?

We never made it for a sunset cruise and the earliest dinner reservation we could get for a table with a view at Sunset Grille was 8:45 — well past sun down. So we opted for Doc Ford's Sanibel Rum Bar & Grille and had what was the best meal of the vacation. I went with banana leaf snapper, he had a steak and of course that meant surf and turf all around. The key lime pie was a triumph, and yes that's where I drank a Sanibel Sunset.

Faced with the prospect of springing forward for an early daylight savings time switch, we retired early. Nervous about oversleeping despite setting several alarms, I slept little and light. When the cell phone alarm went off I shot out of bed and decided to head out to the beach to gather up some of the beautiful white sand to take home in a bottle. As I stepped out of our room onto the dew covered lawn I was thrilled to see the sky streaked with orange and pink to the east. The moon was still up and I grabbed my camera to, well shoot the moon, which from my perspective appeared to dangle between two large palm trees.

Then I headed to the beach and found I was not alone at this early hour. There were people out walking their dogs, and joggers, a group of girls collecting shells, and lots of early birds — seagulls, ospreys and others enjoying breakfast by the sea.

But I was focused on the sunrise — the most beautiful I'd ever seen. I took dozens of photos capturing its majestic ascent, its orange dappled reflection dancing on the gulf's gentle waves. I may not have caught the sunset, but my reward was seeing it climb into the clear sky on another perfect day on Sanibel Island.

Running out of battery power, my camera's memory card nearly full, I turned away from the sun to head back to the hotel and pack up for our trip home, when I heard a voice from behind me. It was an older gentleman out for his morning stroll along the beach. He had seen me trying to capture with my camera the breathtaking sunrise scene.

"That was neat, wasn't it," he said with a smile as he walked by.

Yes, it was.

Sea birds of all kinds including Great Egrets act naturally at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

A White Ibis scans the shallow waters for a mid-day meal.

Cut for a Cure

Adrian Morris Salon hosts annual benefit

Photos by Lynne Layman

Lisa Lynch, owner of Ports and Company, was one of the many sponsors of the event hosted by Adrian Morris Salon in Cohasset. Earlier that day the salon hosted a cut-a-thon that also benefited the Live, Learn, Love, Breast Cancer Outreach Organization.

Theresa Breen, Rosie Lonborg, Pam Ahl (who started the Live, Learn, Love Breast Cancer Outreach Organization), Amy Webber, Adrian Morris and Karen Oronte pose for a group picture at the March 10th event at the River Club in Scituate.

Alexandra Smith, Matthew Keefe, and Ben and Nora Keefe are all smiles at the event whose proceeds benefit breast cancer outreach.

Rosie Lonborg, who helped emcee, chats with Gary Barrows at Cut for a Cure reception at the River Club on March 10.

Elizabeth and Mark Kissick of Cohasset attended the event. Elizabeth of EK Designs donated items to the Live Auction.

Ann Seales models an outfit from Ports and Company during the fashion show at Cut for a Cure. The event also included a live auction, raffle and dancing.

Pauline Murano, Brian Blais, and his sister Pat Blais enjoy the Cut for a Cure reception. All the proceeds from the event and cut-a-thon at the Adrian Morris salon – more than $30,000 so far – will go to the Live, Learn, Love, Breast Cancer Outreach Organization.

Clair Wankum and Pam Ahl visit with Jim Lonborg at Cut for a Cure. The event, which was hosted by Adrian Morris Salon, raised more than $30,000 for the Live, Learn, Love Breast Cancer Outreach Organization.

Cohasset tops Scituate in Academic Bowl

Search engine crackdown at CHS

LIFE AT CHS

MICHAEL CORRY

March has come and gone, and if the old adage "April showers..." is true then you might want to keep a raincoat handy for the next 30 days or so. In phonetically related news, Cohasset reigned supreme over Scituate in an Academic Bowl recently.

The Gestapo of CHS is scouring the building for rule-breakers! We can no longer use search engines for images due to the Nonsens — whoops, Websense. If the school really wants to police the computers; how about using those individual student ID numbers for logins and creating randomly generated passwords to instead of student1 student1 or teacher1 teacher1 as the username/password combo?

Honestly, why do we have computers if we can't even use them for legitimate school projects without BIG BROTHER constantly peeking into our monitor, or preventing us from visiting websites like Google Images? It's understandable the administration doesn't want us playing games (god forbid), but now menial tasks like getting pictures for the Spinnaker has become open-heart surgery.

Every grade has the same sentiment as they leave; the state of affairs is currently on a downward slope at CHS. Let's look at some of the perks our alumni won't find at their alma mater: Open Campus during lunch, Pep Rallies and Senior skits, Camp Marist — what's next, Spirit Week, The Spinnaker? The scales are extremely unbalanced at the moment — but at least the citizens of Cohasset can sleep at night knowing the students of CHS aren't accessing "inappropriate" websites.

Here's what's happening this week.

• Cohasset's 12th-grade AP English students smoked Scituate in The Academic Bowl, burning the competition with their knowledge. Scituate's Academic Team were incinerated by Mrs. Berman's AP English kids, who showed no mercy.

• During the Annual Town Meeting tomorrow, the 2007 Post Prom Party Committee will be hosting the concession stand at the high school from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Come and get some vittles like: coffee, bagels, water, Vitamin Water, hotdogs, meatball subs, and baked goods. This assortment of eats will be on sale both during the meeting and the lunch break. Dinner plates of spaghetti and meatballs made to-go will also be available. Honestly, why do we have computers if we can't even use them for legitimate school projects without BIG BROTHER constantly peeking into our monitor, or preventing us from visiting websites like Google Images?

• Tuesday night a Sustainable Cohasset Meeting took place in the Library.

• Thursday Middle School Team Leaders met.

• Thursday night the All-School Instrumental Concert was held in the gym.

• Tonight the middle school is having a dance from 7-9 p.m. in the cafeteria.

Next week the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office is promoting the dramatic presentation "Consent." There is a very close link between teen alcohol and dangerous, unwelcome sexual behavior. This school-wide assembly and presentation of the play will help educate young people about the age of consent, statutory rape, and how alcohol can affect consent.

Seniors have started to get antsy; the tension from this restless buildup only mounts as we approach our final day of school. Tough luck underclassmen—maybe Seniors will still get out early by the time you graduate. Just kidding, upperclassmen have been tormenting younger grades with that rumor for years.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

THE AMERICAN CAMP ASSOCIATION NEW ENGLAND REMINDS PARENTS THAT SUMMER DAY CAMP CAN BE A TAX WRITE OFF!!

Many parents may not realize that there are tax benefits to sending kids to camp. To qualify for a tax savings, parents must have dependent children under the age of 13 and enroll them in a summer day camp, thus allowing both parents to either work or go to school. "This little-known benefit of summer day camp is one of several wonderful benefits of the camp experience for children including increased confidence and self esteem, improved independence and leadership skills, and additional social skills in a camp environment of healthy play and all-around fun," says Bette Bussel, executive director of the American Camp Association New England, a nonprofit organization that oversees and accredits close to 400 camps in the region.

Sending a child to day camp so that a parent can work qualifies as a dependent-care expense. The size of the tax benefit allowable by law varies depending on the parent's income; and Bussel recommends that parents consult an accountant or tax advisor about how to claim this benefit. If a parent makes more than $43,000, he/she can claim a credit of 20% of the cost of summer day camp or up to $600 for one child. This savings only applies to day camps, not to overnight camps.

"We want parents to know that sending their child to camp can be looked upon as great summer option. Not only does camp help kids grow and flourish, it offers a safe child-centered environment away from home. And now there's the double advantage of saving on your taxes. Everyone wins," concludes Bussel!

Local comedian ready for home stand

'Laughter' brings funny business to Memorial Hall

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Don Gavin grew up in West Roxbury, taught high school in Weymouth, and now makes his home in Nahant, but the longtime stand-up comic really lives on the road and at sea.

Dan Boulger

"I'm on tour playing comedy clubs about 10 weeks a year, and I play cruise ships another 25 weeks a year," explained Gavin by telephone last week from Las Vegas where he was headlining at the Comedy Stop in the Tropicana Hotel and Casino. Gavin will be home in Massachusetts this Saturday, however, for "Laughter on the Rock," a night of comedy at Plymouth Memorial Hall. He'll share the bill with fellow comics Patty Ross, Dave Russo, Dan Boulger and Christine Hurley. Gavin promises some local humor for his hometown audience.

"I'll definitely be talking about the Big Dig and Boston drivers," says Gavin. "I'm an everyman. Whatever I do wrong, you have, too — I just see humor where other people don't. The things that aggravate me make it into my act. I write all my own material, sometimes on napkins or even matchbooks. I never buy jokes from other writers."

And he doesn't see the humor that some of his fellow comics do in the news coming out of Washington, D.C.

"Politics are something I never touch. There has never been any mention of politics or politicians in my act and there never will be. I don't find politics humorous at all."

And he likes to laugh.

"A lot of comedians are not funny people at all. Their comedy comes from them being loners and never even having a date, but that's not me at all," says the 57-year-old Gavin, whose early influences included George Carlin, Richard Pryor, Jonathan Winters, and another comic with a similar career trajectory. "I really like Robert Klein and he was originally a school teacher, too."

"Politics are something I never touch. There has never been any mention of politics or politicians in my act and there never will be. I don't find politics humorous at all."

— Comedian Don Gavin

Gavin taught English and was also a coach at Weymouth North High School's Vocational Technical School for 12 years, before deciding to trade the classroom for a comedy club stage.

"The last couple of years that I taught, I was playing clubs at night. It was difficult to do both things at the same time. I wouldn't get home until 1:30 in the morning and then I'd have to be up again at 6 a.m. I had to decide between one and the other and so I chose comedy. The hours are better. I can sleep until noon."

He may have left his high school classroom behind, but Gavin continues to mentor and teach young comics — including Jimmy Dunn, Kevin Flynn, and Wendy Liebman — and has long been known as "The Godfather of Boston Comedy." Gavin founded Nick's Comedy Stop in Boston and was also a founding member of the Ding Ho, a now-defunct Cambridge comedy club where Lenny Clarke, Jimmy Tingle, and Steven Wright got their starts.

"I like to encourage young comics and give them advice about small changes they can make to their acts including their timing and delivery."

Christine Hurley

Gavin's own ability to deliver the laughs has also earned him roles in feature films like "Shallow Hal" and "Fever Pitch," as well as frequent guest shots on "The Late Show with David Letterman," but the comic still prefers live work to films and television.

Dave Russo

"I enjoy traveling very much. I get to stay in some beautiful hotels and on some very luxurious cruise ships," the latter because of an act that has mass appeal. "I work clean which a lot of people who book comics really appreciate. On a cruise ship, I do material that appeals to everyone from grandparents to grandchildren. That's just the way I like it."

Don Gavin will be toplining "Laughter of the Rock" at Plymouth Memorial Hall on Saturday, March 31, with a portion of the proceeds going to the Leukemia Society. For tickets and information, call 508-747-1340 of visit www.ticketweb.com. Tickets may also be purchased at all Strawberries locations.

Movie review

Agent Memphis (Michael Pena) and Marine Bob Lee Swagger (Mark Wahlberg) have revenge on their minds.

'Shooter' hits the marky mark

Shooter (B)

By James Verniere
FILM CRITIC

Jason Bourne gets "Rambo"-ized in "Shooter," a surprisingly entertaining, if dumb and gratuitously brutal action film.

Based on a novel by Washington Post film critic Stephen Hunter, the film marks Mark Wahlberg's bid to be the Stallone-Schwarzenegger action hero of his generation.

Bob Lee Swagger, if you can believe it, is the name of the hard-assed, hawk-eyed Marine Gunnery sergeant Wahlberg plays in the film. In opening scenes in Ethiopia, Bob Lee, a super-sniper capable of hitting a target a mile away, is blasting the brains out of "unfriendlies" to provide cover for a Delta Force-like "peacekeeping" team operating covertly.

Next thing you know, Bob Lee's spotter is dead, and he has been left behind to die by his superiors. Bad idea, boys.

Before you can say "First Blood," he's secretly wiped out his betrayers and is holed up in the Wyoming mountains with his dog, an animal smart enough to serve and enjoy a cold Bud.

Enter Col. Isaac Johnson (Danny Glover sporting some sort of dental device). Johnson wants Bob Lee to help stop an attempt on the life of the president, one Bob Lee deduces will take place in Philadelphia.

"Shooter," not to be confused with the four other films with this title, is one of those movies in which everything is so obvious, the only person who doesn't know Bob Lee is being set up is Bob Lee. No one said a hero had to be smart, especially if his name is Bob Lee Swagger.

Wahlberg, fresh off his Academy Award nomination for "The Departed," has a faint goatee and in early scenes a Rambo-like ponytail. In what I predict will be the film's signature line, justifying the trail of blood he leaves behind, Bob Lee reminds someone that, "These boys killed my dog."

'Nuf said.

The plot is mildly ludicrous, but the gunplay and explosions are well-orchestrated, and the film's anarchic cynicism regarding the government will appeal equally to liberals and card-carrying NRA true believers.

In scenes reminiscent of the far superior John Frankenheimer film "Ronin," Sarah (Kate Mara), the gorgeous widow of Bob Lee's spotter, operates on Bob Lee's gunshot wounds after he knocks himself out by inhaling the aerosol contents of several cans of whipped cream. I kid you not. It's "MacGyver: E.R." Don't try this at home, kids.

Every rising star in Hollywood capable of delivering a credible screen punch gets to play a role like this one, and Wahlberg, as we all know, has the fisticuffs down cold.

In the supporting cast, Michael Pena as a disillusioned FBI agent, Elias Koteas as a bad guy and the aforementioned Mara and Glover do their jobs well. As a Dick Cheney-esque Senator from Montana, veteran Ned Beatty is a hoot.

Director Antoine Fuqua ("Tears of the Sun," "King Arthur") finally pulls the action-film ingredients together coherently. "Shooter" may not be the brightest boy in class, but he's tough and he's got heart. I smell a sequel.

Rated R. "Shooter" contains gore, extreme violence and sexually suggestive scenes.

BECAUSE YOU HAVE A TRUST... YOU MUST ATTEND THIS FREE WORKSHOP!!!

DENNIS B. SULLIVAN
ATTORNEY AT LAW, CPA

If you have a trust agreement, I have some bad news for you; your trust is probably outdated. Trusts drafted by many attorneys do not contain the protective provisions we included in our recently developed "Life Plan™". How do I know? Last year I gave numerous workshops throughout the state and will even offer $1,000 to anyone who can present an estate plan that contains all 19 of the protective provisions we currently use when designing a plan. Most estate plans had fewer than 3 of these provisions. Only one estate plan even came close to having all 19 provisions. Consider this...

THIS YEAR YOU ARE SIX TIMES MORE LIKELY TO BECOME DISABLED THAN DIE!

This alarming statistic shouldn't surprise you...you see it every day. Unfortunately, the number of people becoming disabled will double in the next decade. Your trust was designed to deal with death not disability, but that can be corrected.

A LAWSUIT IS FILED EVERY THIRTY SECONDS – MORE THAN 90 MILLION ARE FILED IN THE UNITED STATES EACH YEAR

Your trust can be modified to protect the surviving spouse's interest in the Decedent's estate from frivolous lawsuits. Currently, it is only designed to reduce estate taxes. Would you like it to do both?

MOST POWERS OF ATTORNEY ARE OUTDATED WHEN PRESENTED (MANY ARE NOT EVEN AVAILABLE)

Your Power of Attorney is used to allow someone to act on your behalf when you are disabled. Unfortunately, these documents keep becoming outdated. The comprehensive version we previously used was revised in 3 major areas after the Terri Schiavo case. Assuming your document is current, will it be available in an emergency? Hospitals report in 3 out of 4 cases the Patients' Health Care Proxy is not available when needed. Our new program makes this document accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week via the telephone.

IN 2001, MORE YOUNG PEOPLE FILED FOR BANKRUPTCY THAN GRADUATED FROM COLLEGE!

The amount of assets that will be inherited by the next generation is staggering. Unfortunately, the amount our children or beneficiaries will lose due to financial difficulties such as bankruptcy, lawsuits and divorce will be just as staggering. If you could distribute your estate in such a way as to protect your children or beneficiaries from their creditors for life... would you? I would be surprised if you said no. After all, isn't that why your trust was created in the first place?

MOST ESTATES DON'T MAKE IT TO THE GRANDCHILDREN!

If you can protect your estate during the life of your children, then it will be available for your grandchildren. Wouldn't it be nice if your estate, whatever is left, could then transfer estate tax free to your grandchildren? It can, we just need to put the appropriate language in the document.

THE BIGGEST THREAT TO YOUR ESTATE IS NO LONGER PROBATE & TAXES...

IT'S DISABILITY, OUTDATED DOCUMENTS UNPROTECTED DISTRIBUTIONS...

DUE TO RECENT CHANGES, YOUR LIVING TRUST COULD BECOME A LIVING HELL.

WE HAVE DEVELOPED A SOLUTION FOR EVERY PROBLEM!

Theater review

Lisa Kron (L) and Mary Pat Gleason star in the Huntington Theatre Company's production of the Kron-penned comedy, "Well" running through April 8 at the Huntington's mainstage, the Boston University Theatre.

'Well' done

Playwright and actress Lisa Kron — whose wonderfully affecting 2006 Tony Award-nominated play "Well" is currently being presented by Boston's Huntington Theatre — makes a valiant stab at stating the intent of her work before the show even begins. Kron steps center stage and asserts, "This play is not about my mother and me. We are in my parent's house and that is my mother there sleeping in that La-Z-Boy recliner — which is where she spends most of her time because she doesn't feel well enough to get up and do other things — but this is not about her, or about me and her."

That said, Kron — who reprises her Tony Award-nominated role in Boston — has clearly written an autobiographical piece about sickness, how family dynamics affect how we feel, and just what it takes to make us feel well. The play tracks Kron's own journey away from, and then back to, her family home in suburban Michigan. Kron's skills as a writer and actress have resulted — whether she will acknowledge it as her intent or not — in a warm, funny, highly relatable story of a mother and daughter relationship, with sidebars on sickness, health, and social activism.

"My mother is a fantastically energetic person trapped in an utterly exhausted body," Kron explains in the play. "It's very confusing. Her energy level has two settings: all or nothing. Most of the time it's nothing, but when she has a burst of energy it is awe-inspiring. For instance, when we were very young she decided she wanted me and my brother to be raised in a racially integrated neighborhood — and then she about creating one."

With the help of a very talented, versatile cast — including John McAdams, Colman Domingo, Donetta Lavinia Grays, Barbara Pitts, and the inimitable Mary Pat Gleason as the inimitable Ann Kron — Lisa Kron recreates her life to recall everything from the bully who haunted her in elementary school to kooky neighborhood gatherings planned by her mother to college-age time spent in a residential medical facility for the treatment of allergies. As Kron demonstrates, that period not only cured her and made her well, it also set her on a clear path to independence.

This path eventually leads her back to the Midwest and an adult relationship with her mother who may not want to be in a play, but is clearly the inspiration for her daughter's work.

The story is Lisa Kron's, but the stage often belongs to the actress playing her mother, a mildly meddling yet always well-meaning woman whose innate kindness extends to an entire theater audience whom she offers something to drink. Mary Pat Gleason is near perfect with flawless comedy timing and priceless expressions. Kron is Gleason's very capable acting partner and together the pair wend their way through the frustrations, misunderstandings and love that are so often found in the mother-daughter relationship.

Director Leigh Silverman, who has directed every production of "Well" from its world premiere at New York's Public Theatre to Broadway and beyond, once again masterfully moves his first-rate cast from the comfort of Mrs. Kron's Lansing living room through the myriad of places that Lisa visits in her life. Special kudos, too, to the legendary Tony Walton for his bright, clever and spot-on scenic design work. Where else would a Michigander like Mrs. Kron shop for groceries but Meijer?

The Huntington Theatre Company will present "Well" at the Boston University Theatre, 264 Huntington Avenue, Boston, through April 8. For tickets and information, visit the box office or call 617-266-0800, or go online at www.huntingtontheatre.org.

Freshman, Thomson Jaffe, 15, helps get the eight-inch sonotube ready for the 27-foot tall carbon dioxide cube students are making after school under the direction of physical science teacher, David Ames.

When it's hip to be square

Freshmen build cube to raise global warming awareness

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Global warming is a serious, worldwide problem. Cohasset High School students are working to create a visual statement that highlights the enormity of the problem — and how each person plays a role in the problem and, if willing, can be part of the solution.

Under the direction of ninth-grade physical science teacher, David Ames, a group of students are constructing a 27-square-foot cube. The cube will represent the volume of one metric ton of carbon dioxide. When complete the cube will stand 27 feet high — taller than the middle-high school — and represent one ton of carbon dioxide. This one ton in turn represents the amount of carbon dioxide one American emits into the atmosphere every two days. On average Americans are responsible for emitting 196 "cubes" or tons of carbon dioxide every year.

"The global warming issue is big and we're in complete denial," says freshman James Earle, "the point of this gigantic cube is it is so big but [it represents] just a small portion of the problem."

From statistics compiled by Inventory of U.S. Greenhouse Gas Emissions and Sinks: 1994-2004, the U.S. was responsible for 23 percent of the carbon dioxide emissions globally. The study concluded that 94 percent of the U.S. CO2 emissions were due to fuel combustion in 2004.

Election Saturday

Turnout could be historic low

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The polls will open at 8a.m. tomorrow, Saturday (April 7) and the candidates are ready to get your vote. Although this year is a stark contrast to previous years' campaign seasons, the town issues and the importance of each elected position have not diminished.

This election could be one of the lowest turnouts in history. It's the first election without any contests in 12 years. In 1995 a write-in campaign for a Board of Health seat helped bring in 18 percent of Cohasset voters. In 1993, there was a sole race for the Board of Library Trustees — that election brought out just 11 percent of voters.

Regardless of voter turnout, the candidates will be serving Cohasset residents for the next three years. The Mariner caught up with each of the candidates to discuss their "campaigns" and their perspectives on the issues they will need to grapple with in the next three years.

"It's been brutal, you wouldn't believe the amount of signs I've needed to put up!" kids Selectman Ralph Dormitzer when asked about his campaign. Dormitzer is up for re-election. He is in a two-way race with Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road for two seats. Selectman Rob Spofford is not seeking reelection.

Peter Richardsson of N. Main Street and School Committee Chairman Adrienne McCarthy, who is seeking a second term, are running for two seats. Member Jamie Williams is not seeking reelection.

Dormitzer will be at the polls shaking hands and kissing babies, so to speak,

Sewer costs are going up

Hearing on rates April 23

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The underground workings of the town need some serious work. Beneath the pristine streets and historic homes water and sewer both have extensive piping and infrastructure that is on the job 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Both water and sewer systems and treatment plants need upgrades. In that spirit the Water Commission got Town Meeting vote to increase water rates last Saturday. Now, the Sewer Commission is proposing a 12 to 14 percent increase in sewer rates.

A public hearing to explain the need for an increase and answer any resident questions will be held on April 23, 7p.m. in the Town Hall Auditorium.

The Sewer Commission, like the Water Commission, is an enterprise fund. An enterprise fund has a separate accounting mechanism that allows income and expenses to exist outside of the Town's normal taxing and budgeting process. Although the Water Commission decided to go in front of Town Meeting for approval of a rate increase, enterprise funds are not required to do so.

The Sewer system is divided into two sections — Central and North. Central

The new rates will likely take effect for the beginning of the third quarter on July 1st. The last increase in sewer rates was two years ago in 2005.

Cohasset's sewage is directed to the Waste Water Treatment Plant in Cohasset, approximately 1100 residences and businesses are in this area. North Cohasset, about 300 users, is directed to the treatment plant in Hull.

For Central district, the Sewer Commission is proposing an increase of 14 percent, from $7.70 to $8.80 per 100 cubic feet. An average user will see a quarterly bill increase of $25.

The North district is posed for an 11.6 percent increase from $7.70 to $8.60 per 100 cubic feet. The increase will translate to less than $25 quarterly for the average user.

The slightly higher increase for the Central district, according to Sewer

Some ripples over water rate hike

But TM voters give the go-ahead

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Water Commission articles, beginning with the water rate increase and restructuring, got conversation flowing last Saturday morning. After the fiscal year 2008 budget was certified, citizens didn't skip a beat jumping head first into a heated debate that ended up raising water rated 15 to 40 percent (depending on the water use).

POLICE BEAT

Arrests, motor vehicle stops, accident dominate week

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 50-year-old Cohasset man has been charged with operating under the influence of alcohol and possession of a small quantity of cocaine following a motor vehicle stop at about 10:21 p.m. on Monday (March 26). An officer in a marked cruiser was on patrol on 3A near Sohier Street when a black Mercedes exited the Stop & Shop lot at a high rate of speed and turned right onto 3A, Chief James Hussey said. The officer observed the car cross over the centerlines into the southbound lanes and travel on that side of the highway for about 30 feet. The Mercedes then made a quick turn onto Sohier Street.

The officer turned around to follow the vehicle, which then went up Sohier and turned into Fair Oaks Lane where it did a U-Turn and started to head back toward 3A turning into the Mobil station. The officer pulled in behind the vehicle and called for backup, Hussey said.

The officer went up to the vehicle and could smell alcohol on the operator's breath. Based on observations at the scene and observations of the driver's operation of the motor vehicle, the officer placed the driver under arrest for operating under the influence of alcohol. Further investigation uncovered a small quantity of cocaine. The operator was also charged with possession of a Class B substance (cocaine) and negligent operator of a motor vehicle.

OUI alcohol

A 41-year-old Cohasset woman was charged with operating under the influence of alcohol (second offense), following a traffic stop at 8:45 p.m. Tuesday (March 27). An officer in a marked cruiser traveling northbound on 3A observed a blue VW traveling in front of him near the 500 block of Chief Justice Cushing Highway. The officer saw the vehicle swerve from side to side, over to the fog line and back over the centerline on three occasions, Chief Hussey said.

After the vehicle made a left turn onto Sohier Street, the officer observed the VW crossing the fog line and nearly hitting a telephone pole. The officer activated the lights and pulled the car over near Fair Oaks Lane. While asking for the operator's license and registration, the officer could smell the odor of an alcoholic beverage; the woman's eyes were somewhat glassy and she had trouble speaking, Hussey said. Based on the officer's interaction with the operator and prior observations of her driving, the woman was placed under arrest. She was also charged with negligent operation and marked lanes violation.

Forged license

Police arrested a 24-year-old Abington man following a traffic stop at about 9:15 p.m. Thursday (March 29). The officer, who was on Route 3A, observed a brown Toyota that was heading northbound without a working rear license plate light. The officer got behind the vehicle, read the plate, and ran a registry check through the cruiser's mobile date terminal. The registry reported that the owner of the vehicle did not have a valid license. The officer pulled the vehicle over; the operator produced a Brazilian license that upon inspection was determined to have been altered. Based on that, the operator was placed in custody and arrested for forging the license. He was also charged with defective equipment (license plate light). The registered owner of the vehicle, who, as it turned out, was not the operator, is being summonsed to court for allowing an unlicensed person to operate his motor vehicle, Chief Hussey said.

MV crash

At 2:52 p.m., on Monday (March 26), dispatch received multiple 911 calls about an accident at Route 3A and Crocker Lane. Police said a 2002 Infiniti QX4 was traveling southbound on 3A toward Crocker Lane when a 2002 Subaru Legacy that was traveling in the opposite direction went into the path of the Infiniti as the Subaru tried to take a left into Crocker Lane. No one was transported but both vehicles had to be towed from the scene. The investigating officer, who completed a written report on the accident, gave the driver of the Subaru a verbal warning for failure to yield.

Marijuana arrest

Police stopped a car for speeding and further investigation revealed that the operator had a quantity of marijuana in a backpack in the car. The stop occurred at 8:18 p.m. Friday (March 30) after an officer had clocked a black Nissan as traveling 45 mph by the town common, which is a posted 25 mph zone. There were other occupants in the car and the officer had seen movement within the car before he approached it. He turned on his flashlight and when he looked inside he could smell what appeared to be marijuana; he saw the backpack that also smelled of marijuana. Based on these observations, the officer took custody of the backpack that was determined to contain several small plastic bags of marijuana. The operator was charged with possession of a Class D substance (marijuana) and with speeding.

Underage drinking

Police are investigating where a 16-year-old Cohasset resident may have been provided alcohol – enough that his mother sought medical attention. The mother initially called police about 1:13 a.m. on Sunday (April 1) because her son had not come home and she was worried about him. A short time later, she called to cancel because her son had come home but police responded to make sure everything was OK. Then at 3 a.m., the mother called police to have her son checked out; she said he had been drinking earlier and could not fall asleep. The ambulance went to the scene and evaluated the teen. The mother had heard reports that there was an underage party on Cedar Street but was unable to determine the location. Police will be talking to people in the area to see if they can determine which house and who may have been home when the teen consumed the alcohol.

Sidewalk gets green light

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Although they realize the plans are not perfect, a majority of Selectmen reached a consensus Monday that the Forest Avenue sidewalk/roadway project should proceed as designed.

The hearing on the subject drew a standing-room-only crowd in the Selectmen's office. Residents filled about 20 seats, stood along the back of the room, and jammed into the area near the door in an effort to hear a report from the "Greenbush guys" and what Selectmen had to say about the project.

The issue is seen as critical because Forest Avenue, which is not unlike a rollercoaster in terms of its topography, is seen as one of the most dangerous streets in town for pedestrians and cyclists. Many motorists also use Forest Avenue as a way to cut through town to Hull.

(The "Greenbush guys" – Mark Brennan and Tom Gruber – also help the town with non-train projects, such as the Forest Avenue sidewalk and the rebuilding of the harbor wall on Border Street.)

The entire cost of the project is estimated at $500,000, of which $200,000 is for the sidewalk portion. All funding is coming from Chapter 90 (state aid program for road improvements). The town has been accumulating the money for several years for this project, Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

The project involves improvements to the entire road, rebuilding the drainage structures, and extending the sidewalk from about 260 Forest Ave. to North Main Street. About 44 trees (including eight stumps) would have to be taken in the process.

Dick Avery of 22 Surry Drive, who had asked that the sidewalk plans be reexamined, praised selectmen for holding what he believed was the first hearing to get public input on how to make Forest Avenue safer for pedestrians, motorists and cyclists.

> "Get us our sidewalk, let us be a community and be able to take our kids and dogs for a walk."
> Ann Pompeo,
> 130 Forest Ave.

Avery raised similar objections to what he described as an "ill conceived and executed" design concept before the sections of the sidewalk coming up from the ocean toward Surrey Drive were installed several years ago.

Avery suggested the most practical, cheapest and ultimately the safest way to make the road safer would be to simply grade and pave the shoulders to a distance of four to six feet beyond the fog lines. Granite curbing should not even be considered, he said.

But members of the audience who spoke Monday were anxious to see the roadway improved and sidewalks with the granite curb installed. They said the granite curbing could act as a traffic calming measure by keeping motorists on the main thoroughfare.

That point was also raised in a letter to Selectmen from the Norfolk County Engineering Department. The letter stated: "raised curbing no matter how small has a calming effect on the motorist, thus reducing speed, while pavement widening has the reverse effect…"

Police Chief James Hussey stated in his letter to Selectmen on the subject, that sidewalk curbing gives a level of protection to the pedestrian/youth bicyclist when a vehicle may stray off the roadway. He also said sidewalk delineation helps keep pedestrians from straying out into the roadway. "We actually had an accident this past fall where a youth walking on Forest Avenue swayed into the roadway and was struck by a passing vehicle's mirror," he stated.

Ann Pompeo, 130 Forest Ave., said she has lived in town 60 years and this issue has been gone over time and time again. "We have discussed it, discussed it and discussed it," she said. "…Get us our sidewalk, let us be a community and be able to take our kids and dogs for a walk."

Selectmen Chairman Ralph Dormitzer agreed with Avery that the design of the sidewalk is not ideal. "If we could start from scratch, we would not do it this way," he said. "The first accident with a bike and we are going to regret this. We should not have a hard-edge curb in my view." Dormitzer said the town is solving one problem and creating another.

However, selectmen Ted Carr, Gary Vanderweil and Fred Koed said the project should get the green light.

Susan Spofford of Heather Drive, suggested "entry points" (mini ramps) be created at certain distances along the sidewalk so that cyclists or people with strollers could get on or off easily. Her idea was enthusiastically received.

Selectmen agreed traffic-calming measures along Forest Avenue need to be examined.

Ben Faulkner of 19 Heather Drive pointed out that motorists are going 40, 45 or 50 mph. "Only one in 10 goes 30," he said. (The speed limit on Forest Avenue is 30 mph).

Fire Chief Robert Silvia, who lives at 65 Forest Ave. and who was speaking as a resident, said he takes his life in his hands when he mows the edge of his lawn. He floated the idea of adding stop signs at Old Coach Road and Heather Drive.

Small crowd approves $3 million for sewer, drainage

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Little Harbor, Atlantic Avenue and Jerusalem Road sewer expansion and drainage improvement projects was awarded a total additional (and hefty) $3 million by Town Meeting on Saturday.

The joint project between the Sewer and Water Commissions will put 485 homes on to town sewer and install drainage improvements during the paving portion. Due to the large amount of money at stake both articles were discussed in great detail.

Sewer Commissioner John Beck presented the case for an additional $2 million in funds. The project was approved for $13.2 million at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, which took into account a 3.5 percent inflation rate and a 15 percent contingency monies.

Since that estimate, Beck said that energy costs, particularly oil, and an increased federal regulation on nitrogen in effluent requiring increased flow capability and filtering necessitate the additional allocation.

"If we don't have to spend it, we won't," said Beck. The $2 million will be used as contingency money if more unforeseen circumstances arise. At a previous town meeting voters declined a townwide 50/50 sharing of project's cost, so the entire cost of the project will be borne by the users.

Leonora Jenkins of Jerusalem Road, a prospective user, questioned the second reason behind the increase — the need for additional filtering mechanisms in the plant.

"I don't think our one area should be paying for all of the town to comply with the new regulation," she said.

Beck explained that he didn't know any other way to reassess the money at this time so all sewer users would share the burden.

Selectman Rob Spofford brought up concerns that this new $2 million in contingency money may still not be enough to finish the project. He said that the DEP permit required to move ahead with this project was not yet issued.

"I'm concerned that the DEP will come back and changes will need to be made to the project. The drawings are not 100 percent complete," he said, "I think you should make it three or four million dollars."

Beck disagreed with Spofford's suggestion, citing that if construction bids came back higher than expected that the Sewer Commission would re-evaluate the scope of the project. He indicated that the Sewer Commission has been in communication with the DEP and expect the permit to be issued shortly.

Several residents brought up concerns that the Sewer Treatment plant may not be ready to take on more users. They cited the infamous Mother's Day Storm when water levels were so high that sewage flowed into Jacob's Meadow.

Beck assured Town Meeting that a plant modification has since been implemented increasing the margin between average water flow and peak water flow. If there is a peak flow the modifications will send overflow into the harbor, not Jacob's Meadow and the overflow will be treated to be 100 percent compliant with the permit, said Dan Coughlin, project engineer.

Rick Swanborg of 48 Nichols Road impelled Town Meeting to vote for the article, whether or not they were going to be affected by new sewer hook-ups.

"There are environmental effects if we don't get hooked up to sewer and the fines will be paid by the taxpayer," he said, also noting that the cost to install a septic system would be even greater than the cost proposed per home by the Sewer Commission.

A vote was called and the motion was adopted by a two-thirds majority vote.

Article 26 - Drainage Improvements

Water Commission Chairman Glenn Pratt presented the merits of allocating $1 million to the Water Commission to improve drainage in the Little Harbor district. The project is one that is undefined in scope; the monies will be used as problems are uncovered during the massive Little Harbor sewer expansion project. Neither this fact nor the exclusion of other areas of town with drainage and flooding issues sat well with some citizens.

"In a very unique and unusual situation we have the opportunity to update water mains, repair culverts, and stormwater drainage. We have the ability to have [these items] fixed as we come across them. This is the last piece so we can do the job completely, thoroughly and at one time," he said.

Pratt indicated that by having the money available would keep the project moving and on time.

Karen Quigley of Clay Spring Road voiced concerns that this article was "the horse before the cart." She wanted assurance that these improvements would be low impact or zero impact techniques would be used.

"If we value, as a town, a salt water habitat we have to consider now not putting stormwater and fresh water into the harbor," she said, speaking as Chairman of the Harbor Health Committee. Dan Coughlin assured her that the project would fully comply with Massachusetts Stormwater regulations.

Ronnie McMorris of Doane Street was the first to propose an amendment to the article. She requested that language be added to the article to convey that the monies be equally allocated to address drainage and flooding issues in sewered and non-sewered areas of town.

Shortly after, Pam Miles of Linden Drive, who spoke in opposition of the appropriation, requested a quorum count. She indicated that the town debated an override of almost this amount last year and there should be the same amount of weight given to it.

The count came back to be 104 voters, 4 more than the required 100, and the meeting continued.

Tom Gruber of Pratt Court and Rick Flynn of Summer Street spoke against the amendment, pointing out that by dividing the money, the town loses the intent of efficiency by addressing both sewer and water problems at one time.

Selectmen Gary Vanderweil proposed to amend the amendment by limiting the allocation to $100,000 (instead of 50 percent) and changing the language to "other areas" instead of "non-sewered."

"I think we should look at flooding throughout town and this would still leave $900,000 for hard construction in Little Harbor," he said. McMorris agreed with Vanderweil's amendments and withdrew her own.

"I only wanted to draw attention that there are other areas of town with flooding issues," McMorris said.

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road thought she was asking a "dumb question," by her own admission, but in fact after review by Town Counsel she pointed out that the amendments to the articles were not within the scope of the article itself. The language of the article limits the scope to the Little Harbor district.

"We do not have the power to take the article out of that area of town," said Moderator Dan Evans and he ruled the amendment out of order. The article was now back to the drawing board.

Two other minor amendments were made to the article in the next few minutes. Selectman Ralph Dormitzer moved to strike wording that was not intended and Pratt indicated that streets were referred to incorrectly.

Tom Callahan of Hillside Drive brought up a concern that the whole town was responsible for these improvements while the outcome will only benefit one area.

Selectman Fred Koed said that drainage was a townwide issue and should be burdened by all.

Miles, before the vote was taken, urged the crowd to vote against the article.

"All of you who have had enough, I'd like to see that you've had enough," she said.

The motion was adopted after receiving the required two-thirds vote.

Plant upgrades are driving sewer rate hike

Commission Chairman Sean Cunning, is because the North district is not responsible for maintenance and upgrades to the Cohasset wastewater treatment plant. Cohasset Sewer pays a set rate to the Hull Sewer plant to treat North Cohasset's sewage.

The new rates will likely take effect for the beginning of the third quarter on July 1st. The last increase in sewer rates was two years ago in 2005.

The need for the increase is to subsidize plant upgrades. Sewer Commission Chairman Sean Cunning said that there is very little in depreciation funds in the sewer budget. This reserve fund is used for maintenance issues and necessary upgrades for the treatment plant. Currently, the Cohasset sewer treatment plant is just about breaking even, says Cunning.

He said that the age of the treatment plant coupled with the increased cost of utilities and operations have left the Sewer Department with little revenue to spare. More than $10,000 is spent in electricity alone every month. Not only is this depreciation fund used for maintenance, it is also used to respond in the event of an emergency.

"The longer we wait to increase depreciation funds, the harder it will be to build the amount back up," he said in an interview.

"We have to weigh financial responsibility not only to the ratepayers, but also to the non-user taxpayers who end up subsidizing the system if we don't charge enough," said Sewer Commissioner Ray Kasperowicz in an email.

"We have to make sure the plant is paying for itself," said Cunning.

Sewage billing is based off the water meter using the thought process of what goes in, must go out. However, if homes that have a large irrigation system Cunning suggests installing a second water meter.

"That water isn't going back into the sewer system" and residents may be able to save some money on their sewer bill, he said.

Residents are encouraged to bring their questions and concerns to the public hearing on April 23.

HAPPY EASTER

I want to wish everyone who celebrates Easter a wonderful holiday weekend and hope that time spent with family and friends is enjoyed by all. Reflect on all that is important to your daily lives and value every minute and the little, small things that happen each day along with the bigger ones. Life can change so quickly as we all know so taking the time to reflect.

OH BOY!

Oh my gosh, some fantastic news about a BIG and bouncing baby boy who has joined a wonderful family here in town. Shane Arthur (after Hap Pompeo) Mulcahy arrived on March 29, 2007 at 6:03pm and weighed in at a whopping 10 pounds and 6 ounces (oh my)! Shane joins his proud and happy big brother Bernie, who is 4 years old, and his mom, Kim, and Dad, Craig Mulcahy. AMERICAN GIRL

Congratulations to Sarah Gruber, a fourth grader at Deer Hill School. She was chosen from more than 600 girls to model in the first-ever American Girl Fashion Show and Tea held at the Imperial ballroom at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel this past weekend. Sarah portrayed Kirsten and participated in five shows on Saturday and Sunday. The event was a fundraiser for Boston's Freedom Trail Foundation and all five shows were completely sold out. She did a fantastic job!

TENNIS BENEFIT

Here is a very worthwhile event for all who are interested for this summer. Save the date for the annual Cohasset Tennis Tournament, a mixed-doubles tennis tradition that began in the 1950's and continues today to benefit Children's Hospital. This year's event kicks off on Friday, July 13th with the annual dinner auction at the Lightkeepers residence. The popular tennis tournament, which takes place on private courts throughout Cohasset, is set for the weekend of July 14th and 15th. This charity tennis tournament was originally started by Jesse Cox and her neighbors in the 1950's. It has since grown to include hundreds of players, from life-long Cohasset residents to newcomers. The tournament also brings together a wide array of tennis abilities, from those who dust off their rackets once a year to those who are passionate about the sport. In the past eight years alone, about $100,000 has been raised for Children's Hospital.

For more information about the tournament or to be added to the e-mail distribution list, please contact Corey Axelson at gallella63@hotmail.com.

DEAN'S LIST

Congratulations go to Zach Etkind, a freshman who was named to the dean's list at Tufts University for the fall semester. Zach, this is great news to hear and I know for a fact that your family is so proud of all your accomplishments. Keep up the hard work and I know we will hear more about your success.

THE KIDS SPEAK: WHY CAMP?

By Bette S. Bussel - Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

In major research on the impact of the camp experience on child development, confirmed camp's life-changing influence:

Can you think of things you learned and did at camp last summer that helped you in school this year?

- I was more confident, wanted to know everything, was excited to be in school and good grades in 7th grade (12 year old female).
- I learned mostly about how to get along with my peers but, also I learned to take on more responsibilities (13 year old male).
- My experience helped me look at challenging situations differently and instead of giving up, finding a way around them (14 year old female).
- Last summer I learned a lot about how to control my anger (13 year old female).
- I learned better sportsmanship and listening skills that helped me bring up my grades in behavior (11 year old male).
- I learned how to be on my own without someone with me all the time (12 year old male).
- I learned to have more patience and to appreciate the things I have (10 year old female)
- I feel that I am better at interacting with friends and family. The people skills learned at camp affected me dramatically when I went home (15 year old male).
- Leadership, organization, water-skiing, make my bed, keep my stuff clean, to keep in touch with my friends, respect, how to handle pressure (13 year old female) through photosynthesis can't keep up with this emissions rate. The amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere is rapidly increasing and this will have climate consequences for the entire world.

Freshmen build cube to raise global warming awareness

Ames got the idea from his involvement with the organization Sustainable Cohasset. The group meets monthly to promote awareness of the global warming problem. At one of the meetings member Jim Shipsky said, "a ton of carbon dioxide is the size of a 27 foot cube." And the idea was born.

"No one knows what a ton of CO2 looks like, and I thought that if people could see it them it might help visualize the issue," says Ames, who then started mentioning it to his students back in December.

"The kids got excited, they were already aware of the warning signs [of global warming]," warning signs, according to stopglobalwarming.org, include warmer temperatures worldwide and extreme weather events. Ames initially got a group together to make a scaled down version of the "cube" using straws. The structure was four square feet.

The group started thinking bigger and began to brainstorm about the best materials and method to build a 27-square-foot structure.

PVC piping was initially thought of as the ideal material to construct the sides of the cube. But the group found out that PVC is a part of the global warming problem — it is toxic to manufacture and to dispose.

Shipsky, architect consultant, introduced "sonotube" to Ames. The hard but lightweight cardboard tubing comes in lengths 12 feet long and approximately eight inches in diameter. The tubes are designed to nest into each other for more cost effective shipping, three in one tube. This industry trick also benefited the project because three pieces of tubing need to be used to create the 27-foot sides. The sonotubes,, along with the other materials used, are recyclable.

The group began construction of the cube on March 4. They will need to create 12 sides for the cube, eight horizontal and four vertical, each 27-feet long. One side needs three pieces of sonotube and they are bolted together. Inch wide pieces of wood are nailed to the tube to ensure a snug fit and prevent wobbling of the structure.

The cube will represent the volume of one metric ton of carbon dioxide.

Four bases were constructed from wood in the high school wood shop. Each piece of the cube has been specially designed using the students' scientific knowledge and a bit of trial and error.

The cube will have a sophisticated series of eight pulley systems to raise the top horizontal sides into place — 27 feet above the ground. A "wooden cap" placed on top of each of the vertical sides will have a snug fit for the sonotube to prevent those pieces from swaying in the wind, Ames says.

Tension cables will criss-cross from the wooden cap to the opposite side's base to will stabilize the structure. The end look will have an "X" on each open side of the cube.

The group was able to raise one side of the cube two weeks ago.

"It was so big!" they said.

The students stood on the bleachers and attest that the structure was taller than the school. The dedicated group has met once or twice a week for the last month to put this project together. They are aiming to have it complete for an unveiling on Earth Day, April 22.

"It's brought to our attention the enormity of the problem," says freshman Betsy Crawford. The enthusiastic group is having t-shirts made up with the name "The CO2 Cube Crew."

Once the structure is complete, they plan to develop instructions on how to make a cube, so other schools can make the same statement. They said that if they could get 195 other schools to create a CO2 cube like theirs it would represent the amount of carbon dioxide emitted by one American in one year.

In the short term, Ames plans to loan out the structure (which can be transported in two pick-up truck and assembled by 8 volunteers) to towns or organizations that have events to raise awareness of global warming or environmental issues.

"It's going to make quite a statement," he says.

To help with the material costs of the project, the CO2 Cube Crew is seeking sponsors at $10 per linear foot. There are 324 feet available. Every sponsor will be acknowledged wherever the cube is displayed.

Students involved in the cube project are Tori Lehr, Megan Richardson, Betsy Crawford, Allie Leger, James Earle, Thomson Jaffe, Kelsea Hindley, Melissa Campedelli, Maddy Altholtz, Abby Perkinson, Terry MacCormack, and Charlotte Malone.

Contact David Ames to sponsor, volunteer or just to find out more information on this project, dames@cohassetk12.org or call the High School at 781-383-6100.

Ways Cohasset can help fight global warming

These ideas were brainstormed by the high school students.

- Buy compact florescent lights (Lowers light bill and lasts up to seven years)
- Recycle paper, plastic, cardboard, glass, metal etc. at Transfer Station
- Walk or bike, instead of driving (If you have to drive, don't leave car idling)
- Buy renewable clean energy from National Grid
- Buy a fuel efficient vehicle, or better yet, a hybrid
- Invest in alternative energy sources, ex.solar, wind
- Watch the film, "An Inconvenient Truth"
- Influence politicians to make the environment a priority

Town Moderator Dan Evans presides over the day's events. The annual Town Meeting was held in the Sullivan Gymnasium at Cohasset Middle-High School on Saturday.

No-override budget still creates some waves

School 'miracle' challenged and addressed

"$1.8 million in offsets — that's the miracle, it's not through the public funding process."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Despite a balanced budget, with no override, put forth by Town Manager, there was ample discussion and some dissatisfaction with the numbers at Saturday's Town Meeting. The town's operating budget was presented as $35,340,212 and almost 39 percent of the budget was for schools ($13,686,400).

Town Manager Bill Griffin presented the budget along with a PowerPoint slides that highlighted important budget points and positive fiscal improvements.

State aid will be $2,858,776, an increase of $146,697 over last year. The budget is currently under review by the House, Senate and Conference Committee. Griffin said after the budget is finalized he "hopes it will be a better [number]." New growth in the town will bring in close to $500,000 more tax revenue and there was only a slight increase in excluded debt service.

The level services budget, Griffin said, is "building upon some of the advances we've made over the last few years." His announcement of reduced use of reserves to balance budget got applause from voters.

He continued that a state allotment for the new school buildings would subsidize the budget by $110,000. He listed grants for the seawall re-construction; village revitalization and the transit-oriented district (TOD) will give Cohasset new assets without direct cost to taxpayers.

The Selectmen and the Advisory Committee had majority votes to recommend this budget.

"There are no frills in this budget," said Advisory Committee Chairman Merle Brown.

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Denise Walsh and School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy spoke next, stressing that the level services budget included all improvements made in fiscal year 2007. However, Walsh said that $13.6 million budget was "not the total we need to run district."

Almost $2 million will come from offsets driven from fees, grants, booster clubs, full-day kindergarten tuition and other sources, which both said was of concern. The offset budget has increased 8 percent in just two years, Walsh said.

"But this budget will allow us to move forward, albeit at a slower place," said Walsh.

An Advisory Committee minority report (the majority vote was 7-2) from Tucker Glavin raised questions as to whether this level-services budget was striving for excellence or maintaining average services. Glavin argued that this budget failed to prioritize town needs and departments.

"When we discuss priority budgeting we are speaking about deciding as a town if we are spending enough or too much on the big ticket departments," Glavin said.

He said that the maintenance fund, the Excellence of Schools program and the capital depreciation fund were not getting the funding they need.
